MISS FOSTER DIES

MISS CLIFFIE FOSTER DIES AT WILLIAMSON FAULK INFIRMARY.

The friends of Miss Cliffie Foster were shocked to learn of her death, which occurred at the Williamson Faulk Infirmary Saturday morning at 3 o'clock. She was the third daughter of Mr. Guy Foster, one of Tuscaloosa's most prominent citizens, and was a girl of unusual mental ability. She graduated at the age of seventeen at the Central College and has been teaching with great success in the public schools since. The past session she held a responsible position in the faculty of the Wetumpka public school and for some time she had engaged in literary work and a number of splendid articles have appeared recently in magazines as the reward of her fertile brain and brilliancy.

Miss Foster was just 20 years of age and underwent a slight operation a week ago and was considered out of danger when lockjaw developed and her death comes as a distinct shock to her multitude of friends and relatives.

The funeral was held Sunday morning from the residence on Greensboro Avenue, Dr. L. O. Dawson officiating; interment took place at Greenwood cemetery.—(Birmingham Age Hearald.)

It is with distinct regret to the many friends of Miss Foster to hear of her untimely death.

Miss Foster will be pleasantly remembered here as the charming and much admired guest of Miss Lurline Harper, and was one, of the bridesmaids at the Johnson-Harper wedding last December.

Perhaps no more popular young lady ever graced Clanton's visiting list, and her many friends here deeply sympathize with her family in their sad bereavement.

Up to time we go to press nothing definite has been done in the Baltimore convention, tho' it is expected that a nomination will be made during the day. Contrary to the usual rule nominations are to be made before the platform is adopted. The unit rule has been abrogated, which will doubtless change the votes of a number of delegates.

Is Clanton to make no effort whatever to secure the building of the railroad from the Coosa river to some point on the L. & N? It can be secured for Clanton if action is taken—but if we act as we have in other things (in a vast majority of things) it will go to our more enterprising neighbor, LOMAX.

It is stated upon what seems to be good authority that Teddy, he of the bandanna, has offered the vice-presidency to John Mitchell of the mine workers' union. Teddy's a schemer for getting votes, but he'll scarcely pull the wool over J. Mitchell's eyes.

Mr. W. E. Maddox received a telegram Wednesday night informing him that his brother-in-law, Mr. H. M. Willis, of Guntown, Miss., had been killed during the day by lightning.

DR. SIMMONS Squaw Vine Wine

A Palatable Medicine especially prepared to relieve and cure the diseases which affect women

This excellent medicine is not only successful in conquering the painful and prostrating diseases that attack the female generative system but it is exceptionally pleasant to take. The usual rule that the nastier the medicine the more effective it is, is reversed in the case of Squaw Vine Wine. It is one of the pleasantest of medicines. The fresh juice of a well ripened sweet orange is not more agreeable. It is indeed a happy combination of sweet herbs compounded with just enough spirits to keep it fresh and active in its medicinal effect. Poor, tired mothers, worn out with the cares of a family and household, and suffering from those distressing aches, bearing down pains and nervousness which women only know, revive wonderfully under its strengthening and exhilirating influence. It eases pain, strengthens weakened parts, corrects irregularities, builds up a strong, vigorous body, restores brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks.

SOME INTERESTING HISTORY

During this season of political turmoil, dissention and dissatisfaction it will not, perhaps be inopportune, and not uninteresting reading, to review the early history of political parties.

The general impression seems to prevail that when the first president was elected the office was given to him without opposition.

True, he was rated as the "father of his country" and the one who delivered the orginal colonies from the hands of George III, but nevertheless when it came to placing him at the head of the government there were twelve others who felt fully capacitated to rule the destinies of the new born republic. There were 138 votes in the electoral college on the occasion of the first presidential election of which George Washington received 69—just exactly half. Mr. Adams of Massachusetts received 34 and the fifteen other candidates received no more than a vote of 6.

The official records do not say that Mr. Washington received a "majority" of the votes cast, but on the contrary "it appeared that Geo. Washington, Esq. was elected president and John Adams, vice-president."

From this record it would appear that it did not require a majority of the votes cast; it also appears that the next highest candidate was accorded the vice-presidency.

The following election eventuated in exactly the same manner; Washington received 132 votes while the combined opposition received the same number.

In the second election there were fifteen states voting—five more than at the first election.

The same result was obtained as in the first election—Washington and Adams. In this election there were but five candidates for president. In 1796 there were thirteen candidates and 276 electoral votes.

Washington had refused a third term and thereby fixed a rule which has not, for more than a hundred years, been violated, tho' Grant and Roosevelt have both attempted to have it set aside.

In 1800 there were sixteen states entitled to participate in the Presidential election; there were 276 electoral votes. Of this number Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr each received 73 and John Adams received 65. The number of votes in the electoral college being just half of the number of delegates (138) and Jefferson and Burr each receiving an equal number of the votes, the decision as to who should be President was left with the House of Representatives, which cast its vote in favor of Jefferson—he having carried ten out of sixteen states.

In 1804 Jefferson was again elected, It appears this is the first time in the history of political parties when a candidate for Vice President was nominated. On this occasion Jefferson and Clinton received 162 votes as against 14 votes for Pinckney and King. Here also was established the rule under which it required a majority of the electoral college to make a decision.

In the election of 1804 there were seventeen states voting and an equal number took part in the election of 1808, when James Madison, the second Democratic President, was chosen. Kentucky had lost one vote in the electoral college, there being but 175 votes in the college of 1808. Three candidates for President presented themselves and five candidates for Vice President—one of whom (Geo. Clinton) ran for both offices.

James Madison received 123 votes as against 47 for his nearest opponent (Pinckney) while Clinton received 113 votes for Vice President as against 47 for Rufus King, his nearest opponent. Clinton had received but 6 votes for President, whereas he received 113 for Vice President.

In 1812 Louisiana came in as a sovereign state with three votes; the college then had 217 votes and Madison with Eldridge Gerry, was again elected. This was over Dewitt, Clinton and Jared Ingersoll.

In 1816 Madison was elected over Rufus King, there being five candidates for vice-president. During this year Indiana with three votes was admitted; Delaware had lost one vote and Maryland three, Ohio had gained one vote which with Indiana's three made the electoral college the same as in 1812. James Monroe (the third Democratic president) was elected over Rufus King by a vote of 183 to 34, there being five candidates for vice-president.

In 1820 five candidates were [illegible] Illinois, Maine, Mississippi and Missouri) with twenty votes. Massachusetts had lost seven votes, Pennsylvania and Tennessee one vote each; Delaware had gained one and Maryland three, making 232 votes in the electoral college. Of this number James Monroe received 231 and Jno. Quincy Adams one. Again there were five candidates for vice-president.

In 1824 the electoral vote had increased to 261; there were four candidates for president and six for vice-president. J. Q. Adams received 84, Crawford 41, Jackson 99 and Clay 37 for president. There was no choice and the House was again called upon to make the decision. In this case, strange to say, two of the candidates for president received no vote whatever for the office, tho' an outsider (Jefferson) received seven, the vote being Adams 13 states, Jefferson seven and Crawford four.

In 1828 Andrew Jackson received 178 votes as against 83 for Adams, there being three candidates for vice-president

In 1836 Arkansas and Michigan were admitted, each having three votes and Maryland had gained two votes, making 294. Of this number VanBuren received 170, Webster 14, Harrison 73, Mangum 11 and White 26. Tho' there were five candidates for president there were but four for vice-president.

In 1840 with the same vote as in 1836 Harrison received 234 against 60 for VanBuren. There were four vice-presidential candidates. Here was the first time a vice-president had succeeded to the presidency by reason of death or other causes. Harrison died and Jno. Tyler of Virginia, the vice-president, succeeded him in office; so unpopular did he become during his term of office that he was not even mentioned as a possibility in 1844. The college was reduced in 1844 so that there were but 275 votes all told, of which Polk received 170 against 105 for Clay. It was at this time that party lines were closely drawn and no candidate for vice-president was recognized unless nominated by a regular convention with a presidential running mate.

In 1848 Florida, Iowa, Texas and Wisconsin with fifteen votes were admitted. Taylor received 163 against 127 for Cass; Taylor died in office and was succeeded by Fillmore.

In 1852 California was admitted with four votes; Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York and North and South Carolina and Tennessee each lost one vote, Virginia losing two—a total of nine votes lost; Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Indiana, Arkansas, Michigan and Wisconsin each gaining one vote and Illinois and Missouri each gaining two votes, a gain of eleven or a net gain of two, which with California's four gave 296 in the electoral college. Of this number Pierce received 254 as against 42 for for Scott. It was in this election that Alabama first presented a candidate in the person of William R. King of Dallas county. King took the oath of office in Cuba, whither he had gone in search of health, but never acted as vice-president, having died while Congress was not in session.

In 1856 there were three candidates; Buchanan received 174, Fremont 114, and Fillmore 8.

In 1860 Minnesota and Oregon were admitted with seven votes. This was the year of the great struggle between the north and south. Lincoln received 180 votes, Breckenridge (the South's candidate) 72, Douglas 12 and Bell 39 (Being a Southern man, but opposed to the regular southern democrat, being a "Union-saver" [illegible]

In 1864 (the days of carpet-bag days, Scallawag days, negro rule days,) Kansas, Nevada and West Virginia were admitted with ten votes. All the Southern states were debarred from participating (the negro being in power in the South and the old soldiers being looked upon as traitors to the government.) There were 233 votes in the college. Lincoln received 212 against 21 for McClellan of New York.

Tho' Andrew Johnson was a Tennesseean, his state debarred from voting, he was elected vice-president and succeeded Lincoln when the latter was assassinated by Booth.

In 1868 Nebraska (Bryan's state) was admitted with three votes; the south was again permitted to vote, tho' the negro, the scallawag and the carpet-bagger were still upon the throne.

The vote of Nebraska with the readmitted southern states carried the college up to 294 votes of which Grant received 214 as against 80 for Seymour. This was the beginning of Grant's political ambition; having been the commanding general against the south in its struggle against oppression and wrong he sought, in after years, to break the rule established by Washington limiting the tenure in office to two terms. Virginia did not participate in the election of 1868.

It was during these years that "blue coats" with fixed bayonets were stationed in the south, when court officials were turned out of office because they would not permit negroes to sit upon juries to try white men. It was in these days that white women of the South were insulted by imported soldiers and when the "black lady" was exalted above her former mistress. (It would be well for Chilton county youths to get out their old histories and study closely some of the happenings in these eventful years; its enough to turn the stomach of any self-respecting southerner and to make heart sick any white man whose blood contains even a tinge of the Huguenot or Cavalier virus.

Study it well; remembering that it was your mothers and fathers, your older sisters and brothers who had to bear the insults of northern hired soldiers and that it was the era in which negro domination was rampant in the south; a time when, with court officials made up of carpet-baggers and negroes, the resources of the south, already poverty stricken, were given to railroads and other northern enterprises in return for graft of the blackest kind.

1872 the same thing continued, the blue coats still remaining in the south and exercising despotic sway over the white men and women of our God blessed land. Grant received 286 votes, Brown 18, Hendricks 42, Jenkins 2 and David Davis 1.

Colorado came next into the college with three votes. This (1876) was the year of the "great steal"—the time when a commission selected because of their known ability and willingness to steal took enough solidly democratic votes from the south, cast for Tilden, and giving them to Hayes elected him to office by a vote of 185 to 184. The older men of the country will recall the famous cry of "Twenty-seven" in connection with that great fraud perpetrated upon the bleeding south. It was at this time that Henry Watterson, the gifted editor of the Courier Journal, wrote:

It is a sin
To steal a pin,
But he is great
Who steals a state.

Referring to the steal made by Senator Edmondson and his commission in defrauding the legally elected democrat (Tilden) out of office and enthroning the weakling Hayes.

But, Hayes proved a friend to the South; it was he who ordered the removal of the Federal soldiers from the South—and for this forever blessed be his name, even tho' in all other respects he was a disappointment.

So great a disappointment in fact that his name was not presented to the subsequent convention for nomination.

In 1880 Garfield was elected over Hancock by a vote of 214 to 155; he was assassinated by Giteau and was succeeded by Chester A. Arthur, vice-president under Garfield.

In 1884 the democracy came into its own again when Cleveland was elected over Blaine by a vote of 219 to 182.

The next election reversed things and Harrison defeated Cleveland by a vote of 233 to 168.

In 1892, Cleveland reversed the cards on Harrison and was elected by a vote of 277 to 145. At this election there were three candidates in the field—Weaver being the third.

In 1896 McKinley defeated the 'peerless one" by almost a hundred votes, receiving 271 to Bryan's 176. On this occasion Bryan received the solid vote of the South tho' he has not since then failed to abuse, malign and traduce the section which gave him his most loyal support.

In 1900 Bryan suffered his most disgraceful defeat, McKinley worsting him by a vote of 292 to 155. Again a vice-president succeeded to the presidency in the person of

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transform brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid.

CHAPTER XIV. (Continued).

Having little else to do, she studied the man, and she studied him with a warm desire and an enthusiastic predisposition to find the best in him. She would not have been a human girl if she had not been thrilled to the very heart of her by what the man had done for her. She recognized that whether he asserted it or not, he had established an everlasting and indisputable claim upon her.

The circumstances of their first meeting, which as the days passed did not seem quite so horrible to her, and yet a thought of which would bring the blood to her cheek still on the instant, had in some way turned her over to him. His consideration of her, his gracious tenderness toward her, his absolute abnegation, his evident overwhelming desire to please her, to make the anomalous situation in which they stood to each other bearable in spite of their lonely and unobserved intimacy, by an absolute lack of presumption on his part—all those things touched her profoundly.

Although she did not recognize the fact then perhaps, she loved him from the moment her eyes had opened in the mist and rain after that awful battle in the torrent to see him bending over her.

No sight that had ever met Enid Maitland's eyes was so glorious, so awe inspiring, so uplifting and magnificent as the view from the verge of the cliff in the sunlight of some bright winter morning. Few women had ever enjoyed such privileges as hers. She did not know whether she liked the winter crowned range best that way, or whether she preferred the snowy world, glittering cold in the moonlight; or even whether it was more attractive when it was dark and the peaks and drifts were only lighted by the stars which shone never so brightly as just above her head.

When he allowed her she loved to stand sometimes in the full fury of the gale with the wind shrieking and sobbing like lost souls in some icy inferno through the hills and over the pines, the snow beating upon her, the sleet cutting her face if she dared to turn toward the storm. Generally he left her alone in the quieter moments, but in the tempest he stood watchful, on guard by her side, buttressing her, protecting her, sheltering her. Indeed his presence then was necessary, without him she could scarce have maintained a footing. The force of the wind might have hurled her down the mountain but for his strong arm. When the cold grew too great he led her back carefully to the hut and the warm fire.

Ah, yes, life and the world were both beautiful to her then, in night, in day, by sunlight, by moonlight, in calm and storm. Yet it made no difference what was spread before the woman's eyes, what glorious picture was exhibited to her gaze, she could not look at it more than a moment without thinking of the man. With the most fascinating panorama that the earth's surface could spread before human vision to engage her attention, she looked into her own heart and saw there this man!

Oh, she had fought against it at first, but lately she had luxuriated in it. She loved him, she loved him! And why not? What is it that women love in men! Strength of body? She could remember yet how he had carried her over the mountains in the midst of the storm, how she had been so bravely upborne by his arms to his heart. She realized later what a task that had been, what a feat of strength. The uprooting of that sapling and the overturning of that huge Grizzly were child's play to the long portage up the almost impassable canon and mountain side which had brought her to this dear haven.

Was it strength of character she sought, resolution, determination? This man had deliberately withdrawn from the world, buried himself in this mountain, and had stayed there deaf to the alluring call of man or woman; he had had the courage to do that.

Was it strength of mind she admired? Enid Maitland was no mean judge of the mental powers of her acquaintance. She was just as full of life and spirit and the joy of them as any young woman should be, but she had not been trained by and thrown with the best for nothing. Noblesse oblige! That his was a mind well stored with knowledge of the most, varied sort she easily and at once perceived. Of course the popular books of the last five years had passed him by, and of such he knew nothing, but he could talk intelligently, interestingly, entertainingly upon the great classics. Keats and Shakespeare were his most thumbed volumes. He had graduated from Harvard as a civil engineer with the highest honors of his class and school and the youngest man to get his sheepskin! Enid Maitland herself was a woman of broad culture and wide reading and she deliberately set herself to fathom this man's capabilities. Not infrequently, much to her surprise, sometimes to her dismay, but generally to her satisfaction, she found that she had no plummet with which to sound his greater depths.

Did she seek in him that fine flower of good breeding, gentleness and consideration? Where could she find these qualities better displayed? She was absolutely alone with this man, entirely in his power, shut off from the world and its interference as effectually as if they had both been abandoned in an ice floe at the North Pole or cast away on some lonely island in the South Seas, yet she felt as safe as if she had been in her own house, or her uncle's, with every protection that human power could give. He had never presumed upon the situation in the least degree, he never once referred to the circumstances of their meeting in the remotest way, he never even discussed her rescue from the flood, he never told her how he had borne her through the rain to its crown of sunny hair rising above the rushing water. He had listened to the roar of the wind through the long nights, when she thought him asleep if she thought of him at all, and heard again the scream of the storm that had brought her to his arms. No snow drop that touched his cheek when he was abroad but reminded him of that night in the cold rain when he had held her close and carried her on. He could not sit and mend her boot without remembering that white foot before which he would fain have prostrated himself and upon which he would have pressed passionate kisses if he had given way to his desires. But he kept all these things in his heart, pondered them and made no sign.

Did she ask beauty in her lover? Ah, there at last he failed. According to the canons of perfection he did not measure up to the standard. His features were irregular, his chin a trifle too square, his mouth a thought too firm, his brow wrinkled a little; but he was good to look at for he looked strong, he looked clean and he looked true. There was about him, too, that stamp of practical efficiency that men who can do things always have. You looked at him and you felt sure that what he undertook that he would accomplish, that decision and capability were incarnate in him.

But after all the things are said love goes where it is sent, and I, at least, am not the sender. This woman loved this man neither because nor in spite of these qualities. That they were might account for her affection, but if they had not been, it may be that that affection, that that passion, would have inhabitated her heart still. No one can say, no one can tell how or why those things are. She had loved him while she raged against him and hated him. She did neither the one nor the other of those two last things, now, and she loved him the more.

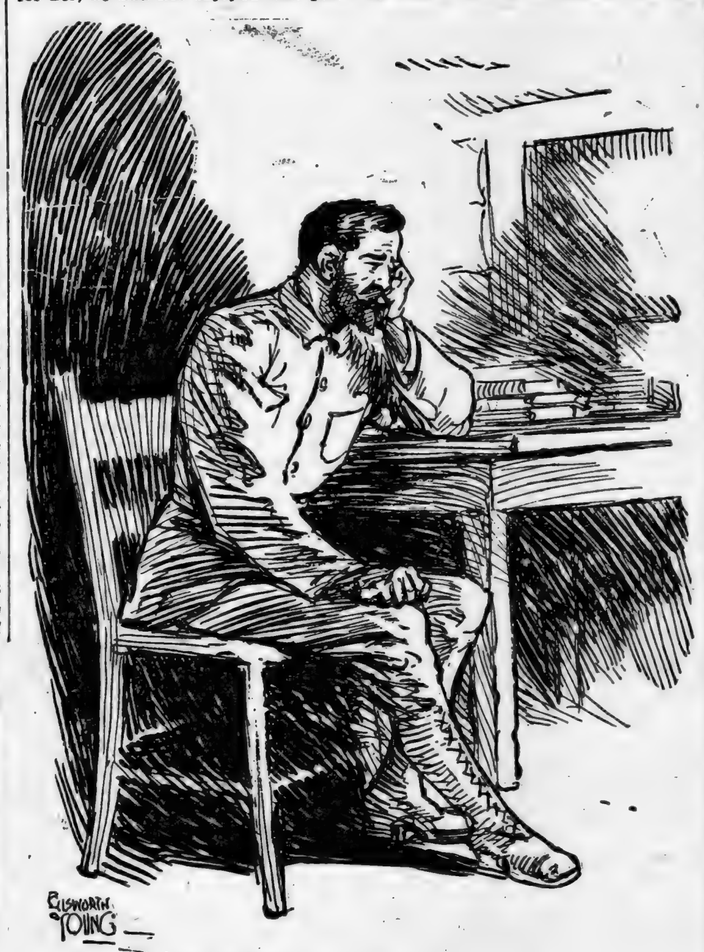
the lonely shelter of the hills, and in no way did he say anything that the most keenly scrutinizing mind would torture into an allusion to the pool and the bear and the woman. The fineness of his breeding was never so well exhibited as in this reticence. More often than not it is what he does not rather than what he does that indicates the man.



It would be folly to deny that he never thought of these things. Had he forgotten them there would be no merit in his silence; but to remember them and to keep still—aye, that showed the man! He would close his eyes in that little room on the other side of the door and see again the dark pool, the white, resplendent, the graceful form, the loyal face, with its crown of sunny hair rising above the rushing water. He had listened to the roar of the wind through the long nights, when she thought him asleep if she thought of him at all, and heard again the scream of the storm that had brought her to his arms. No snow drop that touched his cheek when he was abroad but reminded him of that night in the cold rain when he had held her close and carried her on. She did neither the one nor the other of those two last things, now, and she loved him the more.

Mystery is a great mover; there is nothing so attractive as a problem we cannot solve. The very situation of she said in her heart—and I am not one to dispute her conclusions—that she would have loved him had he been one among millions to stand before her, and it was true. He was the complement of her nature. They differed in temperament as much as in complexion, and yet in those differences as must always be to make perfect love and perfect union, there were striking resemblances, necessary points of contact.

There was no reason whatever why Enid Maitland should not love this man. The only possible check upon her feelings would have been her rather anomalous relation to Armstrong, but she reflected that she had promised him definitely nothing. When she had met him she had been heart whole, he had made some impression upon her fancy and might have made more with greater opportunity, but unfortunately for him, luckily for her, he had not enjoyed that privilege. She scarcely thought of him longer.

The Dark Face of His Wife Rose Before Him.

She would not have been human if her mind had not dwelt upon the world beyond the sky-line on the other side of the range. She knew how those who loved her must be suffering on account of her disappearance, but knowing herself safe and realizing that within a short time, when the spring came again, she would go back to them and that their mourning would be turned into joy by her arrival, she could not concern herself very greatly over their present feelings and emotions; and besides, what would be the use of worrying over those things? There was metal more attractive for her, thoughts close at hand. And she was too blissfully happy to entertain for more than a moment any sorrow.

She pictured often her return and never by any chance did she think of going back to civilization alone. The man she loved would be by her side, the church's blessing would make them one. To do her justice, in the simplicity and purity of her thoughts she never once thought of what the world might say about that long winter sojourn alone with this man. She was so conscious of her own innocence and of his delicate forbearance, she never once thought how humanity would raise its eyes and fairly cry upon her from the house tops. She did not realize that were she ever so pure and so innocent she could not now or ever reach the high position which Caesar, who was none too reputable himself, would fain have his wife enjoy!

CHAPTER XV.

The Man's Heart.

Now, love produces both happiness and unhappiness, but on the whole I think the happiness predominates, for love itself if it be true and high is its own reward. Love may feel itself unworthy and may distrust even from the unlikeliness of the place into which it has fallen—yet it lives in its own atmosphere of exaltation in the very [illegible] passion for her. They are not necessary, they are all supererogatory, idle words. To him also love had been born in an hour. It had flashed into existence as if from the fiat of the Divine.

Oh, he had fought against it. Like the cremites of old he had been scourged into the desert by remorse and another passion, but time had done its work. The woman he first loved had ministered not to the spiritual side of the man, or if she had so ministered in any degree it was because he had looked at her with a glamour of inexperience and youth. During those five years of solitude, of study and of reflection, the truth had gradually unrolled itself before him. Conclusions vastly at variance with what he had ever believed possible as to the woman upon whom he had first bestowed his heart, had got into his being and were in solution there; this present woman was the precipitant which brought them to life. He knew now what the old appeal of his wife had been. He knew now what the new appeal of this woman was.

In humanity two things in life are inextricably intermingled, body and soul. Where the function of one begins and the function of the other ends no one is able to say. In all human passions are admixtures of the earth earthy. We are born the sons of old Adam as we are reborn the sons of the New. Passions are complex. As in harvest wheat and tares grow together until the end, so in love earth and heaven mingle ever. He remembered a clause from an ancient marriage service he had read. "With my body I thee worship," and with every fibre of his physical being, he loved this woman.

It would be idle to deny that, impossible to disguise the facts, but in the melting pot of passion the preponderant ingredient was mental and spiritual; and just because higher and holier things predominated, he held her in his heart a sacred thing. Love is like a rose: the material part is the beautiful blossom; the spiritual factor is the fragrance which abides in the rose [illegible] after every leaf has fallen away, or which may be expressed from the soft petals by the hard circumstances of pain and sorrow until there is left nothing but the lingering perfume of the flower.

His body trembled if she laid a hand upon him, his soul thirsted for her; present or absent he conjured before his tortured brain the sweetness that inhabited her breast. He had been clearsighted enough in analyzing the past, he was neither clearsighted nor coherent in thinking of the present. He worshiped her, he could have thrown himself upon his knees to her; if it would have added to her happiness, she could have killed him, smiling at her. Rode she in the Juggernaut car of the ancient idol, with his body, would he have unhesitatingly paved the way and have been glad of the privilege. He longed to compass her with sweet observances. The world revenged itself upon him for his long neglect, it had summed up in this one woman all its charm, its beauty, its romance, and had thrust her into his very arms. His was one of those great passions which illuminate the records of the past. Paolo had not loved Francesca more.

Oh, yes, the woman knew he loved her. It was not in the power of mortal man no matter how iron his restraint, how absolute the imposition of his will, to keep his heart hidden, his passion undisclosed. No one could keep such things secret, his love for her cried aloud in a thousand ways, even his look when he dared to turn his eyes upon her was eloquent of his feeling. He never said a word, however, he held his lips at least fettered and bound for he believed that honor and its obligations weighed down the balance upon the contrary side to which his inclinations lay.

He was not worthy of this woman. In the first place all he had to offer her was a blood stained hand. That might have been overcome in his mind; but pride in his self punishment, his resolution to withdraw himself from man and woman until such time as God completed his expiation and signified his acceptance of the penitent by taking away his life, held him inexorably.

The dark face of his wife rose before him. He forced himself to think upon her, she had loved him, she had given him all that she could. He remembered how she had pleaded with him that he take her on that last and most dangerous of journeys; her devotion to him had been so great she could not let him go out of her sight a moment, he thought fatuously! And he killed her. In the queer turmoil of his brain he blessed himself for everything. He could not be false to his purpose, false to her memory, unworthy of the passion in which he believed she had held him and which he believed he had inspired.

If he had gone out in the world, after her death he might have forgotten most of these things, he might have lived them down. Saner clearer views would have come to him. His morbid self reproach and self consciousness would have been changed. But he had lived with them alone for five years and now there was no putting them aside. Honor and pride, the only things that may successfully fight against love, overcome him. He could not give way. He wanted to, every time he was in her presence he longed to sweep her to his heart and crush her in his arms and bend her head back and press lips of fire on her lips.

But honor and pride, held him back. How long would they continue to exercise dominion over him? Would the time come when his passion rising like a sea would thunder upon these artificial embankments of his soul, beat them down and sweep them away?

At first the disparity between their situations, not so much upon account of family or of property—the treasures of the mountains, hidden since creation he had discovered and let them—but because of the youth and position of the woman compared to his own maturer years, his desperate experience, and his social withdrawal had reinforced his determination to live and love without a sign. But he had long since got beyond this. Had he been free he would have taken her like a viking of old, if he had to pluck her from amid a thousand swords and carry her to a beggar's hut which love would have turned to a palace. And she would have come with him on the same conditions.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Name Saved Him.

A man brought before the court in Biddeford, Me., on a charge of vagrancy, when asked by the judge to give his name, answered, "David Gray home." The judge contracted his brows. "Your last name again?" he asked. "Gohome," was the reply. "All right, go ahead," said the judge, "that's a new one on me."

Rather an Open Secret.

A very important citizen was drawn on a jury, a week or two ago, and I met him after he had been discharged. He seemed to think that he was entitled to be on the bench, at the very least.

"What was your verdict in that case?" I asked.

"The defendant was unanimously acquitted on the first ballot."

"Indeed? And how did you vote?"

"That, sir, is one of the sacred secrets of the jury room."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Man's Usefulness.

Mrs. Edward R. Hewitt, president of the Woman's Municipal league, was discussing in New York the movement for cleaner streets.

"Now that women have gone in for cleaner streets," she said, "we'll probably get them. Don't mistrust woman's influence. It is everywhere at work."

Then, with a smile, Mrs. Hewitt uttered this epigram on her sex's behalf:

"Few are the men who would have reached the top of the ladder if their wives hadn't steadied it for them."

Wanted to Know the Culprit.

The following story was told recently by Austin Haines to a party of friends he entertained at luncheon:

"Down in a little Florida town two negro families live in shanties about a stone's throw apart. They obtain their drinking water from a shallow open well located midway between the two houses. A fence which separates the two yards is built up to the well on both sides. Every evening after her day's work is done, it is the custom of one of the negro mammies to pick up buckets and go to the well for water. One day the owner of the property moved the fence back about ten feet from where it originally stood. That evening when Eliza started out with her pail she fixed her eye on the fence and made straight for it. Walking hurriedly along the beaten path, she plunged into the shallow well with a splash. Her screams brought immediate assistance, and as she climbed out and spied the fence ten feet away she indignantly exclaimed:

"'Now, who done moved dat well?'"

About What Her Husband Would Say.

A Mich. woman tried Postum because coffee disagreed with her and her husband. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee. She writes:

"My husband was sick for three years with catarrh of the bladder, and palpitation of the heart, caused by coffee. Was unable to work at all and in bed part of the time.

"I had stomach trouble, was weak and fretful so I could not attend to my housework—both of us using coffee all the time and not realizing it was harmful.

"One morning the grocer's wife said she believed coffee was the cause of our trouble and advised Postum. I took it home rather dubious what my husband would say—he was fond of coffee.

"But I took coffee right off the table and we haven't used a cup of it since. You should have seen the change in us, and now my husband never complains of heart palpitation any more. My stomach trouble went away in two weeks after I began Postum. My children love it, and it does them good, which can't be said of coffee.

"A lady visited us who was usually quite sick. I told her I'd make her a cup of Postum. She said it was tasteless stuff, but she watched me make it, boiling it thoroughly for 15 minutes, and when done, she said it was splendid. Long boiling brings out the flavor and food quality." HARRIET QUIMBY PLUNGES TO DEATH

TURNED TOO SHARPLY IN THE WIND WITH PASSENGER IN BLERIOT MACHINE.

FOURTH WOMAN TO LOSE LIFE

Total of 41 Deaths During 1912, Compared With 73 During All of 1911.

Boston.—Miss Harriet Quimby, of New York, the first woman to win an aviator's license in America and the first woman to cross the English channel in an aeroplane, was instantly killed with her passenger, W. A. Williard, manager of the Boston aviation meet, when her Bleriot monoplane fell into Dorchester bay from a height of 1,000 feet.

The accident happened when Miss Quimby and Willard were returning from a trip over Boston harbor to Boston light, a distance of 20 miles in all. The flight was made in 20 minutes. The Bleriot, one of the latest models of military monoplanes, circled the aviation field and soared out over the Savin Hill Yacht club, just outside the aviation grounds.

MISS HARRIET QUIMBY.

Miss Quimby Fell 1,000 Feet to Her Death. She is the Fourth Woman Victim of Aviation.

Heading back into the eight-mile gusty wind, Miss Quimby started to volplane. The angle was too sharp and one of the gusts caught the tail of the monoplane, throwing the machine up perpendicular. For an instant it poised there. Then, sharply outlined against the setting sun, Willard was thrown clear of the chassis, followed almost immediately by Miss Quimby. Hurtling over and over, the two figures shot downward, striking the water 20 feet from shore. They splashed out of sight a second before the monoplane plunged 15 feet away.

It was low tide and the water was only 5 feet deep. Men from the yacht club in motor boats were on the spot quickly and, leaping overboard, dragged the bodies out of the mud into which they had sunk deeply.

Each body was badly crushed. Several of Miss Quimby's bones were broken and there were many large bruises. Willard, who weighed 190 pounds, hit the water face first and over one eye there was a gash from which the blood was flowing. He, too, sustained several fractures and bruises. The clothes of both flyers were torn. The bodies were so covered with mud that it was several minutes before the doctors and nurses could determine the full extent of the injuries.

Miss Quimby is the fourth woman to lose her life in an aeroplane accident. The first woman killed was Madame Deniz Moore, who fell while flying in France in July, 1911.

The deaths of Miss Quimby and Willard bring the total of 41 deaths during 1912, compared with 73 during all of 1911.

Two elderly chess fanatics were absorbed in a game at the Mechanics' institute in San Francisco recently. Both were experts and rigid followers of all the rules of the game, written and otherwise. For nearly five hours neither had spoken a word. Backward and forward, moving and countermoving, the game swung, with no perceptible advantage to either player. Finally one of the old fellows made a fatal break. Quick as a flash his opponent moved his knight into position and softly murmured, "Check!"

The other player, making no effort to conceal his displeasure, rose from the game.

"What's the matter?" demanded his friend. "Going to quit?"

"I certainly am. I'll be hanged if I can play chess with a darned old chatterbox!"—Saturday Evening Post.

That persons have very diverse ideas and tastes in music was exemplified in an incident at a pupils' vocal recital lately. A young woman was having quite a struggle with a song and one woman in the audience said to her companion:

The other looked bored and said:

"It sounds more like a malady to me."

Snappy Age.

The young man breezed into the old man's library.

"I met your daughter," he announced, "at a Fifth avenue reception. I want to marry her next Friday afternoon at 3:30. She's willing."

The old man turned to his card index.

"Which daughter?" he asked.

"It's Miss Ethel."

"All right," said the old man. "Make it 4:30 and I'll attend the wedding. I have an engagement at the other hour."

It was ordered. This is a snappy age.—Pittsburg Post.

This is what Mr. H. Turner of Lynchburg, Va., writes us. And he hits the nail on the head when he says the improvement is in his blood.

Impure blood is the real source of all these distressing skin complaints. And the reason our Botanic Blood Balm dispels them so quickly when other remedies fail, is because of its unusual power to cleanse the blood thoroughly; and renew it with fresh pure vitality.

No matter how severe and obstinate your case may be, there's hope for you in B.B.B. Your money back if it fails to help you.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Theraption, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been making in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Theraption is sold by druggists or mail 6/6. Forster Co., 39 Bateman St., New York.

SOME TAX SALE

MUCH PROPERTY SOLD FOR TAXES
MANY VALUABLE ACRES ASSESSED TO UNKNOWN
OWNER.

Last Saturday was the day set by order of the Court for the sale of property upon which the taxes had not been paid and according to law the sale took place in front of the Court House.

The Press man was not present at the sale, having no property which could be sold and no money with which to buy other people's property, but he was at the Court House Monday looking over the record and an astonishing array of facts confronted him.

In the first place there were one hundred and eighty-nine tracts of land in Chilton county (one of the smallest counties in the State) assessed to "Unknown Owner;" it is true that many of these tracts were not sold for taxes, the owners having called and settled with the Collector before the day of sale, but the strange part of it is that property owners should allow their homes, farms or other property to go unassessed and thereby incur not only the burden of taxes but the additional burden of officers' fees. In many instances this is an oversight; in other instances, and they are not a few, it is pure negligence. When the publication is made, the decree rendered and all the other necessary work done for the sale of the property, it increases the amount the owner has to pay to almost double what he would be required to pay if properly assessed and paid according to law. Yet there are many who will condemn the tax officers for what is their own neglect. As above stated, in this particular instance, there were one hundred and eighty-nine tracts of land assessed to "Unknown Owner;" we know of counties much larger than Chilton in which there is not one single acre of land so assessed. These tracts would average not less than twenty acres each—most of them would go as high as forty acres— making not under Four Thousand acres of land in this county so assessed. Surely this should not be; surely our land owners are fearfully indifferent or else terribly careless.

Some may undertake the place the blame upon the Assessor but it should not fall upon his shoulders. The law requires that property owners shall assess their property and fixes the dates upon which they are to be assessed; if failure is made then it is the duty of the Assessor to make assessment according to the best information obtainable—but it is not his duty to abstract land or to run down a chain of title for any person.

At the sale Saturday there were seventy-nine sales made—most of those advertised having settled before the day of sale.

No less than two hundred and fifty dollars was paid out for advertising, an equal amount for other costs and expenses, making a total of at least five hundred dollars paid by property owners for carelessness or indifference; this amount would have built two nice school houses or churches in almost any neighborhood.

Of the property sold, the record shows that the state of Alabama purchased nine tracts, W. W. Fox, eight tracts, B. L. Cobb, one tract, J. P. VanDerveer, Jr., twenty-six tracts, Jno. Patton, Jr., three tracts W. I. Mullins, two tracts, P. D. Wilson, one tract, J. W. Stanfield, fifteen tracts, W. C. Robinson, six tracts, W. A. Calloway, one tract, T. D Whitsworth, one tract, W. A. Cherry, one tract, D. O. Manning, one tract, J. E. Robinson, Sr., one tract. J. H. Robinson, two tracts.

Reader, it may be that all, or a part of your property was sold for taxes last Saturday. It may be that you can arrange now, by prompt action, to redeem your property at a nominal cost; it may be that if you leave it without attention today, it will slip your memory to-morrow and for years to come and then it may be that the purchaser at the tax sale will become the legal owner. Would it not be well for you to look the matter over and see if the farm on which you live, the home in which your wife and children are sheltered has not been sold for taxes? If you find that it has, REDEEM IT TODAY!

ROOSEVELT AND THE DEMOCRATS

Colonel Roosevelt was greatly pleased with the news from Baltimore. He showed how closely he was keeping in touch with the situation there by reciting the vote by which Bryan was defeated a short time before in his contest with Parker over the temporary chairmanship.

"Dosen't that remind you of what happened at Chicago?" he asked.

"They are making the same fight at Baltimore. That is good. One thing is plain, Murphy will never make peace with Bryan.

Colonel Roosevelt said that, apparently, the issue among the Democrats was fundamentally the same as that in the Republican convention. Should serious differences develop it is his belief that the new party will profit by it in the way of receiving support from disaffected democrats. With this in mind Colonel Roosevelt and his associates will take no definite steps until after the Democratic convention.—(Tuesday's Associated Press report from Oyster Bay.)

Aesop, long ago, made appropriate illustration of what is now happening to the Colonel, saying: A fox being caught in a trap was glad to compound for his neck by leaving his tail behind him; but upon coming abroad into the world he began to be so sensible of the disgrace such a defect would bring upon him, that he almost wished he had died rather than come away without it. However, resolving to make the best of a bad matter, he called a meeting of the rest of the foxes, and proposed that all should follow his example. "You have no notion," said he, "of the ease and comfort with which I move about; I could never have believed it if I had not tried it myself; but, really, when one comes to reason upon it, a tail is such an ugly, inconvenient, unnecessary appendage, that the only wonder is, that, as foxes, we could have put up with it so long. I propose, therefore, my worthy brethren, that you all profit by my experience, that I am most willing to afford you, and that all foxes, from this dav forward, cut off their tails." Upon this, one of the oldest stepped forward, and said: "I rather think, my friend, that you would not have advised us to part with our tails, if there were any chance of recovering your own. —(Mobile Register)

WOODRUFF TELLS WHY HE DEPARTED FROM THE G. O. P.

ACTION OF CHICAGO CONVENTION MADE IT IMPERATIVE

New York, July 1.—Timothy L. Woodruff, former Lieutenant Governor of this state, and a delegate from Brooklyn to the Republican National Convention, made public this afternoon, a statement explaining why he chose to leave the Republican party and spuport Theodore Roosevelt.

"Deeply as I regret this severance of the political affiliations and associations of a life time," the statement says, "the action of the Chicago convention makes it imperative on every man who has been proud to call himself a Republican, to rebel against forces so unscrupulous in the use of political power."

"That the party, Mr. Woodruff says further, will have the advantages of no sectionalism, no tariff complications growing out of past declarations; no entanglement which will prevent its using its best efforts to adjust on a perfectly equitable basis, the relations between capital and labor and no obligation of a pecuniary or other character which will hamper it in its efforts to control corporations and yet give all interests a square deal, as will insure the restoration of prosperity."—Advertiser.

Tim Woodruff is one of the best republican bosses in the country. He was Lieutenant Governor of New York at one time and the head of the republican organization of that state for years; up to the time that he repudiated the republican party he was the political boss of Brooklyn.

"Cne by one the roses fall; one by one the republicans are having their eyes opened; one by one they repudiate the paaty of class, clanism, and cleavers.

Deputy Ed. Smitherman returned Monday morning from a trip to Oklahoma having in custodo Eugene Martin charged with the murder of William Zimmerman near the corporate limits of Clanton about two years ago. Mr. Smitherman reports that he had a pleasent trip and that hid prisoner gave him no trouble whatever. He was perfectly willing to return to Clanton and stand trial for his action in killing Zimmerman. Eugene says that he never would have been apprehended had he not confined his secret to another negro, who during a fit of anger gave him away to the officers.

Teddy the terrible, who took office when McKinley was assassinated at Buffalo by Czolgosz.

Roosevelt then defeated Alton B. Parker by a vote of 336 to 140—being the first time that the solid south had ever been "invaded" by a republican candidate for president.

The rest is recent history. The democracy listening to the siren voice of the disturber of the Baltimore convention again put him forward as its standard bearer and received defeat for its "hero worship" to the tune of 321 for Taft to 162 for the selfish pie hunter.

It now requires a majority of the electorai vote to decide the election; if no candidate receives a majority the House of Representatives elects. The vote is counted and announced by the Senate on the second Wednesday in February succeeding the election in November.

But, perhaps, you're tired; the type setters say they are and it's too near the Fourth of July to write a long article.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of, and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Folev's Honey and Tar Compound to other cough medicines because it quickly cures coughs and colds. It will ward off a a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. Alred Drug Co.

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping and doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. You must get out into the open air and sunlight. If you do this every day and keep your stomach and bowels in good order by taking Chamberlain's Tablets when needed, you should become both healthy and beautiful. For sale by all dealers.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. P. Murphy will regret to learn of the illness of their little daughter Marjorie.

At least three hundred persons were injured. The Winnipeg telephone exchange, the Standard Block, the First Baptist church and the Baird and Bottel building were among the structures destroyed. All wires except one are down. A special train left Winnipeg with doctors and nurses and telegraph and telephone repairmen for Regina. The tornado came from the south and first struck the new parliament building, just completed at a cost of $2,000,000. The building is on steel and concrete and while it still stands is badly shaken. Daily Telegraph says China absolutely rejects the demands of the six-power group, which were that the loan must be $300,000,000; that three European financial supervisors must be appointed, and that the group must have its financial agents in China for five months during which there should be no issue of bonds and no business of any kind involving the pledging of China's credit without the supervisor's signatures. China's counter proposal is simply for a $50,000,000 loan.

President Taft has sent a message to congress, pointing out the anomalous situation whereby the machinery of the Federal government must continue in direct violation of law, making officials liable to fine and imprisonment, unless steps are immediately taken to provide funds for the next fiscal year. The president appealed for the passage of a resolution extending the necessary appropriationation of the current fiscal year for a temporary period to tide over the emergency caused by the failure of the regular and deficiency appropriations bill to pass. It is unlawful for any official to create a deficiency or to accept the services of any one gratuitously.

President Taft went to church Sunday and spent the remainder of the day reading and replying to the deluge of messages received at the white house congratulating him upon his nomination at Chicago. They came from everywhere. With the assistance of secretaries Mr. Taft got well through the pile by night. The president attended All Souls' Unitarian church, where he always worships in Washington. The pastor's text was "Be Ye Rich in Good Works." "To help and inspire others to live in the best sort of living," said the clergyman in conclusion.

The above case came up first in the city court of Montgomery, when it was tested by C. L. McLendon, an attorney. McLendon declined to pay the tax. GHOSTS EVER BOTHER YOU?

If So, Southern Negro Folks Say These Simple Precautions Will Chase 'Em.

As a part of the folklore of the negro folks the superstitions of slavery days are of great interest. The following are some of the negro's beliefs about ghosts:

To feel a hot breath of air strike you at twilight signified the nearby presence of a ghost. Should you wish to avoid him, stop and turn your coat and trousers and hat wrong side out and the spirit cannot encounter you.

If, however, he is a pugnacious sprite and approaches despite the change, turn and address him thus: "In the name of the Lord, what do you want?" Whereupon he will tell you his business upon earth, then depart and never, never trouble you again. If, on the other hand, it is a prowling ghost who crawls under the house, bumps against the floor, makes strange sounds, and whispers in the midnight hours, you have only to put in a new floor and he will do so no more.

Some ghosts are obtrusive and will not only prowl about the house, but creep in through the crack of the door in the wee small hours of the night, and, once inside, expand to vast proportions. To spare yourself any disturbance in this way, sow mustard seed all about the doorstep just before going to bed, or place a sieve on the doorstep.

Before entering, the spirit will have to count all the holes in the sieve or all the mustard seeds, and by this time daylight will come and he will have to go. As the counting for one night will not do for another you are allways safe.—Southern Workman.

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

"Mug" Is Overworked Word.

The most overworked word in the Englishman's vocabulary of slang is "Mug." As a noun it may mean a face, a fool, or a student who prefers reading to sport. As a verb its meanings are still more varied. It may mean to study hard, or to strike in the face. It also means to rob or swindle, and among actors to grimace or make faces. To mug up is also, in theatrical parlance, to make up.

Finally, to mug one's self is to get drunk, the resulting condition being one of mugginess. There is more obvious sense in this last use of the word than in some of the others, for alehouses, in the eighteenth century, were commonly known as mughouses. Mug is the English equivalent of the German Zug, which Mark Twain found to mean everything. A new sense of the verb "mug" in the American slang is to photograph a face.

For Forty Years a Hermit.

Isaac Sheath, who has just died in the workhouse at the age of seventy-eight, lived the life of a hermit for nearly forty years at Newport, Isle of Wight. He occupied a mud-hut which he erected on a piece of waste land in the village of Chale, but the hut became so dilapidated that the rural district council ordered its destruction. Sheath was greatly exasperated by the council's interference, and before he left for the workhouse he burned the hut to the ground. Mice and birds had grown so accustomed to the old man and his lonely ways that they used to come and feed from his hand.—London Mail.

The New Way.

"Going to your summer cottage this year?"

"No; we've decided to stay in the city."

"But I thought you were so fond of the country?"

"We used to be, but now we prefer to stay at home, where we can get fresh milk, eggs and butter every morning."

First Religious Book in America.

The first religious book published on the American continent was printed in the City of Mexico by order of the Roman Catholic bishop there. This was the first work of any kind from movable type issued in the new world and bears date 1645. In point of collaborators the most pretentious work published on this continent is "The Catholic Church in the United States," which has six thousand different collaborators, all but a dozen of whom are actively identified in some way with the American hierarchy.

DAY OF OLD GLORY

The Sage of Monticello

It was at Monticello that Jefferson prepared the draught of instructions for Virginia's delegation to the congress which met at Philadelphia. His activity in the cause of the colonies brought him into special disfavor with the British and it was planned to capture Jefferson at Monticello through Tarleton's raiders. Jefferson was warned that the enemy was coming to Monticello, and he sent his family away, and he himself escaped on horseback. The mansion at Monticello, thanks to Tarleton's orders, escaped serious pillage or damage. Though the house itself was not plundered or burned, the rest of Jefferson's property suffered severely at the hands of the enemy. All the stock and farm products that might be of service were carried off, the rest being wantonly destroyed.

When Jefferson resigned from the Washington cabinet in 1704 he returned to Monticello to enjoy a retirement which he intended should last many years. But this was not to be. He was elected vice-president in 1796, and in 1800 he was chosen president.

In March, 1809, Jefferson, after a nearly continuous public service of forty-four years, retired to Monticello and to private life, but he was so seriously impoverished that he was not sure of being allowed to leave Washington without arrest by his creditors, but this, fortunately, he was able to prevent. Toward the close of his life, however, he became distressingly embarrassed in his circumstances. In 1814 he sold his library to congress for $23,000, but through indorsing a note for a friend he was completely ruined, and was in danger of being compelled to surrender Monticello and seek shelter for his last days in another abode. But wealthy friends came to his assistance with a considerable sum of money.

"No cent of this," he wrote, "wrung from the taxpayer. It is the pure and unsolicited offering of love." In the last seventeen years of his life Jefferson lived like a patriarch among his admiring friends. "The sage of Monticello" was the most prominent man in private life in the country. Down to the year of his death he was a great moral force in the United States.

the former president, the purchaser of Louisiana, the chastiser of the Barbary pirates, the founder of the University of Virginia, as the scholar, the philosopher and the savant, he was known the world over.

Every day for at least eight months in the year brought its contingent of guests to Monticello. People of wealth, fashion, men of office, professional men, military and civil, lawyers, doctors, Protestant clergy, Catholic priests, members of congress, foreign ministers, missionaries, Indian agents, tourists, artists, strangers, friends. Some came from affection and respect, some from curiosity; some to give or receive advise or instruction, some from idleness, some because others set the example. And everybody who could not visit "the sage of Monticello" at least gave thought to the great retired man of the nation.

Jefferson retained his health nearly to his last days, and had the happiness of living to the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. He died at Monticello at 12:40 p. m. on July 4, 1826. He was buried in his own graveyard at Monticello, beneath a stone upon which was engraved an inscription prepared by his own hand: "Here is buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, of the Statute of Virginia, for Religious Liberty and Father of the University of Virginia."

"The sage of Monticello" stands today next to "the father of his country" in the esteem of the United States. And this is as it should be, for his wise counsel helped to establish this nation as firmly as did the arms and statesmanship of George Washington.

The LAST FIRECRACKER

by WILBUR D. NESBIT

'Tis the last red firecracker
Left lying alone;
All its former companions
Are bursted and gone.
Not one of its kindred
Nor loved one is nigh
To observe its last sputter
Or hear its last sigh.

It lies on the sidewalk,
But none takes it up—
Little Willie has wandered Downtown with the pup
To inquire of the doctor
If dogs grow new tails
For a bunch of firecrackers
Filled puppy with wails.

Uncle Thomas is resting
Upstairs on a cot
He must lie on his stomach
His back is so hot;
Poor old grandpa is moaning
In grizzled despair,
For a wayward skyrocket
Took his beard and his hair.

Papa has his head bandaged
In coverings neat,
And a surgeon is fixing
The burns on his feet;
Mamma thinks she'll recover
The use of her arms,
Though the red fire that burned them
Caused eight fire alarms.

'Tis the last red firecracker
Where it was flung down.
Fire the mantle of silence
Fell over the town;

SHANTYMEN OF EAST CANADA

Strenuous, Genial and Virile Type That Has Not Changed in Seventy Years.

Of all classes of laborers, the eastern Canada shantyman—particularly the French-Canadian woodsmen of Quebec province—is the most strenuous, while at the same time the most genial of workers.

Skilful in all that pertains to log making and the use of the ax, which he has learned to handle from early childhood, he is ever at home in the forest and wilds. Like the Indian, were he unable to find his campground before nightfall, he would assure you that it is not he, but the camp, that is lost, for he is at home anywhere in the forest, while cold and hardship have no terrors for him, since he can usually make himself comfortable in spite of the worst conditions imaginable. . . .

Tracing the history of the shantyman through the romantic legends of the conteurs de conte, the impression is gained that those of the early lumbering days were of the roughest and most formidable character—physical giants, with whom the shantymen of the present day would be but miserably contrasted. From truer, though less romantic, sources, it is found, however, that those old bushwhackers could not chop more logs in a given time than the present day lumbermen. In fact, the whole system of log making in eastern Canada is, with few exceptions, the same today as it was some 50 years ago.—British Columbia Magazine.

WISHES TO PROTECT SNAKES

Pennsylvania Professor Asserts That Many of the Reptiles Are Valuable Friends of Man.

Sporting men may regard the proposition advanced in the following editorial comment in the Chicago Record-Herald, there are mighty few women who will not experience a chill of horror that such a dreadful idea could be entertained in the human brain. Says the Record-Herald:

Legislation to protect snakes that are harmless to man and destructive to rats, mice and other creatures obnoxious to farmers is being sought in several states, according to Prof. H. D. Bailey of Muhlenberg college, a Pennsylvania institution. In a recent lecture Prof. Bailey pronounced the "king snakes, the milk snakes, the black, the corn, fox and indigo snakes all valuable allies of the farmer" and recommended efforts to increase the number of bull snakes, which, though large, are harmless and abound in south western states.

As man's knowledge of nature increases he finds many creatures useful or hostile to his interests, and he should act accordingly. Many snakes are benefactors of man, according to authorities, and once the instinctive dread of them disappears, and a high knowledge and familiarity is gained, nothing objectionable in their presence is finds or gardens. The movement to protect useful and harmless snakes, like the movement to protect song birds, should find favor throughout the country.

Actor Holds Two Records.

Herr Bernhard Baumeister has just celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his joining the Imperial Court theater of Vienna. This is believed to be a record for any player, and as Baumeister is now 84 years old, and still plays regularly on the same stage, he holds the double distinction of being the oldest actor in Europe, and the one who has played longest at one and the same theater. He appeared in the evening as Falstaff in "Henry IV," one of his most famous roles, and received a tremendous ovation, in return for which he delivered a short speech of thanks. The Emperor of Austria, who is two years Baumeister's junior, sent him a special message of congratulation and promised a pension for life to his wife, a comparatively young woman, whom the aged actor married only two years ago.

Uncertain About His Name.

There is a man in Milwaukee who doesn't know his own name and who says he cannot ascertain it unless he locates his mother, who has the information. Because he thinks it sounds something like his name, he signs himself Alfred Nebring, and he is asking the police to help him. He writes that his mother, a widow, whom he has not seen for many years, is living in Los Angeles, Cal., but he has been unable to get in touch with her. The family was large and he was turned over to others when a child, and gradually his name was lost track of. Of course, he doesn't know his mother's name, either, but he spells it phonetically as Nebring. It may be entirely different, he states, but he has hopes that she will recognize it.—Exchange.

Knew Where to Send Them.

He let her get in first and then followed quickly. "Fourth floor," he said to the elevator man. But, whether they do things somewhat leisurely in city hall or whether they have orders to go slow, the elevator did not start until the man with the young woman said again: "Fourth floor, please. He repeated this several times as the elevator went upward. When the fourth floor was finally reached the young chapter man cried in a loud voice: "All off for the Marriage License Bureau!" and the man and the woman were the only persons left in the car.—Philadelphia Record.

TRINITY'S ONLY BIBLE PROP A FORGERY.

Interpolated Parts Expunged In Revised Version Bible.

Pastor Russell, In Remarkable Discourse, Points Out That After All, the Spurious Words Really Make Nonsense—Directs Attention to the Scriptures.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Syracuse, N. Y., June 30.—In one of Pastor Russell's discourses here today he spoke from this text: "To us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by Him."—I Corinthians viii. 6.

Pastor Russell declared that for centuries Christians have been overlooking the real doctrine of the Trinity, set forth in the Bible, and have been perplexing their minds in an endeavor to believe and understand the mysterious theory of the creeds on the subject, which so persistently ignores the laws of mathematics, by declaring that three ones are one; or at times varying the declaration and asserting that one is three.

Any one questioning this fabulous statement, even to the extent of asking an explanation, was branded a heretic and assured that the matter is a mystery which cannot be understood, but that if denied the penalty would be eternal torture; and in numerous instances zealous persons had anticipated the torture by burning the inquirer at the stake, as, for instance, was done by our good brother John Calvin to Servetus.

Doctrine of Trinity Traced.

There is no unreasonable mystery connected with the doctrine of the Trinity as presented in the Bible, said Pastor Russell. On the contrary, it is very simple, very reasonable, and very honoring to God the Father, Jesus the Son, and to the Holy Spirit.

The Pastor traced the doctrine of the Trinity, as presented in the creeds, to its source. It was not the teachings of Jesus and the inspired Apostles, and surely not the belief of the Israelites, and those who for more than four thousand years had been God's people before Jesus' day. After the death of the Apostles, the Bishops erroneously claimed to be their successors vested with Apostolic authority, and these formulated the creeds with their various inconsistencies and Bible contradictions.

The Trinity of the creeds was introduced to offset the agnostic influences of the Greeks, who became interested in Christianity as a philosophy, but who denied its teachings respecting the prehuman existence of Jesus, the necessity for His death as a sin-atonement, and the doctrine of the resurrection.

In proportion as the Grecians denied many Christians would combat their theory, and they advanced claim after claim until they reached the climax represented in our creeds of declaring that Jesus was His own Father and His own Son at the same time, that one God, equal in power and glory, prayed to the other part of Himself with strong cryings and tears to be delivered from the power of the tomb, was heard and was raised from the dead by the power of the other part of Himself.

Indeed, said the Pastor, some have carried the matter so far as to claim that when Jesus died the world was for three days without a God, that He then raised Himself from the dead. Others, considering this an unreasonable view, claimed that Jesus never really died, but merely pretended to die—that all of the experiences of the cross were a mere farce, a pantomime, performed for the effect upon the people—that merely the body of Jesus died after crying, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" and that the real Jesus, the real God, stepped out and watched the proceedings and connived at the deception, including the further deception respecting the resurrection from the dead.

All of this must be abominable to the Father. All Christians are perplexed with this man-made mystery. Now, as Bible students are waking and are studying the Bible, they find that its teachings are very different from that of the creeds, that it is very real, very logical, very beautiful, very harmonious.

Trinity Supported by Forgery.

Before we come to the examination of the Bible's testimony respecting the Trinity, I remind you that the word "trinity" does not occur in the English Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and that no passage approximating such teaching is found there, except one, and that one is an interpolation, as all scholars, including Trinitarians, admit. The Revised Version expunges the additions (evidently added about the seventh century), because they are not found in any manuscripts of earlier date.

The spurious passage is found in St. John's first Epistle, 5:7. Those sufficiently interested will find the passage in its proper form in the Revised Version, and we only claim to note that the additional words of the forgery spoil the sentence, in fact they are so that the Pastor said the Apostle

HOUSE PARTY OF JOY MAKERS

A SOLID WEEK OF ENJOYMENT.

Monday morning, under the chaperonage of Mesdames Phares Coleman of Birmingham and Louis B. Farley of Montgomery, a party of twelve or fifteen pleasure seekers left Clanton for Mineral Springs where they are to spend the week, picnic style. Trunks, hammocks, fishing poles, golf sticks and quite an assembly of good things for the inner man were loaded on wagons and proceeded the happy party to the pleasure grounds.

The happy faces of the young ladies and young gentlemen composing the party beamed with pleasure as the trip was begun; perhaps they will be as happily wreathed in smiles when they return, but we venture that those bright faces will have taken on a sun-kissed hue e're they again return to the crowded city.

In addition to the chaperones—Mesdames Coleman and Farley—there were in the merry party Misses Lucy Lyman Powell, Gladys Haralson, May Belle Cosby and Margaret Coleman of Birmingham and Miss Jule Arlem Farley of Montgomery, Messrs. Phares Coleman, Jr., of Montgomery; R. H. Hatter of Billgee; Everett Wilkinson of Prattville; Sam Latham, Bill Mullins, Joe VanDerveer, Barney Robertson, Tom Woods and Grady Reynolds of Clanton.

This party took along a sufficient number of cooks and other servants to make life a comfort, so that they will have nothing to do but eat, drink and be merry.

MOUNTAIN CREEK

Well, Mr. Editor, the local tribe of Red Men are expecting quite a large delegation of chiefs and warriors from the Waxahatchie wigwam to trail to our camp fire on next Saturday's sleep. Why not make one of their number and come down and see us? We expect to bury the tomahawk and sheathe the scalping knives on that occasion and all those apprehended in passing on their hunting grounds will be turned over to the tender mercies of the visiting team. You can probably imagine their fate.

I am informed that Rev. Mr. Hurt, a noted Baptist minister from Arkansas, I believe, will conduct a series of meetings at Camp church, one mile east of Mountain Creek, beginning on the 4th inst.

I regretted to hear that lightning burned the barn of Mr. Jim Craven last Friday evening. Two or three head of cattle were also burned.

Our local physicians, Drs. Maddox and Brown, tell me there is quite a good deal of sickness in their territory covered by them.

The next question is: What will they do?

The railroad of the Chilton Mining & Manufacturing Co., connecting with the L. & N. one mile of the Mountain Creek mines, is completed, the rolling stock has all arrived and been put in readiness for business and everything is ready for operation to-day, perhaps, the sales department.

Town Marshal, W. W. Coburn, Messrs. Bob and Sydney Scott had quite a little mixup Saturday night about the time passenger train No. 8 went north. It seems a notice had been put up warning people to keep out of the depot office at the depot. Notwithstanding, several young men collected in the [illegible] Mr. Scott, Mr. Coburn ordered them out, which [illegible] thing to say about it which the Marshal did not like. A few words passed and it is alleged the Marshal knocked Sydney down. He got up and ran home, returning speedily accompanied by his father. They approached the Marshal and as the story goes, after a few words Mr. Scott struck the Marshal, when it is claimed, Sydney ran in between them, knocking Mr. Coburn down twice and bruising him up considerably. Warrants were issued for the Messrs. Scott for assault with intent to murder and they gave bond in the sum of $500 each. I also hear that a warrant will issue for Mr. Coburn for striking a minor. These are the facts as I have heard them.

A LETTER FROM REV. W. B. CRUMPTON

Rev. W. M. Olive has received the following interesting letter from Rev. W. B. Crumpton anent his recent visit to Chilton:

Montgomery, Ala., July 5, '12

Dear Brother:—My short visit to Chilton was a surprise and a delight to me.

I was surprised at the splendid farming I saw. The farmers are evidently reading and exchanging views, and putting into practice the information they gather.

I have seen nowhere in Alabama neater or better farms. They were as clean as a well cultivated garden. I was especially struck with the terracing. Instead of the unsightly terrace, grown up in weeds, briars and broom sedge, the best row of cotton or corn was on the terrace. I have seen that nowhere else in the State. Improved implements, I saw, in general use, by which one man can do the work of several under the old system.

Your great crowds of well-behaved, thoughtful young people, was a delight to behold.

I congratulate you on the Ministers' Conference you have organized. I was especially pleased to strike hands with the brethren I had never seen. The assembling of the preachers together once a month or quarter, will be most profitable in the good fellowship which is certain to follow.

As we know each other better, and learn of the problems each have to solve, our sympathy grows and extends to one another. The discussions in the meeting must tell powerfully on the work of the Lord.

The exchange of ideas promotes intellectual growth. Heart to heart talks among the ministers, before an audience of their people, will give them an insight into the preacher's life and work they would never have known.

We make improvement in farming, in teaching, and even in politics, why not improvement in the ministry? No one of us, however old or learned, or experienced, knows it all. Looking back over my long life, I bless God for what I have learned, and the goodly fellowship I have enjoyed by association with my ministerial brethren. I felt it in my heart to write these lines to each of the brother ministers it was my good fortune to meet.

Blessings on you in the great work before you.

Your fellow laborer in Christ,
W. B. Crumpton.

Thursday—our publication day—was a national holiday and we were somewhat late in appearing upon the streets but the paper had not been out an hour before Mr. J. B. Downs accosted the editor and asked if he had received a letter giving a description of a valuable diamond ring which had been lost? The Post Office was closed for the day but search soon found the Postmaster and the letter was delivered; the letter of description was sent to the finder and in a few minutes a pretty diamond ring accurately described by Mr. Downs, was turned over to the Press man to be turned over to Mr. Downs.

Now, Doll is not much given to smiles, but the smile that mantled his face when the ring was produced would have made a seraph turn green with envy, and tho' his eyes are always bright and sparkling, the glow of delight which shown in his eyes Thursday morning reminded one of the glistening dew-drops upon the meadow in the happy Spring time.

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1912 NO. 16

HOUSE PARTY OF JOY MAKERS

A SOLID WEEK OF ENJOYMENT.

Monday morning, under the chaperonage of Mesdames Phares Coleman of Birmingham and Louis B. Farley of Montgomery, a party of twelve or fifteen pleasure seekers left Clanton for Mineral Springs where they are to spend the week, picnic style. Trunks, hammocks, fishing poles, golf sticks and quite an assembly of good things for the inner-man were loaded on wagons and proceeded the happy party to the pleasure grounds.

The happy faces of the young ladies and young gentlemen composing the party beamed with pleasure as the trip was begun; perhaps they will be as happily wreathed in smiles when they return, but we venture that those bright faces will have taken on a sun-kissed hue ere they again return to the crowded city.

In addition to the chaperones—Mesdames Coleman and Farley—there were in the merry party Misses Lucy Lyman Powell, Gladys Enslen, May Belle Cosby and Margaret Coleman of Birmingham and Miss Jule Arlem Farley of Montgomery, Messrs. Phares Coleman, Jr., of Montgomery; R. H. Hatter of Boligee; Everett Wilkinson of Prattville; Sam Latham, Bill Mullins, Joe VanDerveer, Barney Roberts, Tom Woods and Grady Reynolds of Clanton.

This party took along a sufficient number of cooks and other servants to make life a comfort, so that they will have nothing to do but eat, drink and be merry.

MOUNTAIN CREEK

Well, Mr. Editor, the local tribe of Red Men are expecting quite a large delegation of chiefs and warriors from the Waxahatchie wigwam to trail to our camp fire on next Saturday's sleep. Why not make one of their number and come down and see us? We expect to bury the tomahawk and sheathe the scalping knives on that occasion and all those apprehended trespassing on their hunting grounds will be turned over to the tender mercies of the visiting team. You can probably imagine their fate.

I am informed that Rev. Mr. Gilbert, a noted Baptist minister from Arkansas, I believe, will conduct a series of meetings at Canaan church, one mile east of Mountain Creek, beginning on the 15th inst.

I regretted to hear that lightning burned the barn of Mr. Jim Dunaven last Friday evening. Two or three head of cattle were also consumed.

Our local physicians, Drs. Maddox and Brown, tell me there is quite a good deal of sickness in the territory covered by them.

The next question is: What will Teddy do?

The railroad of the Chilton Mining & Manufacturing Co., connecting with the L. & N. one mile north of the Mountain Creek yards, is completed, the rolling stock has all arrived and been put in readiness for business and everything is ready for operation except, perhaps, the sales department.

Town Marshal, W. W. Coburn, and Messrs. Bob and Sydney Scott had quite a little mixup Saturday night about the time passenger train No. 8 went north. It seems a notice had been put up warning people to keep out of the private office at the depot. Notwithstanding, several young men had collected in there among them Sydney Scott. Mr. Coburn warned them to get out, which they did, but Sydney it seems, placed some thing to say about it which the Marshal did not like. A few words passed and it is alleged the Marshal knocked Sydney down. He got up and ran home, returning speedily accompanied by his father. They approached the Marshal and as the story goes, after a few words Mr. Scott struck the Marshal, when, it is claimed, Syd ran in between them, knocking Mr. Coburn down twice and bruising him up considerably. Warrants were issued for the Messrs. Scott for assault with intent to murder and they gave bond in the sum of $500 each. I also hear that a warrant will issue for Mr. Coburn for striking a minor. These are the facts as I have heard them.

A LETTER FROM REV. W. B. CRUMPTON

Rev. W. M. Olive has received the following interesting letter from Rev. W. B. Crumpton anent his recent visit to Chilton:

Montgomery, Ala., July 5, '12

Dear Brother:—My short visit to Chilton was a surprise and a delight to me.

I was surprised at the splendid farming I saw. The farmers are evidently reading and exchanging views, and putting into practice the information they gather.

I have seen nowhere in Alabama neater or better farms. They were as clean as a well cultivated garden. I was especially struck with the terracing. Instead of the unsightly terrace, grown up in weeds, briars and broom sedge, the best row of cotton or corn was on the terrace. I have seen that nowhere else in the State. Improved implements, I saw, in general use, by which one man can do the work of several under the old system.

Your great crowds of well-behaved, thoughtful young people, was a delight to behold.

I congratulate you on the Ministers' Conference you have organized. I was especially pleased to strike hands with the brethren I had never seen. The assembling of the preachers together once a month or quarter, will be most profitable in the good fellowship which is certain to follow.

As we know each other better, and learn of the problems each have to solve, our sympathy grows and extends to one another. The discussions in the meeting must tell powerfully on the work of the Lord.

The exchange of ideas promotes intellectual growth. Heart to heart talks among the ministers, before an audience of their people, will give them an insight into the preacher's life and work they would never have known.

We make improvement in farming, in teaching, and even in politics, why not improvement in the ministry? No one of us, however old or learned, or experienced, knows it all. Looking back over my long life, I bless God for what I have learned, and the goodly fellowship I have enjoyed by association with my ministerial brethren. I felt it in my heart to write these lines to each of the brother ministers it was my good fortune to meet.

Blessings on you in the great work before you.

Your fellow laborer in Christ,

W. B. Crumpton.

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

WELL, WE RATHER GUESS IT DOES AND CAN PROVE IT BY DOLL DOWNS

Last week there was lost upon the streets of Clanton an article of "wearing apparel" which was thought to be valuable and which the owner believed would be glad to recover. With the sole thought of restoring the article to the owner an advertisement was placed in the Press.

That advertisement merely stated that an article had been found which the owner could recover by describing the property and proving ownership. To make assurance doubly sure, and to avoid any "fake" applications the finder would not so much as tell the newspaper man anything by which he could even make a reasonable guess as to what it was. No one was to call in person but was to send the description to the Press and the Press was to deliver it to the finder—the name of the finder being purposely withheld. Thursday—our publication day—was a national holiday and we were somewhat late in appearing upon the streets but the paper had not been out an hour before Mr. J. B. Downs accosted the editor and asked if he had received a letter giving a description of a valuable diamond ring which had been lost? The Post Office was closed for the day but search soon found the Postmaster and the letter was delivered; the letter of description was sent to the finder and in a few minutes a pretty diamond ring accurately described by Mr. Downs, was turned over to the Press man to be turned over to Mr. Downs.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained.

He did not know that. Women have learned through centuries of weakness that fine art of concealment which man has never mastered. She never let him see what she thought of him. Yet he was not without suspicion; if that suspicion grew to certainty, would he control himself then?

At first he had sought to keep out of her way, but she had compelled him to come in. The room that was kitchen and bed room and store room for him was cheerless and somewhat cold. Save at night or when he was busy with other tasks outside they lived togethed in the great room. It was always warm, it was always bright, it was always cheerful, there.

The little piles of manuscript she had noted were books that he had written. He made no effort to conceal such things from her. He talked frankly enough about his life in the hills, indeed there was no possibility of avoiding the discussion of such topics. On but two subjects was he inexorably silent. One was the present state of his affections and the other was the why and wherefore of his lonely life. She knew beyond peradventure that he loved her, but she had no faint suspicion even as to the reason why he had become a recluse! He had never given her the slightest clew to his past save that admission that he had known Kirkby which was in itself nothing definitive and which she never connected with that package of letters which she still kept with her.

The man's mind was too active and fertile to be satisfied with manual labor alone, the books that he had written were scientific treatises in the main. One was a learned discussion of the fauna and flora of the mountains. Another was an exhaustive account of the mineral resources and geological formations of the range. He had only to allow a whisper, a suspicion of his discovery of gold and silver in the mountains to escape him, and the canons and crests alike would be filled with eager prospectors. Still a third work was a scientific analysis of the water powers in the canons.

He had willingly allowed her to read them all. Much of them she found technical and, aside from the fact that he had written them, uninteresting. But there was one book remaining in which he simply discussed the mountains in the various seasons of the year; when the snows covered them, when the grass and the moss came again, when the flowers bloomed, when autumn touched the trees. There was the soul of the man, poetry expressed in prose, manlike but none the less poetry for that. This book pored over, she questioned him about it; they discussed it as they discussed Keats and the other poets.

Those were happy evenings. She on one side of the fire sewing, her finger wound with cloth to hold his giant thimble, fashioning for herself some winter garments out of a gay colored, red, white and black ancient and exquisitely woven Navajo blanket, soft and pliable almost as an old-fashioned piece of satin—priceless if she had but known it—which he put at her disposal. While on the other side of the same homely blaze he made for her out of the skins of some of the animals that he had killed, a shapeless foot covering, half moccasin and wholly leggin, which she could wear over her shoes in her short excursions around the plateau and which would keep her feet warm and comfortable.

By her permission he smoked as he worked, enjoying the hour, putting aside the past and the future and for a few moments blissfully content. Sometimes he laid aside his pipe and whatever work he was engaged upon and read to her from some immortal noble number. Sometimes the entertainment fell to her and she sang to him in her glorious contralto voice music that made him sad. Once he could stand it no longer. At the end of a burst of song which filled the little room—he had risen to his feet while she sang, compelled to the erect position by the magnificent melody—as the last notes died away and she smiled at him triumphant and expectant of his praise and his approval, he hurled himself out of the room and into the night, wrestling for hours with the storm which after all was but a trifle to that which raged in his bosom. While she, left alone and deserted, quailed within the silent room till she heard him come back.

Often and often when she slept quietly on one side the thin partition, he lay awake on the other, and sometimes his passion drove him forth to cool the fever, the fire in his soul in the icy, wintry air. The struggle within him preyed upon him, the keen loving eye of the woman searched his face, scrutinized him, looked into his heart, saw what was there.

She determined to end it, deciding that he must confess his affections. She had no premonition of the truth and no consideration of any evil consequences held her back. She could give free range to her love and her devotion. She had the ordering of their lives and she had the power to end the situation growing more and more impossible. She fancied the matter easily terminable. She thought she had only to let him see her heart in such ways as a maiden may, to bring joy to his own to make him speak. She did not dream of the reality.

One night, therefore, a month or more after she had come, she resolved to end the uncertainty. She believed the easiest and the quickest way would be to get him to tell her why he was there. She naturally surmised that the woman of the picture, which she had never seen since the first day of her arrival, was in some measure the cause of it; and the only pain she had in the situation was the keen jealousy that would obtrude itself at the thought of that woman.

He Stood—Entranced.

She remembered everything that he had said to her, and she recalled that he had once made the remark that he would treat her as he would have his wife treated if he had one, therefore whoever and whatever the picture of this woman was, she was not his wife. She might have been some one he had loved, but who had not loved him. She might have died. She was jealous of her, but she did not fear her.

After a long and painful effort the woman had completed the winter suit she had made for herself. He had advised her and had helped her. It was a belted tunic that fell to her knees; the red and black stripes ran around it, edged the broad collar, cuffed the warm sleeves and marked the graceful waist line. It was excessively becoming to her. He had been down into the valley, or the pocket, for a final inspection of the burros before the night, which promised to be severe, fell, and she had taken advantage of the opportunity to put it on.

She knew that she was beautiful; her determination to make this evening count had brought an unusual color to her cheeks, an unwonted sparkle to her eye. She stood up as she heard him enter the other room, she was standing erect as he came through the door and faced her. He had only seen her in the now somewhat shabby blue of her ordinary camp dress before, and her beauty fairly smote him in his face. He stood before her, wrapped in his fur great coat, snow and ice clinging to it, entranced. The woman smiled at the effect she produced.

"Take off your coat," she said gently approaching him. "Here, let me help you. Do you realize that I have been here over a month now? I want to have a little talk with you, I want you to tell me something.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Kiss on the Hand.

"Did it ever occur to you," began Enid Maitland gravely enough, for she quite realized the serious nature of the impending conversation, "did it ever occur to you that you know practically all about me, while I know practically nothing about you?"

The man bowed his head.

"You may have fancied that I was not aware of it, but in one way or another you have possessed yourself of pretty all of my short and, until I met you, most uneventful life," she continued.

Newbold might have answered that there was one subject which had been casually introduced by her upon one occasion and to which she had never again referred, but which was to him the most important of all subjects connected with her; and that was the nature of her relationship to one James Armstrong whose name, although he had heard it but once, he had not forgotten. The girl had been frankness itself in following his deft leads when he talked with her about herself, but she had shown the same reticence in recurring to Armstrong that he had displayed in questioning her about him. The statement she had just made as to his acquaintance with her history was therefore sufficiently near the truth to pass unchallenged, and once again he gravely bowed in acquiescence.

"I have withheld nothing from you," went on the girl, "whatever you wanted to know, I have told you. I had nothing to conceal, as you have found out. Why you wanted to know about me, I am not quite sure."

"It was because—" burst out the man impetuously, and then he stopped abruptly and just in time.

Enid Maitland smiled at him in a way that indicated she knew what was behind the sudden check he had imposed upon himself.

"Whatever your reason, your curiosity—"

"Don't call it that, please."

"Your desire then has been gratified. Now it is my turn. I am not even sure about your name. I have seen it in these books and naturally I have imagined that it is yours."

"It is mine."

"Well, that is really all that I know about you. And now I shall be quite frank. I want to know more. You evidently have something to conceal or you would not be living here in this way. I have never asked you about yourself, or manifested the least curiosity to solve the problem you present, to find the solution of the mystery of your life."

"Perhaps," said the man, "you didn't care enough about it to take the trouble to inquire."

"You know," answered the girl, "that is not true. I have been consumed with desire to know."

"A woman's curiosity?"

"Not that," was the soft answer that turned away his wrath.

She was indeed frank. There was that in her way of uttering those two simple words that set his pulses bounding. He was not altogether and absolutely blind.

"Come," said the girl, extending her hand to him, "we are alone here together. We must help each other. You have helped me, you have been of the greatest service to me. I can't begin to count all that you have done for me; my gratitude—"

"Only that?"

"But that is all that you have ever asked or expected," answered the young woman in a low voice whose gentle tones did not at all accord with the boldness and courage of the speech.

"You mean?" asked the man, staring at her, his face aflame.

"I mean," answered the girl swiftly, wilfully misinterpreting and turning his half spoken question another way, "I mean that I am sure that trouble has brought you here. I do not wish to force your confidence, I have no right to do so, yet I should like to enjoy it; can't you give it to me? I want to help you, I want to do my best to make some return for what you have been to me and have done for me."

"I ask but one thing," he said quickly.

"And what is that?"

But again he checked himself.

"No," he said, "I am not free to ask anything of you."

And that answer to Enid Maitland was like a knife thrust in the heart. The two had been standing confronting each other. Her heart grew faint within her. She stretched out her hand vaguely as if for support. He stepped toward her, but before he reached her, she caught the back of the chair and sank down weakly. That he should be bound and not free had never once occurred to her; she had quite misinterpreted the meaning of his remark.

The man did not help her, he could not help her. He just stood and looked at her. She fought valiantly for self-control a moment or two and then, utterly oblivious to the betrayal of her feelings involved in the question—the moments were too great for consideration of such trivial matters—she faltered.

"You mean there is some other woman?"

He shook his head in negation.

"I don't understand. There was some other woman?"

"Yes."

"Where is she now?"

"Dead."

"But you said you were not free."

He nodded.

"Did you care so much for her that now—that now—"

"Enid," he cried desperately. "Believe me, I never knew what love was until I met you."

The secret was out now; it had been known to her long since, but now it was publicly proclaimed. Even a man as blind, as obsessed, as he could not mistake the joy that illuminated her face at this announcement. That very joy and satisfaction produced upon him, however, a very different effect than might have been anticipated. Had he been free, indeed, he would have swept her to his breast and covered her sweet face with kisses broken by whispered words of passionate endearment. Instead of that he shrank back from her and it was she who was forced to take up the burden of the conversation.

"You say that she is dead," she began in sweet appealing bewilderment, "and that you care so much for me and yet you—"

"I am a murderer," he broke out harshly. "There is blood upon my hands, the blood of a woman who loved me and whom, boy as I was, I thought that I loved. She was my wife, I killed her."

"Great God," cried the girl amazed beyond measure or expectation by this sudden avowal which she had once suspected, and her hand instinctively went to the bosom of her dress where she kept that soiled, water stained packet of letters, "are you that man?"

"I am the man that did that thing, but what do you know?" he asked quickly, amazed in his turn.

"Old Kirkby, my uncle Robert Maitland, told me your story; they said that you had disappeared from the haunts of men—"

"And they were right. What else was there for me to do? Although innocent of crime, I was blood guilty. I was mad. No punishment could be visited upon me like that imposed by the stern, awful, appalling fact. I swore to prison myself, to have nothing more forever to do with mankind or womankind with whom I was unworthy to so associate, to live alone until God took me. To cherish my memories, to make such expiation as I could, to pray daily for forgiveness, I came here to the wildest, the most inaccessible, the loneliest, spot in the range. No one ever would come here I fancied, no one ever did come but you. I was happy after a fashion, or at least content. I had chosen the better part. I had work, I could read, write, remember and dream. But you came and since that time life has been heaven and hell. Heaven because I love you, hell because to love you means disloyalty to the past, to a woman who loved me. Heaven because you are here; I can hear your voice, I can see you, your soul is spread out before me in its sweetness, in its purity; hell because I am false to my determination, to my vow, to the love of the past."

"And did you love her so much, then?" asked the girl, now fiercely jealous and forgetful of other things for the moment.

"It's not that," said the man. "I was not much more than a boy, a year or two out of college. I had been in the mountains a year, this woman lived in a mining camp, she was a fresh, clean healthy girl, her father died and the whole camp fathered her, looked after her, and all the young men in the range for miles on either side were in love with her. I supposed that I was too and—well, I won her from the rest. We had been married but a few months and a part of the time my business as a mining engineer had called me away from her. I can remember the day before we shames me to say it of course, but I wanted a better mind, a higher soul. That made it harder—what I had to do, you know."

"Yes, I know."

"The only thing I could do when I came to my senses was to sacrifice myself to her memory because she had loved me so; as it was she gave up her life for me; I could do no less than be true and loyal to the remembrance. It wasn't a sacrifice either until you came, but as soon as you opened your eyes and looked into mine in the rain and the storm upon the rock to which I had carried you after I had fought for you, I knew that I loved you. I knew that the love that had come into my heart was the love of which I had dreamed, that everything that had gone before was nothing, that I had found the one woman whose soul should mate with mine."

"And this before I had said a word to you?"

"What are words? The heart speaks to the heart, the soul whispers to the soul. And so it was with us. I had fought for you, you were mine, mine. My heart sang it as I panted and struggled over the rocks carrying you. It said the words again and again as I laid you down here in this cabin. It repeated them over and over: mine, mine! It says that every day and hour. And yet honor and fidelity bid me stay. I am free, yet bound; free to love you, but not to take you. My heart says yes, my conscience no. I should despise myself if I were false to the love which my wife bore me, and how could I offer you a blood stained hand!"

He had drawn very near her while he spoke; she had risen again and the two confronted each other. He stretched out his hand as he asked that last question, almost as if he had offered it to her. She made the best answer possible to his demand, for before he could divine what she would be at, she had seized his hand and kissed it and this time it was the man whose knees gave way. He sank down in the chair and buried his face in his hands.

MORE HOSPITALS ARE NEEDED

Situation Improved, But Further Work Is Needed to Stamp Out Tuberculosis.

Only four states, Mississippi, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming, have no beds whatever in special hospitals or wards for consumptives. Eight years ago when the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis was organized, there were 26 states in which no hospital or sanatorium provision for consumptives existed, and the entire number of beds in the United States was only 10,000.

"While these figures would indicate a remarkable growth in anti-tuberculosis activity," says Dr. Livingston Farrand, executive secretary of the National association, in commenting on the subject, "there are still practically ten indigent consumptives for every one of the 30,000 beds, including those for pay patients. In other words, we have from 250,000 to 300,000 consumptives in this country too poor to provide hospital care for themselves. If tuberculosis is ever going to be stamped out in the United States, more hospital provision for these foci of infection must be provided."

Where He Drew the Line.

An English earl, lately deceased, who had no family, was notorious for his hatred of children, and on one occasion he engaged as lodge keeper an army pensioner named McMicken. Some few months later McMicken's wife presented him with a son and heir. On learning of the occurrence his lordship rode down to the lodge in a terrible rage.

"I hear," said he to Mr. McMicken, "that your wife has a son."

"Yes, my lord," said the man proudly.

"Well, now, look here, McMicken; when I put you here, it was to open and shut a gate, but by the Lord Harry, not to propagate."

The Doghouse.

"The doghouse!" shouted a bellman at the Congress hotel to the key clerk in asking for the key to the room to which he was taking a convention guest.

"Hold on there," snapped the guest, Henry Valkenstein of New York. "What's this 'doghouse' mean? Think I am an animal?"

"That's all right," said Clerk John Burke, soothingly. "It's only a nickname the boys have for the room I gave you, which was K-9."

"Oh, I see," said the guest; "K-9—canine; good joke on me, eh?"

The detective says his after thoughts are the best.

GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP

No Medicine So Beneficial to Brain and Nerves.

Lying awake nights makes it hard to keep awake and do things in day time. To take "tonics and stimulants" under such circumstances is like setting the house on fire to see if you can put it out.

The right kind of food promotes refreshing sleep at night and a wide awake individual during the day.

A lady changed from her old way of eating Grape-Nuts, and says:

"For about three years I had been a great sufferer from indigestion. After trying several kinds of medicine, the doctor would ask me to drop off potatoes, then meat, and so on, but in a few days that craving, gnawing feeling would start up, and I would vomit everything I ate and drank.

"When I started on Grape-Nuts, vomiting stopped, and the bloated feeling which was so distressing disappeared entirely.

"My mother was very much bothered with diarrhoea before commencing the Grape-Nuts, because her stomach was so weak she could not digest her food. Since using Grape-Nuts food she is well, and says she don't think she could do without it.

"It is a great brain restorer and nerve builder, for I can sleep as sound and undisturbed after a supper of Grape-Nuts as in the old days when I could not realize what they meant by a 'bad stomach.' There is no medicine so beneficial to nerves and brain as a good night's sleep, such as you can enjoy after eating Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CALL ISSUED TO JOIN NEW PARTY

DELEGATES INVITED TO PROGRESSIVE CONVENTION IN CHICAGO AUGUST 5.

PLATFORM TO BE ADOPTED

At Least Forty States Will Be Represented in Convention—Representation Reduced.

New York.—A call to the people of the United States, who are in sympathy with the "national progressive movement," to send delegates to a national convention to open in Chicago August 5 was given out by United States Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, Theodore Roosevelt's campaign manager.

The call is signed by members of the committee chosen at a meeting held in Chicago and also includes signatures of Roosevelt followers in 40 states.

"The territories have no place in a national convention and will not be considered," declared Senator Dixon in commenting upon the signatures. "As for the missing eight states, the most of them probably will send delegates, although they have taken no part in the call.

"The call lays down no rules as to the methods of choosing delegates, since each state will be expected to select its delegates by its own paraphernalia. The representation will be cut down to just one half of the previous conventions.

"In all probability the convention will adopt the name 'national progressive' for the new party, but I cannot say definitely what will be done. Thus far no issues have been authoritatively stated and, of course, the platform itself will have to be decided upon by the delegates."

The text of the call is:

"To the people of the United States, without regard to past political differences, who, through repeated betrayals, realize that today the power of the crooked political bosses and of the privileged classes behind them is so strong in the two old party organizations that no helpful movement in the real interests of our country can come out of either:

"Who believe that the time has come for a national progressive movement—a nation-wide movement—on non-sectional lines, so that the people may be served in sincerity and truth by an organization unfettered by obligation to conflicting interests;

"Who believe in the right and capacity of the people to rule themselves and effectively to control all the agencies of their government and who hold that only through social and industrial justice thus secured can honestly find permanent protection;

"Who believe that government by the few tends to become and has in fact become government by the sordid influences that control the few;

"Who believe that only through the movement proposed can we obtain in the nation and the several states the legislation demanded by the modern industrial evolution; legislation which shall favor honest business and yet control the great agencies of modern business so as to insure their being used in the interest of the whole people; legislation which shall promote prosperity and at the same time secure the better and more equitable diffusion of prosperity; legislation which shall promote the economic well being of the honest farmer, wage worker, professional man and business man alike, but which shall at the same time strike in efficient fashion—and not merely pretend to strike—at the roots of the privilege in the world of industry no less than in the world of politics;

"Who believe that only this type of industrial evolution will avert industrial revolution:

"Who believe that wholesome party government can come only if there is wholesome party management in a spirit of service to the whole country and who hold that the commandment delivered at Sinai, 'Thou shalt not steal' applies to politics as well as to business;

"To all in accord with these views a call is hereby issued by the provisional committee under the resolution of the mass meeting held in Chicago on June 22 last to send from each state a number of delegates whose votes in the convention shall count for as many votes as the state shall have senators and representatives in Congress, to meet in convention at Chicago on the 5th day of August, 1912, for the purpose of nominating candidates to be supported for the positions of President and vice-president of the United States."

Three Killed When Cars Collide.

Marion, Ind.—Four persons were killed and more than a dozen seriously hurt, some perhaps fatally, in a head-on collision between interurban cars on the Marion, Bluffton and Eastern traction line in this city. The collision was between a regular car and one loaded with merrymakers bound for an amusement resort, and occurred on a straight track. No cause had been assigned for the accident. The heavy interurban car crashed half way through the lighter park car.

It Was a Ground Hog.

Two unsophisticated city youths on a Sunday outing were trudging up a hillside road, expecting to be pleased with scenery and amused by the natives. Just ahead of them two natives, young women, swung along with the free and easy stride of the practiced "hiker." The visitors and the natives were strangers.

Suddenly there came a sudden flash of life in the sunlight far up the road.

"Look a rabbit!" exclaimed City Chap No. 1.

"Ho, Ho, Haw!" came the answer from No. 2. "Don't you know a squirrel when you see it—that's a grey squirrel, m' boy."

Then both became conscious of suppressed giggling just in front, and in a staccato between giggles, one young woman informed the other who had not seen the little animal that was a ground hog.

Hardly the Sunday School Brand.

The young hopeful had secreted some bright buttons in his pocket, which came from the motor car show. When Sunday school was well under way, he took one out and pinned it on his coat, feeling it an ornament. Unfortunately, when the minister came round to speak to the dear children, his near sighted eyes were caught by the color.

"Well, Richard, I see you are wearing some motto, my lad. What does it say?"

"You read it, sir," replied Richard, hanging his head.

"But I cannot see. I haven't my glasses, son. Read it so we can all hear you."

Richard blushed. "It says, sir, 'Ain't it —— to be poor?'"—Metropolitan Magazine.

Her Special Advantages.

WILLING TO SHARE PENNIES

Generous Act of Street Waif That Gained Him a Friend in Great Novelist.

Charles Dickens, the creator of many delightful child characters, earned a million dollars during his lifetime with his pen, but often walked the streets of London in search of material for his books without a penny in his pocket.

One evening while doing this he was accosted by a small boy who asked him for a penny. Dickens searched his pockets, but they were empty, and so he told the boy, who was shivering in the cold.

"Poor man!" exclaimed the little fellow, "we'll go hunks together!"

Dickens stood back in the shadow of the street to see what the outcome would be. The lad continued to beg, and finally gained two pennies. He came dancing to Dickens with a jolly ring in his voice.

"Now," he said, "we'll have two hot buns apiece!"

Such a generous spirit under such trying circumstances struck Dickens so forcibly that he took the lad home with him, and there he was fed and clothed, and started on the road to a better life.

TERRIBLE ITCHING ON LIMBS

Glen Wilton, Va.—"Five years ago I was in a terrible state of suffering with blotches on my limbs, of the most intense stinging and itching. I could not rest day or night; the itching was so severe that it waked me out of sleep. I could never get a full night's rest. I actually scrubbed the very flesh so severely that in a short time the affected places were so sore I could scarcely walk with any ease or comfort. The places were a solid raised up mass. I would scratch the parts until they would bleed. I tried home remedies but got no good; the itching just kept on getting worse. I used some salve which simply was no good at all.

"I happened to see the Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement and wrote for a free sample. Almost like magic I commenced getting relief. I bought a 50c box of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap and I was entirely cured from a torment that would be hard to describe." (Signed) W. P. Wood, Mar. 9, 1912

Quickly Penitent.

An amusing incident occurred at the fish platform, Hull, England, some time ago.

As a large black dog, Rover, was standing near the edge of the platform he was very much annoyed by the conduct of a small dog, which persisted in snapping at his legs, etc. Rover for a long time bore the indignities with seeming indifference, but at length, losing all patience, he turned upon his tormentor and, seizing him by the back of his neck, dropped him into the dock.

The struggles of the unfortunate animal were viewed with apparent interest by Rover, who, at last, seeing that the poor thing could hold out no longer, jumped into the water and swam with the small dog to a boat, in which they were both safely landed.

The incident excited much laughter amongst the fishing community, many of whom witnessed the occurrence.

Life of the Broker's Boy.

When the school days end in June, where is the boy who is not fired with the ambition to get rich by tackling a job for the vacation months? Many a one of these gets the notion that working for a stock broker or a bank is just what he wants. About the time he has devoted two weeks of vacation to his new aspiration, he wakes up to the fact that he has guessed wrong. He has been lured by tales of ease into a life of toil.

Instead of reporting for duty in the neighborhood of ten o'clock, these ambitious young financiers discover that they must be in the office promptly at 8:30 o'clock, and in some cases at eight. Also they must remain until five o'clock instead of leaving at 3 or 3:30, as they had been led to expect. Worse still, the pay is not what boasting acquaintances had led them to imagine it. At the end of two weeks or so, it is remarkable how many are ready to retire from business. The next vacation may find them ready for work again—but they are likely to be content to labor for the butcher, grocer, or baker.

COULD NOT DO IT JUSTICE

Case Where Words Failed Theatrical Star Who Had Just Right to Be Indignant.

When Henry Miller is rehearing a new play he works hard and long, remaining sometimes on the stage for twenty-four hours at a stretch. Naturally, such a strain makes him nervous and the combination of nervousness and artistic temperament occasionally produces an outburst, a flare-up, a blow-off. During the rehearsals for his last play, several things had gone wrong, and Miller had exhibited his impatience in gesture and words.

He went on with the work and was in the midst of a scene in which he had to pick up a teapot. As he did so, the handle came off, the pot fell to the table, and the tea—real tea—trickled down on the actor's legs. The stage manager immediately was seized by a trembling fit, and every member of the company began to wish for a cyclone cellar. They knew the star was about to cut loose.

But this last ill of fortune had been too much for him. Holding the handle in his hand and regarding the property man with sorrow, he said gently:

"Can't you fix this teapot? I've got to scrub the floors!"—Popular Magazine.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

For mosquitoes that are always on their job, commend us to the Montgomery variety.

This is house party and picnic time but we don't have to leave the office to attend either; we've got a regular picnic running this paper.

Alabama is to have an over-dose of politics between now and 1914—elections in Alabama are getting to be as regular as ducks going bare-footed.

It is now almost positive that Clayton will enter the race for Senator Johnston's toga; in that event it will be a square dance of the old Indian variety and the "whoo-pees" that will resound throughout the state, will somewhat resemble a veritable war dance.

Teddy and his cohorts have issued their call for a Third party convention to be held in Chicago on August Fifth. Up to this writing we have heard of no Chilton County delegates who will attend. Verily it begins to look as if Teddy is to be betrayed in the house of his friends.

The Press wants to offer two prizes to its readers over eighteen years of age.

The first prize, a pretty red neck tie, to the person who gives the best answer to the following question:— Why do patrons (some patrons, not all) of the Clanton post-office lean up against the other fellows' boxes to read letters and newspapers, when it is just as easy to step back and give all an opportunity to secure mail? (Want of sense, want of politeness, don't care for the other fellows' feelings and pure cussedness will not be considered as answers.)

The second prize, a nice green neck-tie, to the party giving the best answer to this question:— Why do men and boys when they wish to engage in conversation select the middle of the side walk for such purposes, rather than step to the edge and permit others to use the walks?

Yes, we've got one more prize to offer. A pink neck-tie to the one giving the best answer to this question:— Why do men who have their jaws full of tobacco, deliberatey turn around when they wish to spit in order that they may splash up the side walk upon which ladies have to pass?

No two prizes will be given to the same individual. Answers must be written on but one side of the paper. Name must be signed, but not necessarily for publication.

We give below an article from the New York World that should prove an eve-opener to those who try to keep tab on political events. The striking part of the article is it true in all respects,

In looking over the strange sequence of dates remember that the democratic party has been doing business at the old stand without a change of name or principle since the days of its formation. Then, too, it would be well to bear in mind that T. R. has just issued his call for a new party organization to take place in August—this party is to be made up principally of republicans and will answer the question after the figures 1912. Read the figures carefully—they are interesting

A STRIKING SERIES OF DATES

Anybody who is inclined to be politically superstitious is invited to consider this curious chain of events in the history of the republican party and its ancestors.

Twenty years ago, 1892, was the year of the great populist bolt which defeated Harrison and elected Cleveland.

Twenty years before that, 1872, was the year of the liberal republican bolt which failed to defeat Grant, but which cost the republicans the house of representatives in 1874, and led to the Tilden campaign of 1876.

Twenty years before that, 1852, was the year the whig party went down to its death. It was the destruction of the whig party that brought about the organization of the republican party.

Twenty years before that, 1832, the national republican party collapsed, and the whig party was built upon its ruins.

Twenty years before that, 1812, the federalist party made its last formidable appearance in a national campaign.

It is a striking series of dates:

A LETTER FROM ACROSS THE SEAS

My dear Editor:—It may interest the readers of your valuable paper to learn something of the life of a traveler on board a trans-Atlantic liner. It is a strange yet interesting life. To be crowded with 1700 or 1800 other passengers and 800 members of a crew into a ship and yet to enjoy every comfort and luxury afforded by the best hotels in our lands—this is what it means to cross the Atlantic on one of the modern "floating palaces" as the liners are often called.

Our ship, the "AMERIKA" of the Hamburg-American line is one of the finest and largest steamers afloat. It is a little town in itself, for there are about 2800 persons on board of which almost 2000 are passengers. These passengers are divided into three classes 1st class, second class and sterage. In the 1st cabin are the wealthy people; in the 2nd are those of ordinary means, and in the sterage are the poorer, who cannot afford to pay the higher rates charged for accommodation in the cabins. The captain of the ship, an experienced fearless seaman, is the king of this little realm and everyone must obey his orders—his authority is absolute.

We have been on the water for nine days and will not arrive at our destination, Hamburg until tomorrow, June 23rd. Ordinarily this steamer makes the trip from New York to Hamburg in 8 days, but since the Titanic disaster all of the big liners have taken a longer course toward the south in order to avoid encounter with icebergs which are seen off the coast of Newfoundland until July 1st.

The average passenger spends his time in eating, sleeping, talking, walking and listening to concerts by the fine band that plays twice a day, mornings and evenings. It is impossible to do any work. The salt air and the rolling of the ship seem to lull the mind as well as the body to sleep; and every one, young or old, is more or less lazy the whole time he is on board the ship. Meals are served six times a day as follows: Breakfast 7:30 a.m.; lunch, 10 a.m.; dinner 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.; coffee 3 p.m.; supper 5:30 to 8 p.m. As a rule, the passengers retire early and rise early.

While the life on ship-board is monotonous and lazy, still it is not entirely uneventful. The passing of another ship always produces excitement, and the appearance of a wind or rain-storm is always the signal for a general rush indoors. In spite of the great weight and size of our ship—she is over 500 feet long and weighs over 20,000 tons—there is always a slight rolling and vibration perceptible, even on the calmest day. At the beginning of our trip, quite a number of the passengers, especially the ladies, were overcome by sea-sickness, and for several days there were many empty seats in the dining rooms.

Yesterday, the 21st, we "called" at Plymouth, England, and Cherbourg, France, at both of which places we lost some of our passengers who are on their way to points in England and France

To-morrow (Sunday) morning, our voyage will end, and we shall all be glad to be on shore again.

H. Kønjutzky.

BULL MOOSE CONVENTION

At a conference held this afternoon in the offices of Judge Oscar R. Hundley by those interested in the organization of a third political party in Alabama to be known as the progressive party, a call for a mass meeting to be held in this city July 24, at the city hall, was issued. This call is now being distributed for the purpose of getting signatures, but it is announced that on account of the limited time in which the progressives have to elect delegates to the national convention at Chicago, the call will not be distributed generally over the state for the present.

The call is practically the same in wording as that issued by the national leaders of the new party through the provisional committee, and concludes with the request for a convention in Birmingham to perfect organization in this state.

DEPENDED ON THE HUSBANDS

Lady Book Agent Found It the Same With Both Wife and Widow.

The Tired Lady Book Agent was having a very poor day. She had rung innumerable door bells and talked till she was hoarse to all kinds of people. She had in every case been invited in, which was a good beginning. She had told her story, gone into details of half-calf, morocco, and plain cloth bindings, but no sale had been made.

Young women and old had given the same excuse for not subscribing then and there.

"Yes, I like it very, very much, but I must consult my husband."

"Surely," the Book Agent thought, "no one can say that women disregard their husband's wishes even in these Votes-for-Women days."

Finally, late in the afternoon the last house was reached.

"Ha!" said the Book Agent, gleefully. "Here's where I get a sale. She's a widow, and she won't have to consult her husband."

So she rang the bell hopefully and was received by the Widow, who listened with great interest to the story of the merits of the books.

Just as the Book Agent was beginning to think she was making a sale the Widow sighed and said:

"No, I can't take it today. If only my dear husband were alive, I wouldn't hesitate a minute."

JOKED IN FACE OF DEATH

Last Words of Titanic's Purser, McElroy, Were Light-Hearted and Cheerful.

Charles Brown, the English comedian, lost a number of friends in the Titanic tragedy. He knew most of the officers on the ill-fated ship, and the purser, McElroy, had been his comrade for years. A recent letter from England brought to the actor the last words of McElroy—an au revoir of life which is notable for its calm British courage.

The fourth officer, Marsials, who went down with the ship and was picked up by a boat, is the man who testifies to McElroy's behavior. A small group of the Titanic staff was waiting for the final plunge. The water was lapping the deck at their very feet and the end was merely a question of a very few minutes. McElroy turned to his companions with a smile and shook hands with them, saying:

"Well, good-by, fellows; it looks like sand for breakfast tomorrow."

"That was typical of McElroy," says Brown. "He was one of the merriest, bravest men who ever lived. It was like him to have his little joke in the face of death."

Demand Sartorial Change.

Men's fashions for the summer in Berlin, will show a marked departure from conventional ideas if the leaders of a new "common sense" clothing crusade have their way. The crusaders insist that men be allowed to wear light clothing during the summer, and the stiff collars be abolished. They declare that while women can discard heavy garments as soon as hot weather begins, and clothe themselves in silks and taffetas, the men have hitherto been forced to wear tweeds and cheviots, and to encumber themselves with unnecessary articles of adornment merely because it has always been the custom. The man now insist that from July 15 to September 1, tweeds and cheviots shall be considered unfashionable by smartly-dressed men, and that lounge and semidress suits made of linen, cambric or silk material, shall be worn throughout the "season."

Philosophy of Pessimism.

The visitor dared to ask why Mr. Hardy was "so pessimistic a writer." This was the reply: "You are a young man. The cruelty of fate becomes apparent to people as they grow older. At first one may perhaps escape contact with it, but if one lives long enough one realizes that happiness is very ephemmeral." "But is not optimism a useful and sane philosophy?" the visitor asked. "There's too much sham optimism, humbugging, and even cruel optimism," Mr. Hardy retorted. "Sham optimism is really a more heartless doctrine to preach than even an exaggerated pessimism—the latter leaves one at least on the safe side. There is too much sentiment in most fiction. It is necessary for somebody to write a little mercilessly—although, of course, it's painful to have to do it."—Interview with Thomas Hardy in English Illustrated.

Microscope in the Home.

Miss Frances Stern of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is an advocate of the use of the microscope in the home as a means of assisting in the proper preparation of meals. The use of the microscope, according to Miss Stern, would help the housewife to do her work more intelligently. The bread maker, for instance, could learn why her bread was not a success by using the microscope. The housekeeper would also be able to tell the difference between wool, cotton and silk fibre, avoiding all possible deceptions.

Americus—Oh! it isn't that; it is simply that I prefer being at home with Europeans to staying at home with foreigners.

CORONER'S INQUEST

On last Friday night the dead body of Green Baker, a negro, was found dead in his cabin near Stanton with every evidence of having been murdered.

Justice J. A. Sample organized a Coroner's jury which made investigation—under the supervision of Dr. J. J. DuBose,

The verdict of the jury was as follows:

We, the Coroner's jury duly empanneled to investigate into the death of one Green Baker, colored, after making due and diligent inquiry, find that the deceased came to his death on the night of July 7th, 1912, by gun shot wounds at the hands of a party or parties unknown to this jury.

Witness our hands this the 8th day of July, 1912.

BRILLIANT ENTERTAINMENT

On Friday afternoon Mrs. J. C. Jones was hostess at her handsome home on Fourth avenue, for a prettily planned progressive alphabet party, accorded her sister, Miss Irene Jones, who is a charming visitor to our town.

Red and white carnations were disposed of in vases and containers, here and there to give an attractive touch of color to the home interior.

Miss Annie Spann, making the highest score, was awarded the hand painted hat-pin holder.

At the conclusion of the games the guests were invited into the dining room which was beautifully decorated in the national colors; red, white and blue ribbons were festooned from the chandelier to the four corners of the room; ferns and palms, forming a lovely back ground for them. Here was served an ice course in keeping with the patriotism of the week, little American flags adorning the individual cakes, and the frozen molds representing the national banner. As an adjunct to the handsome appointments of the table, a centerpiece of red and white carnations, with ropes of tulle running to the corners of the table, was a charming conceit, and was matched in the place cards at each cover.

Mrs. Jones was handsome in an all embroidery dress.

The honoree was becomingly gowned in white lingerie over pink silk.

Those invited to enjoy this gracious hospitality were: Misses Irene Jones of Birmingham, Willie and Winnie Reynolds, Mrytle and Maude Mullins, Mayme Foshee, Annie Spann of Montgomery, Ruby Downs, Kate Davis, Fannie May Haynes of Sandy Ridge, Bettie Mullins, Alee Stewart, Elna Sartor and Ethel Mullins; Mesdames G. H. Denson, Arthur Johnson, Martin Nix, J. E. Gowan, Carrie Mullins, Sam Matthews, Tipton Mullins and Gamma Anderson.

LET IT STAY

The Press prints below, a clipping from the Age-Herald and wishes to add its emphatic endorsement of the petition filed by the citizens of Mountain Creek. Capt. Faulkner, for almost a lifetime connected with the L & N Railroad as a faithful and efficient servant, made the Soldiers' Home at Mountain Creek possible; it is a state institution, a home for indigent and otherwise helpless old soldiers, who are dear to the hearts of all patriotic Alabamians. To move the depot would work a distinct hardship upon them. Its true they do not travel much but when they do wish to go they would, in all probability, be debarred from travel if the depot is moved; then, too, their visitors would be few and far between—and nothing seems to give the old veterans more pleasure than visits from their interested friends.

Again, their provisions needs must come from the cities, and the long haul that would be necessary would work another hardship. In order to save a few dollars the grasping railroad wishes to deprive the old Confederates of one of the few pleasures they have in their declining years.

WANT STATION KEPT AT MOUNTAIN CREEK

Citizens at Well Attended Meeting Request Louisville & Nashville to Abandon Idea.

MOUNTAIN CREEK, July 4.—After the lapse of years. the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company has determined to move the depot from Mountain Creek to a point one half mile away, in order to combine the agency at Marbury with the one here. Such removal would work a great hardship upon the property owners at Mountain Creek as well as upon the Soldiers' Home.

At a well attended meeting of the citizens, held on yesterday, a petition to the L & N officials was prepared, asking that they abandon the idea. In the event the petition does not receive favorable consideration the matter will be taken up with the railroad commission.

Three miles from Mountain Creek there is a fine deposit of brown iron ore. The Chilton County Mining and Manufacturing Company has just completed a narrow-gauge road to the scene of operations, and are moving toward a washer for the ore.

While the people here were all enthusiastic for Underwood, their hats are in the air for Wilson and Marshall. Not much shouting for Bryan.—Age-Herald

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping and doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. You must get out into the open air and sunlight. If you do this every day and keep your stomach and bowels in good order by taking Chamberlain's Tablets when needed, you should become both healthy and beautiful. For sale by all dealers.

BIG BARBECUE AND PICNIC

Mr. W. F. Robuck of Adams was in Clanton Monday making arrangements for a big barbecue and picnic to be given at that place next Saturday. Mr. Roebuck states that he expects to prepare meats for at least a thousand and he hopes there will be that number present.

Two or three orators have been invited to attend and expound wisdom during the day.

There is no particular significance in the occasion further than the desire on the part of the promoters to have a good time and to give a day of pleasure to their friends.

Hons. Phares Coleman of Birmingham and R. H. Mangum of Selma have been invited to make speeches during the day.

T. R., in his famous hunt in the jungles of Africa, has nothing on T. J. Roberts of Anderson, S. C., who pased through Macon, following a winter's fox hunt in Florida and south Georgia. Mr. Roberts was in a two-horse wagon, to which was attached a dog kennel, consisting of twenty hound dogs. In the wagon were 75 fox skins, the fruits of the chase. These fox hunts are annual events with Mr. Roberts, but he remained out later than usual this year.

Heat and reaction from the recent national conventions have combined to wear down the nerves of the members of the house and that branch of congress. "We will get through before the end of the month," said Representative Sherley of Kentucky. The fact that the senate has failed to act upon nine of the appropriation bills, the pending impeachment porceedings against Judge Archbald and the Stanley steel trust investigation report did not cause Mr. Sherley to change his view. "Everybody is tired of congress," he said.

"Old Bill" Miner, bandit and train robber, who recently made his second sensational escape from the Georgia penitentiary, has been captured in the sawmps of the Oconee river, near Toombsoro, W. M. Wiggins, who escaped with Miner, was also arrested. Miner and his partner had hoped to make their way to Brunswick or some other port and ship as deck hands to another country. When they escaped the men made their way to the Oconee river where they secured a boat and started down stream. They floated by night and slept by day. When they reached a few miles below Milledgeville they entered the swamps, and soon lost their way. It was for this reason that they had not gone much further distance in this time. W. J. Widecamp, the other man who escaped with Miner and Wiggins, was close by when the officers arrested the couple, and it is believed that he was drowned while attempting to make his escape.

JOHN'S FRIENDS WERE LOYAL

Young Bride Got Early Proof of the Way Men Will Stick by One Another.

The bridegroom of three months bade his wife adieu one morning and started on a business trip to a town 25 miles distant. The journey was to be made by automobile and he promised to return in time for seven o'clock dinner as usual.

But no husband appeared when dinner was served and the anxious wife watched the hands of the clock as they journeyed on and announced that the hour was midnight, and still the husband failed to appear. The frantic wife sent telegrams to six friends of the groom living in the town where he might have gone, asking if he was spending the night with them. As dawn appeared a farm wagon drove up containing a farmer and the missing husband and furnishing motor power for a broken down automobile that trailed behind. Almost simultaneously came a messenger boy with an answer to one of the telegrams, followed at intervals by five others and all of the telegrams said:

"Yes, John is spending the night with me."

Power of Vegetable Growth.

A tar macadam pavement stretching from the school of gunnery of Shoeburyness to the sea is at present in a state of violent if silent eruption, says the London Globe. About a fortnight ago the surface became covered with what may be called "blisters," raised a little above the common level, which attracted much wondering attention.

From each of these, in a few days, a series of cracks appeared, extending themselves in rays from a center. Finally came up a broad, soft shoot, looking extremely well pleased with itself and its work, which proved to be so old and well known a friend as the thistle. At this moment there are hundreds of those bold intruders showing defiantly through the pavement affording a most interesting illustration of the power of vegetable growth.

Two Indispensable Supports.

Of all the dispositions and habits that lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports.—George Washington.

Same Purpose Accomplished.

"Oh, George!" exclaimed a fond mother, when she saw her small boy considerably battered up and dirty, "you have been fighting again! How often have I told you that you shouldn't fight?"

"Well," said he, "what are you going to do when a fellow hits you?"

"Why, keep out of his way," said the mother.

"I bet," said the youngster, "he'll keep out of mine after this."

Ruling Spirit Still Strong.

Mrs. J. L. Story, who has just published a volume of reminiscences, tells of a lady relative who had all her life been afraid of damp sheets. "I never have lain in damp bedclothes while I was alive," said the old lady in a feeble whisper, "and I'm not going to do it when I'm dead."

WILSON CALM AT NEWS OF VICTORY

New Jersey Governor Grins When Word of Breaking of Deadlock Is Received.

IN BATHTUB AT THE TIME

Declares Delegates Were Voting for a Principle, Not a Man—Appreciates Honor and Hopes Party Will Not Regret It.

Sea Girt, N. J.—Governor Wilson, the Democratic nominee for president, was the calmest man in this summer capital when the news of his selection was received. The executive mansion was a storm center of political enthusiasm, but the executive himself was as tranquil as a summer day.

When the news of the breaking of the long deadlock was received over the wire from the Baltimore convention hall the governor permitted himself an expansive grin of delight and shook hands all around. Then he settled down to work, but soon the inrush of his friends put a stop to that and an impromptu reception followed.

Illinois Flop Gives Delight.

If the governor managed to conceal his pleasure over his victory in the convention, his family did not; indeed, they did not try, and his three daughters danced about the house in a whirl of happiness.

The first important news from the convention hall, the switch of Illinois to the Wilson ranks, was carried to the executive mansion by three breathless reporters shouting: "Governor, governor, Illinois has gone to you!"

At the moment the governor was in the bath tub and the only immediate reply was the sound of vigorous splashing. A moment later through the door came the assurance that Mr. Wilson was "perfectly delighted."

Says Principle, Not Man, Wins.

After the governor had finished his bath he came out to the newspaper tent on the lawn.

"It has occurred to me," he said, addressing the reporters, "that you may have wondered why I have not shown more emotion during the convention proceedings, that some of you must have thought I felt so cocksure of the result that I took the details as a matter of fact.

"Nothing could be further from the truth. My emotion is so deep that it could not effervesce; and I felt more solemn as the nomination drew closer. I feel that the delegates at Baltimore in voting for me voted not for a man, but a principle. I feel that they believed I represent them and not myself. Under a responsibility so grave I could not find it in my heart to kick up my heels in elation."

At this moment the governor's secretary announced the forty-third ballot.

"Six hundred and two votes for you, governor," he said.

"It looks like business," the governor answered. Then he said: "Have you told Mrs. Wilson?"

"No, sir, I came first to you."

"Please tell her at once," he replied.

Hears of Underwood's Withdrawal.

Governor Wilson was posing for a photograph with his wife and daughters when he was informed that Underwood had withdrawn.

"Well, I declare," said the governor. "That will give me enough; they all go to me."

Mrs. Wilson, whose native state is Georgia, said:

"The only thing I regret is that Georgia did not vote for Mr. Wilson."

When Governor Wilson received news of his nomination he said:

"The honor is as great as can come to any man by the nomination of a party, especially under the circumstances. I hope I appreciate it at its true value; but just at this moment I feel the tremendous responsibility it involves even more than I feel the honor.

"I hope with all my heart that the party will never have reason to regret it."

PASTOR IS SENT TO PRISON

Given Light Sentence After Conviction For Causing Girl's Death.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 3.—Rev. W. D. McFarland, a prominent educator, who was found guilty of causing the death of his secretary, Elsie Dodds Coe, by an operation, was sentenced to serve one year in jail and be fined 6¼ cents with costs. In sumitting its verdict the jury recommended McFarland to the extreme mercy of the court, which passed the minimum penalty in both, the old common law of the state requiring that a fine must be more than five cents.

Tafts Guests of Teutons.

Philadelphia, July 3.—A grand festival concert by the thousands of members of societies constituting the Northeastern Saengerbund, with President and Mrs. Taft as guests of honor, was the crowning event Monday night of the twenty-third saengerfest.

And Prized Above All.

Other things may be seized by might or purchased with money, but knowledge is to be gained only by effort.—Landor.

When in need of a good laxative give Garfield Tea a trial and be convinced of its merits. It is made entirely from pure herbs.

Strictly Up to Date.

Alice—How oddly some men propose.

Kate—I should say so. A gentleman asked me last week if I felt favorably disposed to a unification of interests.

Hell Gate Still an Obstacle.

The work of eliminating Hell Gate in the New York harbor has been going on for many years. A great deal of rock has been removed and the channel deepened and widened so that there is now much shipping by this point, but there is yet room for improvement and a great movement has been started with the object of cutting down the powerful current rushing at present through this narrow body of water and at the same time making other improvements for the benefit of the shipping interests.

Flattery.

Two men, highly intoxicated, were walking home from their club, arm in arm, one night, when both tumbled simultaneously over some small obstruction on the sidewalk. One rolled to the right and landed in a gutter, while the other fell to the left and slid into a little trench that some workmen had been digging and left unprotected. For some moments after the fall dead silence reigned, and then the one on the left cried:

"I say, old chap, can't you give me a bit of a lift?"

And the man on the right called back: "Oh, you flatterer!"

Willing to Oblige.

A story comes from a town where firms advertise to sell fish direct to small purchasers. The glowing advertisements asked for the sending of half a dollar with a list of the varieties of fish preferred. One letter read:

"I want two salmon, a dozen whiting, a dozen fresh herring, some flounders, and if you have them you can add a lobster."

The next day the lady received a letter which ran:

"Dear Madam: Please send another dime and we will forward the fisherman."—Dallas News.

Her Unfortunate Error.

A literary lady at a society dinner was given a seat next to a noted scientist whose views were very materialistic, and at some remark he made on the origin of mankind, the lady found her temper tried beyond all bearing, so that she retorted: "I really don't care what you say. I believe in the Bible, and there we are told that Adam was the father of all living."

"I really think you are mistaken," he said with a smile, and so the subject dropped.

A few days later the lady, writing to a bosom friend, told her of the occurrence and added: "I am too mortified, for I have looked the matter up and it only says that Eve was the mother of all living, and so I don't know whether to write to the professor or not."

Little and Big Religion.

This story comes from Australia, where all conversation turns eventually to matters educational, because every parent is painfully anxious that his sons shall pass the standard which will free them from certain years of military service. A visitor was conversing with his host's small son, and opened, as a matter of course, with the words: "Do you go to school now?"

"Yes."

"And what do you learn? Reading, writing, sums?"

"Oh, yes, and I learn religion, too."

"Religion?"

"Yes, I learn the little religion, which teaches that we all come from Adam. But my elder brother is in a higher class; he learns the big religion, and that teaches that we all come from monkeys."—Manchester Guardian.

"Now, sir," asked the lawyer, "can you give me the true facts in this case?"

The witness hesitated.

"Well, sir, can't you answer?"

"I was just wondering," said the witness, "whether or not a true fact argues the existence of an untrue fact; and, to carry the idea a little further, what might be the precise shade of difference between a true fact and an untrue falsehood; or, on the other hand, if there is any real distinction between an untrue fact and a true falsehood. At Dinard one summer there was a beautiful young countess, the wife of a millionaire, whose bathing dress was —well—

A couple of men about town were talking in shocked tones about the countess' bathing dress on the casino terrace.

"It's shocking; it's most improper," said the first.

"But," said the second, "I can't believe it's any worse than the dinner dress she wore at Mrs. Hughes-Hallet's last night.

"Oh, well," said the other, "she had her diamonds on then."—Rochester Evening Telegram.

A NEWSPAPER MIX UP

FORMER EDITOR NOT ON HIS JOB

Considerable excitement was caused upon the streets of Clanton early last week by the report that the recent editor of the "Union-Banner"—Mr. B. M. Crutcher—had absconded from the town with a sum of money belonging to the company and had forged several checks for various amounts.

Mr. Crutcher, since he came to Clanton to assume charge of the Union-Banner, had made himself particularly agreeable to those with whom he came in contact and many were loathe to believe the rumors rife upon the street.

However, he and his brother, who had been connected with the paper, returned from Birmingham Monday morning of last week to face the charges made against them. They were accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Smitherman and Mr. Jno. VanDerveer. No arrests had been made, so we understand, tho' they had been placed in charge of police officers in Birmingham, who detained the two brothers till the departure of the south bound train for Clanton.

They being willing to return without arrest, no warrants were secured for them; it was stated, however, that if they refused to return willingly they would be placed in jail and held till warrants could be secured. Their willingness to return, or rather the willingness of B. M. Crutcher to return without the warrant, saved him a night—or part of a night in jail. Upon their arrival here negotiations were started for the straightening out of the differences existing. It seems that Mr. Crutcher had purchased a number of shares of stock in the "Union Publishing Company" for which he had given his note, payable at some future time and had afterward, before the maturity of the notes, sold the stock to Mr. Crichton, former owner of the Banner—which had been merged with the Union—for spot cash. The trade having been made, Mr. Crutcher pocketed the money and left Clanton, presumably without intention of returning—though no one is able to affirm this. Upon his return with the officer, as above stated, a consultation was held with a view to straightening out the matter.

Mr. Crutcher's books were examined and it was ascertained that instead of him being short, the Company owed him fifteen dollars; instead of being over-drawn at the bank, as was reported, he had a small amount to his credit. Mr. Crutcher made good, so we understand, the amount of his outstanding note or notes and left the following evening for Birmingham. He has not since returned, and it is not thought he will return.

Our information goes that Mr. Crichton, formerly of the Banner, now owns a majority of stock in the Union Publishing Company, having purchased enough stock from Mr. Crutcher to secure a majority, and that he will continue the management and control of the company.

The information here given was not secured from Mr. Crichton, but it does come from those who are in position to know.

Just what the future of the paper will be cannot be foretold till those who own the stock in the company have had a meeting to determine its future course.

The Press would have made mention last week of the matter, but it wishes to done one injustice and waited till information at first hand could be obtained.

Mr. Crutcher, when he left Clanton, stated to a few friends that there would be future developments, but that he preferred not to talk at this time.

While talking of newspapers—and particularly of the Union—i may not be uninteresting to state that rumor has it upon the streets that Mr. W. C. Miller, late owner of the Union, proposes to start the publication at Thorsby of a "Progressive" paper in the interests of the Roosevelt-Johnson ticket of the Republican party; whether the rumor be true or not could not be ascertained, but if true, newspaperdom will again be booming in Chilton.

A Nervous Woman Finds Relief After Many Years

Women who suffer from extreme nervousness, often endure much suffering before finding any relief. Mrs. Daniel Kintner, of Defiance, O., had such an experience, regarding which she says:

"I had stomach trouble when I was eighteen years old that broke down my health, and for years I suffered with nervousness, headache, indigestion and nervous spasms. The spasms got so bad I would have them three or four times a week. After trying nearly every remedy recommended, I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I must say it helped me wonderfully. I have had no severe nervousness for several years."

MRS. DAN KINTNER,
1003 Pleasant St., Defiance, O.

Many remedies are recommended for diseases of the nervous system that fail to produce results because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. Dr. Miles' Nervine has proven its value in such cases so many times that it is unnecessary to make claims for it. You can prove its merits for yourself by getting a bottle of your druggist, who will return the price if you receive no benefit.

MRS. PINCKARD ENTERTAINS

One of the most beautiful entertainments ever given in Clanton was that last Monday night at the elegant home of Mr. aud Mrs. E. W. Pinckard on Seventh street, in honor of Misses Lizzie Mae Hare of Tuskegee, Mary Ellen Baldwin of Verbena, and Willietta Stringfellow of Montgomery, charming guests of Miss Bessie VanDerveer.

The house was brilliantly lighted with electric bulbs, enclosed in pearl-colored tissue, elegant chandelabra and tall sentinel lamps scattered about through the several apartments. The decorations consisted of ferns, cut flowers and potted plants.

More than fifty couples enjoyed Mrs. Pinckard's hospitality, who is a most gracious hostess.

The hours were spent in games of various kinds, particularly hearts and anagrams, after which the prizes were awarded as follows —to Miss Hare, the honoree, a cut glass toilet bottle; to Miss Willie Reynolds, who made the highest score, a cut glass vase; and to Mr. Claude Reynolds, the gentlemen's prize, an exquisite white satin tie.

After the games had been decided and the prizes distributed, delicious refreshments were served in Mrs. Pinckard's characteristically charming manner.

Every moment of the hours spent were enjoyed to the full and when the we' sma' hours of the night arrived, so light hearted and free were the guests and so pleasantly had glided the hours that each was loathe to depart.

Mrs. Pinckard was ably assisted by her sister, Mrs. A. E. Garner of Gotham, who is herself a most charming matron and an entertainer of rare ability.

ALABAMA GIRLS TECHNICAL INSTITUTE

The catalogue for the Alabama Girls Technical Institute for session 1911-12 has just come from the press. The attendance reached the number 505, which is the largest in the history of the Institute. Among those from Chilton county may be mentioned: Misses Ellie Coleman, Maplesville; Edna Gentry, Lawley; Elise Hall, Thorsby; Sula Mae Morgan, Maplesville; Willie Mae Parnell, Riderville; Annie Reynolds, Jemison; Willie Reynolds, Winnie Reynolds, Bertha Smith, Clanton; Ruby Young, Stanton.

The records show that these girls made a high stand in their classes.

Several new teachers have been added to the Faculty to meet the requirements for increased attendance.

In no other college can a girl get the combined academic and practical education.

MOUNTAIN CREEK

Mr. Geo. W. Cobern of Mountain Creek and Mrs. R. E. Pomroy of Chicago, Ill., were quietly married at the home of our pastor, Rev. A. D. Glass, on the evening of July 11. Mrs. Cobern is a very handsome woman, and Mr. Cobern is one of our best citizens and a successful merchant. They have the best wishes of a host of friends.

"The Workers" of the Mountain Creek Baptist church met at the home of our pastor Thursday evening and gave him a surprise party on his 42nd birthday. We found him unusually bright and happy, as he had his mother and his entire family with him, all enjoying good health. We first took up one hour in the study of our Sunday School lesson for next Sunday, then a large cake with 42 lighted candles was brought into the room and all present cut a slice of cake and expressed a wish to our pastor; when this service was finished all were invited to the front porch and were treated to fresh watermelons grown by the pastor. It is needless to say that all present enjoyed the occasion.

The 5th District Sunday School Convention will meet with us on Wednesday the 17th and we hope to have a large and enthusiastic attendance.

Respectfully,
E. L. Thornton

UNHEEDED WARNING

Notwithstanding the fact that the city marshal has given notice both by publication and otherwise that it is contrary to law for persons to hitch teams to posts on or near the side walks of the city, some of our country friends persist in violating that ordinance and in ignoring the notice. Last week someone hitched a fractious mule to a telephone pole on Eighth street. His muleship stood the hitching fairly well for a while but finally became irriated. After pulling and jerking at the pole for half an hour or two he succeeded in pulling it down—prone upon the ground—and with it came the telephone wires in that neighborhood. The mule was uninjured but the telephone company will have to go to considerable expense to repair their broken wires and the lost post, while the owner of the fractious mule was put to consideaable trouble in chasing his animal down. It might have been worse; there are a number of electric light wires in that particular vicinity and one of these, if broken and dragging along the ground would cause death to anyone who happened to touch it.

Little strips of paper tacked on posts, however, serve but poor notice at best. Signs large enough to read should be posted and the offenders arrested and fined. A few applications of this medicine would work a permanent cure.

What's the use of having an ordinance if it is not to be enforced?

CLANTON. DEMOPOLIS, GREENSBORO

The clipping below, taken from the Age-Herald correspondence at Greensboro, will be pleasing intelligence to many of the young lady's Clanton friends.

Miss Peake will be pleasantly remembered as the teacher of the intermediate grades at Clanton Academy year before last.

Last year she had charge of an important department in the Demopolis city schools, and tho' re-elected to the same position for the coming scholastic year, has accepted a position on the teaching force of the Greensboro city school —one of the very best in the state.

Miss Mamie Caddell of Gadsden, who has taught in the public school here for several years, tendered her resignation recently. At a meeting of the board of trustees Miss Inez Peake of Selma was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Miss Caddell's resignation.

HOUSE PARTY CLOSES

SEASON OF PLEASURE ENDS.

The house party tendered by Mr. Sam Latham to his friends came to a close last Monday morning.

All in all it was a most delightful season of recreation and pleasure; but one incident occurred to mar the pleasure of the week. Almost at the close of the party Mrs. Phares Coleman received a telegram announcing the death of Judge Jonathan Haralson of Montgomery, an intimate friend of the family, which called her away from the "camp." Otherwise the seven days of merry making were unalloyed. What matters it if occasionally Barney Roberts did have to sneak off and buy a ham or if Tom Woods hiked himself to town and loaded down with cheese sandwiches, wasn't that in it?

Who ever heard of a house party in the woods where they did not "Angelfy" cake and pie graus" all the while?

What's the difference if a quarrel or two took place as to whom was the best looking young lady—wasn't this natural among a lot of love-sick swains?

Anyway they all had a delightful time and were loathe to "break camp" when the hour for separation came.

The young ladies and the chaperones went away highly pleased with the week's outing and the young men have scored a success socially as well as musically. For instance: Barney Roberts wabbles most beautifully that sweet little ballad "I gave four bits for a slice of ham" and he puts his whole soul into the song for it comes from an experience but seldom gained. Bill Mullins' sweet tenor can be heard at almost any time giving snatches of that catchy little tune "They gave me ten cents to buy a dinner for twelve," while Joe VanDerveer in his own inimitable style whispers sweetly to every passing breeze "I'd do anything in the world FOR YOU!" and "Wilky" was never known so well as when he gives utterance to those heartfelt expressions "It's a shame to let her die in pain."

The party was a decided success; all who attended were glad they went and are looking forward to the coming Summer when again they shall assemble at Mineral Springs for an outing.

Messrs. Jos. VanDerveer, Everett Wilkinson and Tom Woods entertained the entire Latham house party at an elaborate dinner Monday at the Palmer hotel.

SAMARIA

Dear Editor:

Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words. Health of this community is good. We are having plenty of rain now; the people of this place are praying to the most High and lowly master that we may have a good and glorious meeting the week following the First Sunday in August. It seems that most of the people are glad for the meeting and the help, which consists of Rev. J. O. Williams of Birmingham, one among the graduates of Howard College.

The Society at this place expects to meet and have a debate. Subject: Resolved, That the Divorce Laws Should Be more Stringent. Just come and see who the speakers are, also those who are going to recite for us. Come along and be with the rest of the folks that night.

WILL STAY LONGER

We are pleased to say that the Great Andes has consented to remain with us for some time yet. He had thought of going away on July 20, but in response to the urgent request of so many of our people he will make his headquarters at the drug store of the Upchurch Drug Co., in Clanton until Saturday, July 27.

Many of our people are taking the Great Andes Treatment and are being speedily cured of catarrh, indigestion, rheumatism, liver and kidney trouble and pain in the back and we urge all those so afflicted not to miss this great opportunity to be cured.

CABBAGE SNAKE FOUND

CARE SHOULD BE EXERCISED; EXTREMELY POISONOUS

Last Saturday, out on the place of W. S. Turrentine, a colored preacher living several miles south of Clanton, a genuine cabbage snake was found. It seems that the daughter of Turrentine was preparing a cabbage for dinner when she discovered a peculiar looking worm imbedded in the head of the cabbage. She showed the cabbage to her father, who took it over to Mr. N. J. Calloway's and there a careful examination was made. From all accounts it was a genuine cabbage snake—a very poisonous worm or snake which finds its home in the heart of the cabbage, and if not discovered, and cooked with the cabbage, proves fatal in a large number of cases.

Besides Mr. Calloway, his wife and daughter examined the "reptile" and each pronounced it a genuine cabbage snake. The little fellow was not larger than the larger straws of an ordinary broom and was about two and a half or three inches long. Its color somewhat resembles the cabbage plant so that it is not an easy matter to detect one when lodged in the head of the cabbage.

Unfortunately this particular snake was killed soon after examination; the Press would have been glad to have sent it to the agricultural department for further examination.

However, it is reasonable to suppose that where one exists there are others, so that our friends who indulge in cabbage eating would do well to make a thorough examination before undertaking to cook and serve this very delectable dish.

DEATH OF AN INFANT

LITTLE EDITH RUFFIN TAKEN BY THE ANGELS.

On the morning of Monday, July 15th, exactly nine months after the birth of the precious little girl, the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Ruffin and bore away to mansions beyond the skies the spirit of their little daughter Edith.

The little girl was the life and light of the household and its merry prattle made glad the hearts of the fond father and affectionate mother many times when otherwise the spirit of loneliness might have brooded over the home.

Some days ago this precious little infant was stricken with fever; at the same time the father was confined to his bed with an attack of fever, yet all that loving hearts and tender hands could do was accomplished in her behalf; nevertheless God willed it otherwise and He whose ways are past finding out summonsed the sweet spirit of this little girl to be brought before Him for higher and better missions in that land where sorrow never comes and where the weary are forever at rest.

The funeral services took place Monday afternoon, being conducted by Rev. W. M. Olive of the Baptist church and the interment was had at Clanton cemetery.

RATHER A STRANGE ACCIDENT

Mr. Jno. W. Stanfield received last Saturday a telephone message from Mr. Jesse O. Ray living in Prattville, that during the day his wife had put their infant child, a daughter of three months, to sleep in her crib, and to protect the child from flies and mosquitoes, had placed a small mosquito net over the child; before anyone was aware of the fact the netting had slipped from its place and become wrapped around the head of the child, smothering it to death.

Mr. Ray will be pleasantly remembered by residents of Clanton he having lived here many years before going to Prattville.

BEARLAX
SUBSTITUTE FOR CALOMEL

For old people, BEARLAX has no equal. When a person passes middle life the power of digestion diminishes, the muscles of stomach and bowels are no longer active as in youth, and therefore action of the bowels become more and more difficult. BEARLAX furnishes the necessary assistance and is the ideal laxative for old people, as well as for children and younger men and women. Old people, especially, should beware of calomel and other strong purgatives—the bowels cannot stand it—they require the gentle, non-griping BEARLAX (liquid laxative.)

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into a gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain.

"Oh, God! Oh, God!" he cried in his humiliation and shame, "if I had only met you first, or if my wife had died as others die, and not by my hand in that awful hour. I can see her now, broken, bruised, bleeding, torn. I can hear the report of that weapon; her last glance at me in the midst of her indescribable agony was one of thankfulness and gratitude. I can't stand it, I am unworthy even of her."

"But you could not help it, it was not your fault. And you can't help—caring—for me—"

"I ought to help it, I ought not love you, I ought to have known that I was not fit to love any woman, that I had no right, that I was pledged like a monk to the past. I have been weak, a fool. I love you and my honor goes, I love you and my self-respect goes, I love you and my pride goes. Would to God I could say I love you and my life goes and end it all." He stared at her a little space. "There is only one way of satisfaction in it all, one gleam of comfort," he added.

"And what is that?"

"You don't know what the suffering is, you don't understand, you don't comprehend."

"And why not?"

"Because you do not love me."

"But I do," said the woman quite simply as if it were a matter of course not only that she should love him, but that she should also tell him so.

The man started at her strange words. Such fierce surges of joy throbbed through him as he had not thought the human frame could sustain. This woman loved him, in some strange way he had gained her affection. It was impossible, yet she had said so! He had been a blind fool. He could see that now. She stood before him and smiled up at him, looking at him through eyes misted with tears, with lips parted, with color coming and going in her cheek and with her bosom rising and falling. She loved him, he had but to step nearer to her to take her in his arms. There was a trust, devotion, surrender, everything, in her attitude, and between them like that great gulf which lay between the rich man and the beggar, that separated heaven and hell, was that he could not cross.

"I never dreamed, I never hoped—oh," he exclaimed as if he got his death wound, "this cannot be borne."

He turned away but in two swift steps she caught him.

"Where do you go?"

"Out, out into the night."

"You cannot go now, it is dark; hark to the storm, you would miss your footing you would fall, you would freeze, you would die."

"What matters that?"

"I cannot have it."

"It would be better so."

He strove again to wrench himself away, but she would not be denied. She clung to him tenaciously.

"I will not let you go unless you give me your word of honor that you will not leave the plateau, and that you will come back to me."

"I tell you that the quicker and more surely I go out of life, the happier and better it will be for you."

"And I tell you," said the woman resolutely, "that you can never go out of my life again, living or dead." She released him with one hand and laid it upon her heart. "You are here."

"Enid," cried the man.

"No," she thrust him gently away with one hand yet detained him with the other—that was emblematic of the situation between them. "Not now, not yet, let me think, but promise me you will do yourself no harm, you will let nothing imperil your life."

"As you will," said the man regretfully. "I had purposed to end it now and forever, but I promise."

"Your word of honor?"

"My word of honor."

"And you won't break it."

"I never broke it to a human being, much less will I do so to you!"

She released him, he went into the other room and she heard him cross the floor and open the door and go out into the night, into the storm again.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Ghost Within Control.

Left alone in the room she sank down again before the fire and, with her head pillowed on her arms, she knew them by heart, she had read and reread them often when she had been alone. They had fascinated her. They were letters from some other man to this man's wife. They were signed by an initial only and the identity of the writer was quite unknown to her. The woman's replies were not with the others, but it was easy enough to see what those replies had been. All the passion of which the woman had been capable had evidently been bestowed upon the writer of the letters she had treasured.

Her story was quite plain. She had married Newbold in a fit of pique. He was an eastern man, the best educated, the most fascinating and interesting of the men who frequented the camp. There had been a quarrel between the letter writer and the woman; there were always quarrels, apparently, but this had been a serious one and the man had savagely flung away and left her. He had not come back as he usually did. She had waited for him and then he had come back—too late!

He had wanted to kill the other, but she had prevented, and while Newbold was away he had made desperate love to her. He had besought her to leave her husband to go away with him. He had used every argument that he could to that end and the woman had hesitated and wavered, but she had not consented; she had not denied her love for him any more than she had denied her respect and a certain admiration for her gallant, trusting husband. She had refused again and again the requests of her lover. She could not control her heart, nevertheless she had kept to her marriage vows. But the force of her resistance had grown weaker and she had realized that alone she would perhaps inevitably succumb.

Her lover had been away when her husband returned prior to the last fateful journey. Enid Maitland saw now why she had besought him to take her with him, she was afraid to be left alone! She did not dare depend upon her own powers any more; her only salvation was to go with this man whom she did not love, whom at times she almost hated, to keep from falling into the arms of the man she did love. She had been more or less afraid of Newbold. She had soon realized, because she was not blinded by any passion as he, that they had been utterly mismated. She had come to understand that when the same knowledge of the truth came to him, as it inevitably must some day, nothing but unhappiness would be their portion.

Every kind of an argument in addition to those so passionately adduced in these letters urging her to break away from her husband and to seek happiness for herself while yet there was time, besieged her heart, seconded her lover's plea and assailed her will, and yet she had not given way.

Now Enid Maitland hated the woman who had enjoyed the first young love of the man she herself loved. She hated her because of her priority of possession, because her memory yet came between her and that man. She hated her because Newbold was still true to her memory, because Newbold, believing in the greatness of her passion for him, thought it shame and dishonor to his manhood to be false to her, no matter what love and longing drew him on.

Yet there was a stern sense of justice in the bosom of this young woman. She exulted in the successful battle the poor woman had made for the preservation of her honor and her good name, against such odds. It was a sex triumph for which she was glad. She was proud of her for the stern rigor with which she had refused to take the easiest way and the desperation with which she had clung to him she did not love, but to whom she was bound by the laws of God and man, in order that she might not fall into the arms of the man she did love, in defiance of right.

Enid Maitland and this woman were as far removed from each other as the opposite poles of the earth, but there was yet a common quality in each one of virtuous womanhood, of lofty morality. Natural, perhaps in the one and to be be expected; unnatural, perhaps, and to be unexpected in the other, but there! Now that she knew what love was and what its power and what its force—for all that she had felt and experienced and dreamed about before were as nothing to what it was since he had spoken—she could understand what the struggle must have been in that woman's heart. She could honor her, reverence her, pity her.

She could understand the feeling of the man too; she could think much more clearly than he. He was distracted by two passions, for his pride and his honor and her he loved, hated yet but one, despised.

She could understand now in the true proportion of things the writer of the letters, the ghost of suspicion to enter my mind. It may have been a brother, or her father in his youth."

"And why did you wear it?"

"Because I took it from her dead heart. Some day I shall find out who the man is and when I shall I know there will be nothing to her discredit in the knowledge."

Enid Maitland nodded her head. She closed the locket, laid it on the table and pushed it away from her. So this was the man the woman had loved, who had begged her to go away with him, this handsome Armstrong who had come within an ace of winning her own affection, to whom she was in some measure pledged!

How strangely does fate work out its purposes. Enid had come from the Atlantic seaboard to be the second woman that both these two men loved!

If she ever saw Mr. James Armstrong again, and she had no doubt that she would, she would have some strange things to say to him. She held in her hands now all the threads of the mystery, she was master of all the solutions, and each thread was a chain that bound her.

"My friend," she said at last with a deep sigh, "you must forget this night and go on as before. You love me, thank God for that, but honor and respect interpose between us. And I love you, and I thank God for that, too, but for me as well the same barrier rises. Whether we shall ever surmount these barriers God alone knows. He brought us together, he put that love in our hearts, we will have to leave it to him to do as he will with us both. Meanwhile we must go on as before."

"No," cried the man, "you impose upon me tasks beyond my strength; you don't know what love is, you don't know the heart hunger, the awful madness I feel. Think, I have been alone with a recollection for all these years, a man in the dark, in the night; and the light comes, you are here. The first night I brought you here I walked that room on the other side of that narrow door like a lion pent up in bars of steel. I had only my own love, my own passionate adoration to move me then, but now that I know you love me, that I see it in your eyes, that I hear it from your lips, that I mark it in the beat of your heart, can I keep silent? Can I live on and on? Can I see you, touch you, breathe the same air with you, be pent up in the same room with you hour after hour, day after day, and go on as before? I can't do it, it is an impossibility. What keeps me now from taking you in my arms and from kissing the color into your cheeks, from making you like my own, from drinking the life from your eyes?" He swayed nearer to her, his voice rose. "What restrains me?" he demanded.

She Was Utterly Unable to Suppress an Exclamation.

Popular French Coins.

Writing from Paris, Victor Auburtin says of the New French coins that for hygienic reasons and to reduce the weight the old coppers will soon be replaced in the circulating currency by little nickel pieces, some of which will have holes. No one will deny, he says, that the copper pieces are unclean and that they may be the means of spreading disease, but still the French people will part with them reluctantly. The pieces coined in the early 50's bear Napoleon's head. In 1859, after Solferino, a laurel wreath was put on the head. The coins of the republic had handsome women's heads. And these historical monuments will now disappear—monuments which one may carry in his pocket; and they have this advantage of those of marble and bronze: they can be exchanged for oranges.

Something Bound to Happen.

A young man who had been born and reared in the back woods went to Chicago and made a lot of money. Then he returned to his native village and asked his father to take a trip to the Windy City. The old man, however, was not enthusiastic over the proposition. He had read of fires, motor car accidents and other catastrophes in big cities. Finally, after much argument and persuasion on the part of his son the father reluctantly consented to undertake the journey. At a little country station he was panic stricken and tried to get permission to go back home. Once on the train his nerve began to revive and all went well until the train dashed into a tunnel as black as night. When this happened the old man grabbed his umbrella, hit his son a whack on the head and cried out:

"I knew something would happen. I've gone blind!"—Popular Magazine.

SALLOW FACES

Often Caused by Tea and Coffee Drinking.

How many persons realize that tea and coffee so disturb digestion that they produce a muddy, yellow complexion?

A ten days' trial of Postum has proven a means, in thousands of cases, of clearing up a bad complexion.

A Washn. young lady tells her experience:

"All of us—father, mother, sister and brother—had used tea and coffee for many years until finally we all had stomach troubles, more or less.

"We all were sallow and troubled with pimples, bad breath, disagreeable taste in the mouth, and all of us simply so many bundles of nerves.

"We didn't realize that tea and coffee caused the trouble until one day we ran out of coffee and went to borrow some from a neighbor. She gave us some Postum and told us to try that.

"Although we started to make it, we all felt sure that we would be sick if we missed our strong coffee, but we tried Postum and were surprised to find it delicious.

"We read the statements on the pkg., not more and in a month and a half you wouldn't have known us. We all were able to digest our food without any trouble, each one's skin became clear, tongues cleared off, and nerves in fine condition. We never use anything now but Postum. There is nothing like it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ACTIVITY CONTINUES IN STEEL OPERATIONS

News as Regards Economic Matters Encouraging.

New York.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The volume of business reaches seasonable proportions. With abundant harvests which now seem assured there should be an early and heavy demand for merchandise. Production has been slightly curtailed because of the hot weather and the necessity of making repairs, while difficulty in getting adequate labor has delayed the blowing in of several eastern blast furnaces. Pressure for deliveries of all kinds of finished products, however, continues a significant feature of the situation. Quietness prevails in pig iron and no large contracts are pending, yet bases are firm. There has been an advance of $2 a ton on iron pipe and steel hoops, and bands also are stronger. One of the prominent railroads has called for bids on more terminal work, while additional marine construction will require a considerable tonnage of steel plate.

In dry goods jobbers, while buying steadily, still display conservatism in the operations and are not inclined to purchase freely until they have more fully ascertained the trend of the fall demand. Drills and sheeting hold steady with the best known mills sold up to September, while tickings and denims are steady. Bleached cottons tend to a higher level on moderate sales and print cloths are firm with very light stocks. Miscellaneous export trade is good but there is little demand from the far east.

In woolens and worsteds the leading manufacturers are well supplied with orders for fall, some being so fully engaged that they are not seeking new business. Announcement is made that the high cost of wool, advance in wages and shorter hours will lead to enhanced prices. Worsted yarns are very firm with most mills well provided with business, but cotton yarns, while slightly stronger, are in light demand. New England footwear manufacturers are resuming operations following the usual closing down at this season and many buyers are in the Boston markets. Prices asked are higher and both leather and hides are in demand at the advanced quotation.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Most news as regards economic matters is encouraging. Favorable crop progress, improved sentiment as to the future, maintained activity in finished steel operations, some growth in buying for fall, a good half year's business in textile and manufacturing, accelerated building operations and better retail trade due to widespread clearance sales comprehend the leading favorable features revealed by the week's reports.

Some buyers already have visited western markets and they have made good purchases of dry goods and allied lines for future delivery and although conservatism, bred either of high food prices, uncertainty as to political trends, or desirous to know more about probable crop prices still is in evidence. At the same time it must be admitted buyers of dry goods in general are disposed to defer purchases because of high prices, but withal the market continues to harden and mill agents appear to be very firm about quotations. However, some reports indicate that there has been over production of ginghams. But on the other hand the fine goods market is somewhat perturbed by news of labor dissensions in New Bedford and while these may not eventuate into strikes it is noteworthy that some mills have turned down business for next spring, because they are not certain about their ability to make deliveries. Collections are perhaps fair with positive slowness still existing in the south.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending July 11 were 252 against 170 last week, 196 in the like week and 1911, 202 in 1910, 206 in 1909, and 258 in 1908.

Business failures increased for the week 28, which contrasts with 22 for last and 22 in the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending July 11 aggregate 2,495,407 against 2,993,538 last week and 1,801,083 this week last spring.

For the two weeks ending July 11 exports are 5,488,945 bushels against 3,348,358 in the corresponding period last year.

Corn exports for the week are 126,179 bushels against 83,272 last week and 898,391 in 1911. For the two weeks ending July 11 corn exports are 209,451 bushels against 1,874,408 last year.

A Question of Names.

In some of the country districts of Ireland it is not an uncommon thing to see carts with the owners' names chalked on to save the expense of painting. Practical jokers delight in rubbing out these signs to annoy the owners.

A constabulary sergeant one day accosted a countryman whose name had been thus wiped out unknown to him.

"Is this your cart, my good man?"

"Of course it is!" was the reply. "Do you see anything the matter wid it?"

"I observe," said the pompous policeman, "that your name is o'blitherated."

"Then ye're wrong," quoth the countryman, who had never come across the long word before, "for me name's O'Flaherty, and I don't care who knows it."—Youth's Companion.

SOLACE IN HIS MISFORTUNE

Entombed Miner Had at Least One Pleasant Thought After Two Days of Suffering.

Miners are among the most heroic people in the world. Danger is always beside them, and they are schooled to believe that at any time they may come face to face with death. The result of this is that they are humorous in their boldness.

In one of the mines of Pennsylvania there was a cave-in which imprisoned a miner named Jack Thornton. The accident happened on Friday afternoon, and the fellow laborers of the entombed man set to work at once to dig him out. It was not until Sunday morning, however, that they reached his prison chamber, and by this time they were wondering whether he had been suffocated or starved to death. One of them stuck his head through the aperture made by the picks of the rescuers and called out:

"Jack, are you all right?"

"All right," came the reply, and then after a pause: "What day is this?"

"Sunday!" exclaimed the friend.

"Gee!" exclaimed Jack, "I'm glad of that. That was one Saturday night when those saloonkeepers didn't get my wages."—Popular Magazine.

Making Cheese in Olden Days.

Cheese was made by the old-time farmers in the summer on the co-operative plan by which four cattle owners owning say 14 milch cows, received all the milk night and morning, according to the daily yield of their little herd. Thus given two families having five cows each, one with three and one with one, supposing that the average yield per cow was the same, in two weeks, two owners would make five cheeses each; one would press three, and one only one cheese, but this one would be as good and as large as any of the rest.—"Nobility of the Trades—The Farmer," Charles Winslow Hall, in National Magazine.

"We's a-huntin'," was the reply, "fo' some mo' of dem macaroni worms."

Simple Explanation.

To illustrate a point that he was making—that his was the race with a future and not a race with a past—Booker T. Washington told this little story the other day.

He was standing by his door one morning when old Aunt Caroline went by.

"Good morning, Aunt Caroline," he said. "Where are you going this morning?"

"Lawzee, Mista' Wash'ton," she replied. "I'se done been whar I'se gwine."—Kansas City Star.

The Heirloom.

A Pittsburg drummer in a small town dropped into a place to get a bite to eat. The place looked familiar, but he didn't know the proprietor.

"Been running this place long?" inquired the drummer.

"No; I just inherited it from my father."

"Ah, yes. I knew him. I recognize this old cheese sandwich on the counter."

Practical Version.

Mrs. Knicker—Laugh and the world laughs with you.

Mrs. Bocker—Weep and you get a present.

It is not easy to be a widow; one must resume all the modesty of girlhood without being allowed even to feign ignorance.—Mme. De Girardin.

Even your best friends haven't time to do much worrying on your account.

If your digestion is a little off color a course of Garfield Tea will do you good.

STATES AWAKING TO DANGER

Additional Hospital Beds for the Treatment of the Tuberculous Are Being Established.

Nearly 4,000 additional hospital beds for consumptives in 29 states were provided during the year ending June 1, according to a statement issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. This makes a total of over 30,000 beds, but only about one for every indigent tuberculosis patient in this country.

In the last five years, the hospital provision for consumptives has increased from 14,428 in 1907, to over 30,000 in 1912, or over 10 per cent. New York state leads in the number of beds, having 8,350 on June 1; Massachusetts comes next with 2,800; and Pennsylvania a close third with 2,700. Alabama showed the greatest percentage of increase in the last year by adding 57 new beds to its 42 a year ago. Georgia comes next with 109 beds added to 240 a year ago. New York has the greatest numerical increase, having provided over 1,800 additional beds in the year.

The Moon's Offspring.

Looking out of the window one evening, little Marie saw the bright, full moon in the eastern sky, and, apparently, only a few inches from it, the beautiful Jupiter, shining almost as brightly as the moon itself. Marie gazed intently at the spectacle for a moment, and then turning to her mother, exclaimed:

"Oh, mother, look! The moon has laid an egg!"

Don't Take Calomel Bond's Pills Are Better

They do not sicken or gripe.
They do not "tear you to pieces."

No Social Tact.

At a club dance an enthusiastic member approached a rather dull member and said unto him:

"Say, for heaven's sake go over and talk to Miss Fryte. She is sitting all by herself."

"But—but what shall I say to her?"

"Tell her how pretty she is."

"But she ain't pretty."

"Well, then tell her how ugly the other girls are. Ain't you got no social tact?"

Brilliant baseball plays are diamond sparkles.

A better thing than tooth powder to cleanse and whiten the teeth, remove tartar and prevent decay is a preparation called Paxtine Antiseptic. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

The Usual Way.

"Yes; he committed political suicide."

"How can a man commit political suicide?"

"By shooting off his mouth."

Finance.

Stella—How do you suppose they will finance a third party?

Bella—Don't know; I can't make father pay for one.

Try Hicks' CAPUDINE. It's liquid—pleasant to take—effects immediate—good to prevent Sick Headaches and Nervous Headaches also. Your money back if not satisfied. 10c., 25c. and 50c. at medicine stores.

Another Matter.

Hewitt—We aim to please.

Jewett—But what do you hit?

Lest you forget when next in need of a laxative remember the name "Garfield Tea." A trial will convince you of its merits.

It's easier to lead some men to drink than it is to drive them away from it.

Garfield Tea is a fine laxative being composed wholly of pure, health-giving herbs.

When a man is down and out his friends are soon up and away.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Theraplon, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Theraplon is soldby druggists or mail $1.00. Fougera Co., 90 Beekman St., New York.

JUDGE REYNOLDS NOT ATTACHED

In the words of the Bingville Bugle, Judge Reynolds of Chilton county, is turribly put to, as you might say. Be-hanged if the Judge will confess to his party affiliations now. He was probate judge by the grace of the republican voters of his section.

Where now—oh, where is the Judge? Asserting that he is against the democrats, he smiles and blushes when asked whether he is a republican or a progressive. He may know he is for Taft or for Roosevelt, but he would make no acknowledgements to a group of friends in the Governor's office Monday.

The Judge is either guessing, or he prefers to keep his friends guessing. He laughed good naturedly when cornered, but the Judge was embarressed, plainly so. He could not hold his own—just gave up and let himself be laughed at.—Montgomery Advertiser.

The clipping above taken from the Advertiser of last Tuesday would not be such interesting reading if there were not some "side lights" to adorn the tale. Of course, it is not the business of the Press to interfere in republican politics but when we see things it is rather difficult for us to do the clam-act and keep shut.

That Talladega republican convention last Monday was a p[illegible]ach of a convention in more ways than one.

In the first place it passed some stinging resolutions which will not set well with the Teddyites of the county; then it turned out one of its leading exponents just as a house holder turns out a cur dog; then it nominated a man for Congress from this district on the Taft ticket, who while his nomination was being made, was in the office of the democratic governor of Alabama urging him whether he would support Roosevelt or Taft if the Advertiser could be relied upon.

We made every effort to get a full text of the resolutions passed by the convention but the mail arrived too late to be used in this issue. However, we learned over the phone that Mr. [illegible] who had previously supported Roosevelt and had been a candidate for the "Bull Moose" nomination had his place on the committee declared vacant because the rank and file of the regular republicans were unwilling to trust him further. In fact they branded him and all Teddyites as traitors and marplots. Eugene Williams, a Taft postmaster at Vincent, in Shelby county, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the expulsion of Judge Longshore.

The convention gave to the committee plenary powers to select a candidate for Congress in case the convention nominee refused to make the race; it also conferred upon the committee the right to purge itself of any Roosevelt members and to fill vacancies by appointment of regular republicans.

But, it did not stop there; it went on and condemned the Roosevelt movement in most scurrilous terms, placing the stigma of "traitor" upon anyone in Alabama who would follow the movement or lend aid and encouragement to it. Strange to say that though Shelby county is entitled to twelve seats in the convention but four of them were occupied, and these by "regulars"—the other eight following, so it is presumed, the lead of Judge Longshore into the Moose party.

Chilton, with ten seats in the convention had but one delegate present—a Taft postmaster—from the west side of the county.

The Chairman of the District Committee, the nominee of the party for Congress was not present.

All in all it was a strange convention. It was one of those conventions that "resolutes and resolutes and resolutes" and after all accomplishes nothing.

Whether or not Judge Reynolds will accept the nomination and lead the forlorn hope against Blackmon is not known, but knowing his political astuteness as we do we are willing to bet wooden five cent pieces against the hole in the doughnut that he will "stand from under." People these days want something tangible, something "coming"—not all going—and Judge Reynolds will not be different from the others, we venture.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

The forty-four Insurgent Republicans in the House are looking for a way out of their difficulties, according to a dispatch from Washington. Up to the present time they have not found it.

Briefly put, most of these insurgent gentlemen want to find a way to cease being republicans and to remain republicans at the same time. They want to hit on a scheme to support Theodore Roosevelt and his third party and still to run as regular republican candidates.

Some of them know that they can't carry the local organization with them into the desert of a Roosevelt bolt. Wherefore they are disconsolate. Some of them are being urged by their local organizations to go over to Roosevelt bag and baggage, but hesitate to do so because they fear it means defeat. Wherefore they are likewise sorely troubled.

We grieve to see this band of patriots filled with such dire and painful perplexity. We grieve all the more because we feel they will search in vain for a clew to safety and consistency. They are simply trying to do an impossible thing.

A man can't be a republican and not be a republican at the same time. He can't saw off the limb on which he is sitting and remain in his former position in relation to the tree. He can't try to scuttle and navigate a ship openly at one and the same time.

We have had some eminent straddlers in the past. But the gulf between the republican party and the Roosevelt Third Term party is too wide to be straddled. We have had shadowy boundary lines in the past. But the boundary line between the republican party and the Roosevelt bolting party is too clear for a man to hope to delude either himself or the public.

In brief, we have at last come to a situation which is the despair of the small politician, the pseudo-patriot, the reformer-for-a-job-only. These gentlemen have been talking for years about principles, as if they had a monopoly of them. And now they find it a campaign without principles, all the principles of the last [illegible] they want in their business [illegible]

They begin to realize that they have evoked a genius that may destroy them.

Where shall they look for deliverance? Alas, nowhere! The skies are brass and iron. There is no help in Roosevelt, for his situation is not theirs. They must e'en wrestle with the problem by themselves in silence and in tears, and mayhap with inward objurgations for the leader who got them into such an awful fix and proposes a still more awful fix as the remedy.

When the issue is joined in November it will be well known who are republicans and who are Roosevelt bolters, who are trying to remain in the party only to betray it to the enemies, who are blowing hot and cold at the same time, who are making a desperate effort to hold their jobs and forswear their former principles. And it shall be measured to them according to the deserts of straddlers and political pap-suckers.—Chicago Inter Ocean

Birchmore, sixteen years private secretary to Hamilton McWhorter, fell from the seventh story of the Pickwick apartment building, Atlanta, Ga., to his death upon the street below. As a result of a forest fire the village of Point Tupper, Nova Scotia, a settlement near the entrance to Port Hawkesbury, is in ashes, being practically wiped out by the flames. The town of Port Hawkesbury itself was seriously threatened, but was saved when the wind died down. The heaviest single loss at Point Tupper was sustained by the Inter-Colonial railway, whose freight sheds, coal sheds and transfer piers, together with many loaded freight cars, were destroyed.

To determine exactly what line former President Loubet of France decided upon in 1900, when as arbitrator he fixed the boundary line between Costa Rica and the portion of Colombia which now forms the republic of Panama, Frank W. Hodgdon, chief engineer of the port of Boston, and P. H. Ashby, a New York engineer, have sailed for Port Limon. The commissioners expect to finish their work in Central America by October 1.

Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer a Zion City, has predicted the destruction of Chicago, New York and other large cities, and now he calls on his followers to hurry to Zion City, which he says will be the only place spared when the devastation comes. "God's judgment is going to fall on the cities of the nations," he said. "You must come out of Babylon. There is no choice in the matter. I command you to come to Zion City. Chicago will answer for rejecting Dr. Alexander Dowie, and you must be in Zion City to escape."

Charles D. Hilles, secretary to President Taft, has been selected by the committee on organization of the Republican national committee, to act as chairman of the national committee. The selection of Mr. Hilles was made at the direct request of the president, and followed a short white house conference. The sub-committee has practically decided upon Otton Brannard of New York for treasurer of the national committee.

The Camorrists who have been on trial at Viterbo, Italy, for nearly two years on the charge of having murdered Cenhara Cuoccolo and his wife in June, 1906, were adjudged guilty in varying degrees. The Camorra trial stirred the world by revelations of the ramifications of the criminal association. The direct accusation which brought to light the operations of the Camorra was the murder of a member, Cenarro Cuoccolo, ordered by the Camorra. The verdict proved a surprise, and all are agreed that the severity of the sentences is the last blow to the Camorra.

UNABLE TO REVOKE LICENSE

Judge Black Says Excise Commission Can't Remove License For Selling to Illegal Retailers.

Birmingham.—Judge Hugo Black, of the recorder's court, handed down a decision in the case of C. W. Davis, the wholesale liquor dealer arrested on a charge of doing business without license, the excise commission of Jefferson county having called in his license, holding that the commission has not the authority to revoke the license. The excise commission revoked the license, or attempted to, on the grounds that the licensee had violated a rule of the commission in that he sold to blind tiger keepers. Judge Black held that the excise commission could not revoke a license except for violation of the law, and that the Smith law adopted by the legislature failed to provide for revocation for sales to illegal liquor dealers.

Dothan.—Effive Mansill, the fifteen years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Mansill of this city, was instantly killed during a thunder storm which lasted an hour here. Whether the lightning killed her or whether she died of heart failure from fright, is a question which puzzles the physicians in attendance.

Montgomery.—New friends proved false friends to F. L. Ross. Ross came to Montgomery from his home at Dothan and was induced by two well-dressed strangers to share a room at a local hotel. The "friends" departed with $347 of Ross's money and he reported the matter to the police department. No trace of the men has been found.

Decatur.—W. E. Hotchkiss, of Courtland, republican nominee for congress from this district, was excluded from the meeting of the Morgan county republican committee in New Decatur on a resolution which caused the committee to go into executive session to endorse postmasters for Decatur, New Decatur and Hartselle.

Auburn.—The college authorities of the Alabama Polytechnic institute announce the final completion of arrangements and conditions under which the Southern railway, in conjunction with other lines, have established two free scholarships. The Southern railway, the Alabama Great Southern railway, and the Northern Alabama railway have jointly established a free scholarship to be awarded to young men from a county traversed by their lines. The counties traversed by the above mentioned railways, residents of which are eligible for this scholarship, are as follows: Colbert, Lawrence, Morgan, Limestone, Madison, Jackson, Franklin, Marion, Winston, Walker, Fayette, Lamar, Jefferson, St. Clair, Etowah, DeKalb, Cherokee, Calhoun, Cleburne, Talladega, Shelby, Hale, Greene, Sumter, Tuscaloosa.

The second scholarship is the gift of the Southern railway jointly with the Mobile and Ohio railroad. The counties which these railroads traverse, and from which the applicants for the second scholarship are to be selected, are as follows: Pickens, Bibb, Chilton, Autauga, Montgomery, Dallas, Perry, Marengo, Wilcox, Clarke, Washington and Mobile.

The scholarships are established to promote interest in scientific agricultural education, and are for the benefit of deserving young men who wish to prepare themselves for this profession.

Montgomery.—This year Alabama will raise the biggest crop of corn in its history, unless weather and worms destroy it. The United States bureau of agriculture has found that the state has planted 3,120,000 acres, which is 104 per cent. The government does not find the condition of the crop on July 1 was so good as it was at the same period last year, condition this year being 82, while last year it was 86.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal has turned a deaf ear to S. H. Bailey's petition for a parole from the penitentiary. The governor held that the convict's illness is not critical and that he would not be justified in granting release from the prison because Bailey was suffering with an incurable disease. Bailey was convicted of the murder of Lee Allen in Lee county, and was given a life sentence in the penitentiary.

Huntsville.—The city commissioners entered into a five-year contract with the Huntsville Railway, Light and Power Company for the lighting of the streets. The Alabama Power Development Company has taken a 90-day option on the plant and franchises of the Huntsville Railway, Light and Power Company and will in all probability assume charge in a short time. Eufaula.—Eufaula is rapidly becoming a railroad center under the experiment which has been tried for the past year by the Central of Georiag, which is managing its traffic between Montgomery and Macon from this city. As a result, the amount of equipment being held here may necessitate the building of a round house and shops. Within the past twelve months the pay roll here has increased 400 per cent, making the railroad the largest single dispenser in the city, while decent homes are rapidly being erected among increasing families.

WILLIAM M'COMBS TO LEAD CAMPAIGN

ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

HELPERS TO BE APPOINTED

Davies Elected Secretary to Succeed Woodson, and Martin Again Chosen Sergeant-at-Arms.

Chicago.—William F. McCombs, of New York, Governor Woodrow Wilson's choice, was elected chairman of the democratic national committee and was empowered to appoint a committee of not fewer than nine members to take active charge of the democratic presidential nominee's campaign.

Mr. McCombs also was authorized to select a national treasurer and such other officers as he may see fit, including possibly a vice chairman, and after consulting with Governor Wilson to select a place for headquarters. Mr. McCombs said he thought headquarters would be in New York, "but I am not going to appoint anybody or select any place until I confer with Governor Wilson," he added.

Joseph E. Davies of Madison, Wis., was elected secretary of the committee to succeed Urey Woodson of Kentucky. John I. Martin of St. Louis was re-elected sergeant-at-arms.

Mr. McCombs' selection and the plan to appoint a campaign committee of nine, the majority of whom are to be members of the national committee, with Mr. McCombs as chairman of the sub-committee were ordered on resolutions offered by Committeeman Robert S. Hudspeth of New York as representing the wishes of Governor Wilson.

In presenting Mr. McCombs' name, Mr. Hudspeth said:

"His intelligent and sagacious handling of Mr. Wilson's campaign in the last year and a half has demonstrated his wonderful fitness for leadership and shown him to be amply equipped to carry the democratic party to victory."

The vote for the selection was unanimous and Norman E. Mack, retiring chairman, yielded the gavel to Mr. McCombs.

"I cannot hope to achieve success unless I have the entire support of this committee which I believe I have," said Mr. McCombs. "I urge all of you during the campaign to consult with me freely."

CITY OF DENVER FLOODED.

Two Dead, Five Injured and Twelve Missing.

Denver, Col.—Two dead, five injured, 12 missing and property damage at least $2,000,000 is the net result of the flood that visited here.

Accurate figures on property damages still are incomplete but estimates run as high as $5,000,000. Practically the entire wholesale and factory districts were flooded.

Mayor Henry J. Arnold estimates the total damage of flood here at $4,000,000. He itemized his statement as follows:

Damage to city property, including sewers, parking, bridges, street surfacing and city shops, $500,000.

Damage to private property, including warehouses, $500,000.

Damage to personal property, $1,000,000.

Damage to crops and irrigation projects in vicinity of Denver $2,000,000.

It is estimated 3,000 people were made homeless. A dozen people reported missing are yet to be accounted for.

With about 15,000 men repairing damage, an army of city employes and individuals clearing away the wreckage of buildings and bridges; rescuers still searching the banks of Cherry creek for further possible victims and the city fire department aiding in pumping out flooded basements in the downtown wholesale districts, Denver is rapidly assuming normal conditions.

The flood is without parallel in the history of the city. Had it not been for warnings sounded over the telephone many could not have escaped death. Many fled in their night clothes.

The crest of the cloudburst was preceded by a storm with a wind velocity of 48 miles and hour.

WIRE FLASHES.

Seattle, Wash.—At a conference of Roosevelt republicans of Washington held in Seattle resolutions were adopted denouncing the nomination of President Taft.

Rorschach, Switzerland.—Eleven persons were drowned most of them young girls, by the capsising of two row boats in a storm on Lake Constance.

Washington—A unique conscience contribution was received by the treasury department from an unknown citizen of St. Louis, who sent 10 $1 postage stamps in restitution for some fraudulent act or oversight. The stamps were cancelled upon receipt and deposited to the credit of the treasury.

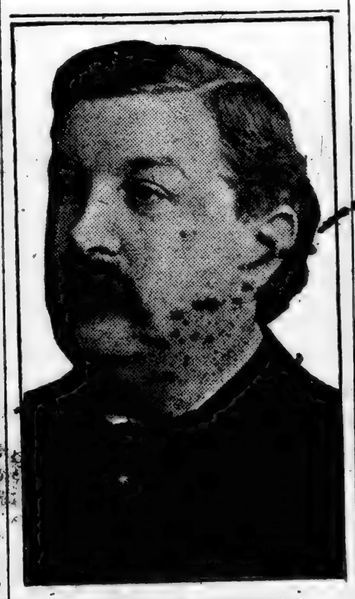
OUTCOME NOT A SURPRISE



Leaders of Fight Against Him Estimated That He Would Be Unseated by a Vote of 50 to 35.

Washington.—Overturning the majority of its own committee and reversing its vote of March 1, 1911, the Senate took away from William Lorimer his seat as junior senator from Illinois by a vote of 55 to 28.

A member of the Senate since June 18, 1909, Mr. Lorimer was declared to have been the recipient of votes secured by "corrupt methods and practices" and his election was held to have been invalid.

Technically Mr. Lorimer will pass out of the records of the Senate as a member of that body, notwithstanding his more than three years' occupancy of his seat.

Facing his assailiants with the declaration, "I am ready," Mr. Lorimer sat in the chamber and heard his fate decreed as the roll call showed the adoption of the resolution of Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee, the Senate's youngest member.

The man who for three days had held the Senate to close attention with his remarkable speech of defense and attack upon his enemies rose wearily from his seat and passed back to a cloak room door. Senators and members of the House gathered about him, grasping his hand and patting him on the back.

Outside the Senate door as Mr Lorimer stepped into the corridor, friends greeted him again and a party of Sister of Charity pushed forward to express regret.

The outcome of the vote was not a surprise, but the leaders of the fight against him had not estimated a greater vote than 50 to 35. Lorimer gained only one of the men who voted against him March 1, 1911. Senator Jones of Washington; while he lost the votes of his assistant, Senator Cullom, and of Senators Curtis of Kansas, Briggs of New Jersey, Simmons of North Carolina and Watson of West Virginia.

McCOMBS WILSON'S CHOICE.

Views Gleaned From Leaders In Consultation With Nominee.

Seagirt, N. J.—Indications at Seagirt gathered from party leaders, with whom Governor Wilson has been in constant consultation recently, are that William F. McCombs of New York is his choice for chairman of the democratic national committee; William G. McAdoo of New Jersey, builder of the Hudson tunnels, or Senator James A. O'Gorman of New York for vice chairman, and Joseph E. Davies, national committeeman from Wisconsin, for secretary.

These views have been gleaned from a canvass of the governor's closest political friends.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Torreon, Mex.—Two aeroplanes of the Bleriot type have arrived here and are to be tried out here before being sent to the field of operation in the north. Lieut. Col. Roberto Carranza and Capt. Jose Osorio, both of the department of engineers, will be in command of the machines.

Savannah, Ga.—A. E. Moynelo, formerly prominent identified with the struggles of Cuba for independence and later Cuban consul here, dropped dead at his home in Savannah. He was about 60 years old.

Marksville, La.—W. H. Bayne, aged 48, police juror of Avoyelles parish and wealthy planter, was killed in ambush by an unknown person while returning from a justice meeting at Center Point. The assassin escaped.

JUST CAUSE FOR PRIDE.

"Wot's he so tickled about?"

"He's jest discovered his birthday's on de same day as Ad Wolgast's!"

BROKE OUT IN HEAT RASH

822 Georgia Ave., East Nashville, Tenn.—"My baby was about two months old when he began to break out in small red pimples like heat rash, afterward turning into festers. They gradually spread until his little head, face, groins and chest, his head being most affected, became a mass of sores with a great deal of corruption. It became offensive and gradually grew worse. I kept a white cap on him to keep him from scratching, it seemed to itch so badly. It made him cross and his chest and groins would often bleed.

"Nothing seemed to help it, and I had almost come to the conclusion that my baby's case was hopeless, when hearing of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I decided to try it. I noticed at once that baby rested better. I continued it for a few weeks and my baby was entirely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They cured where all others failed." (Signed) Mr. E. O. Davis, Nov. 28, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

She Was a Duster.

Mrs. Sutton advertised for a woman to do general housework, and in answer a colored girl called, announcing that she had come for the position.

"Are you a good cook?" asked Mrs. Sutton.

"No, indeed, I don't cook," was the reply.

"Are you a good laundress?"

"I wouldn't do washin' and ironin'; it's too hard on the hands."

"Can you sweep?" asked Mrs. Sutton.

"No," was the positive answer. "I'm not strong enough."

"Well," said the lady of the house, quite exasperated, "may I ask what you can do?"

"I dusts," came the placid reply.—Everybody's.

Shock for a Brother.

"John," said an eminent physician, wearily, entering his home after a hard day's work, "John, if anyone calls excuse me."

"Yes, suh," agreed John, the old family darkey.

"Just say," explained the doctor, "that the masseur is with me."

A little later the doctor's brother called—called and received the shock of his life.

"I want to see the doctor at once," said he.

"Yuh can't do it, sur," solemnly announced the old darkey, turning up his eyes till the whites alone showed. "Yuh can't do it, suh. The doctor, suh, am wid de Messiah."—New York Evening Sun.

Deliberating.

The Rev. James Hamilton, minister of Liverpool, while on holiday in Scotland, had a narrow escape from drowning. Accompanied by a boy, Mr. Hamilton was fishing for sea-trout when he slipped on a stone, lost his balance, and being encumbered with heavy wading boots, had great difficulty in keeping his head above water. Finally he managed to get back to the shore, although in a very exhausted state, and said to the boy: "I noticed that you never tried to help me." "Na," was the deliberate response, "but I was thinkin' o't."

Mixture of Caution and Economy.

At the Union depot a few evenings ago a mother who had gone to see her daughter, a miss of about 18 years, safely started on a journey, was heard to give the young lady the following words of advice just before the train started: "Now, good-by, my dear. Take good care of yourself and remember not to be too free with strangers on the train. But if a nice-looking man should speak to you be polite to him—he may buy your supper for you."—Kansas City Star.

His View.

Hewitt—This place is 1,000 feet above the sea level.

Jewett—But the sea isn't on the level; it always makes me sick.

"I could not step on my feet"

"Nor take anything in my hands, I was so sore from rheumatism."

There you see the hard case of Mr. Phillip J. Cormisky of East Mauch Chunk, Pa., as he explains in a letter to The Blood Balm Co. Your case cannot be worse than his.

"I suffered 3 years" he says, "I was run down so bad, the doctors told me I had no hope to be cured. I could find no place on account of my sickness. I wasn't fit for anything before I started to use B.B.B.

"Today I am well and happy; and able to earn a hundred dollars a month on a locomotive. Your medicine is so helpful I gained 25 pounds in two weeks. And I am still gaining. I will recommend B.B.B. to all my friends."

RECORD OF TIME'S CHANGES

Surely Visitor to the Scenes of His Boyhood Could Not Fail to Be Impressed.

"I reckon you see the old town looking some different from what it looked when you left it thirty years ago," said Uncle Eb Skinner to the native returning for a visit to the scenes of his boyhood. "All o' the back part o' Peevy's store is new since your day here, an' that bay winder in the drug store was put in since you left us. The deepo used to be painted yeller instid o' red, an' the town hall is het by steam now instid o' with stoves, like it used to was in your time. Then two iron hitch posts in front o' the postoffice ain't been there more than ten years, and that stone watering trough instid o' the old wooden one you remember is another change. I reckon you've noticed that Hi Greene has raised his house a story an' added a summer kitchen. That piazzy in front o' the hotel is another change in the old town, an', of course, you've noticed the new hoss sheds back o' the church an' the broom shop wa'n't here when you was a boy with us. It employs five hands reg'lar an' seven in the rush season. Time makes changes, as I reckon you have seen."—From Judge.

They Are Overworked Now.

Four-year-old Dick had made an important discovery that his hair would pull out if enough force was exerted, and was absorbed in proving the fascinating find on his forelock. His sister—aged seven—noted the proceeding with round-eyed horror.

"Dickie! Dickie!" she cried, "you mustn't do that!"

"Why?" demanded Dickie, with the cynicism of childhood.

"Because the Bible says that all your hairs are numbered—and if you pull any out you'll make a lot of extra bookkeeping for the angels."

Their Need.

DR. SIMMONS
Squaw Vine Wine

A Palatable Medicine especially prepared to relieve and cure the diseases which affect women

This excellent medicine is not only successful in conquering the painful and prostrating diseases that attack the female generative system but it is exceptionally pleasant to take. The usual rule that the nastier the medicine the more effective it is, is reversed in the case of Squaw Vine Wine. It is one of the pleasantest of medicines. The fresh juice of a well ripened sweet orange is not more agreeable. It is indeed a happy combination of sweet herbs compounded with just enough spirits to keep it fresh and active in its medicinal effect. Poor, tired mothers, worn out with the cares of a family and household, and suffering from those distressing aches, bearing down pains and nervousness which women only know, revive wonderfully under its strengthening and exhilirating influence. It eases pain, strengthens weakened parts, corrects irregularities, builds up a strong, vigorous body, restores brightness to the eye and color to the cheeks.

In these days of high cost of living, a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a valuable and welcome remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., had kidney and bladder trouble, was confined him to his bed, unable to turn without help. "I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and can truly say I was relieved at once." His example is worth following. Alred Drug Co.

Guard Your Children Against Bowel Trouble

Many children at an early age become constipated, and frequently serious consequences result. Not being able to realize his own condition, a child's bowels should be constantly watched, and a gentle laxative given when necessary. Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are especially well adapted to women and children. The Sisters of Christian Charity, 531 Charles St., Luzerne, Pa., who attend many cases of sickness say of them:

"Some time ago we began using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and find that we like them very much. Their action is excellent and we are grateful for having been made acquainted with them. We have had good results in every case and the Sisters are very much pleased."

The form and flavor of any medicine is very important, no matter who is to take it. The taste and appearance are especially important when children are concerned. All parents know how hard it is to give the average child "medicine," even though the taste is partially disguised. In using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, however, this difficulty is overcome. The shape of the tablets, their appearance and candy-like taste at once appeal to any child, with the result that they are taken without objection.

The rich chocolate flavor and absence of other taste, make Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets the ideal remedy for children.

If the first box fails to benefit, the price is returned. Ask your druggist. A box of 25 doses costs only 25 cents. Never sold in bulk.

SARDIS BARBEGUE

A GREAT SUCCESS; A BIG TIME

Last Saturday morning, just as Aurora, the rosy-fingered daughter of morn, was blushing in the east, and while the sweet warblers of the day were trilling their early love songs to nearby mates, we arose from a bed of pleasant anticipations to grope about in a dark room searching for misplaced trousers and other simular articles of apparel—and incidentally to work up a shin or two on the north west corner of an old oak chair, in our mad rush to meet Senator Curry at the appointed trysting place. The object was to attend a barbecue—a real sure enough barbecue where they were to have barbecued pig and mutton and kid and beef, together with numerous other good things, not always found at so-called barbecues.

On our way west toward the end of the setting sun, we weighed anchor for a moment or two and took aboard Chief of Police, Hayes, thus completing the complement of the land craft, after which we glided over hill and dale, mostly hill, toward the harbor known, in familiar parlance as Jerry Donovan's old fields.

More than two hundred and fifty had arrived before our advent and with each passing moment they came in singles, doubles, triplets, quadriplets and covies till the grand total amounted to something over seven hundred and fifty. It was one ot the most representative crowds, one of the best crowds we have seen assembled anywhere in Chilton County. Each seemed to have gone for the express purpose of having a good time, and if anyone failed it was because he or she is a constitutional grouch and would not enjoy a short stay in heaven.

The dinner! Don't ask us about it. Language is impotent and our tongue palsies when we undertake the task.

Under the skillful management of Bill Roebuck and his faithful assistants the dinner was prepared. It was the best barbecued meat we have seen in many a long day; no streak of cooked and streak of raw meat—all was done to a turn and just as juicy as a young broiled chicken, brown as a nut and as nutricious as a French chef could prepare.

During the day the assembled crowds enjoyed themselves talking about crops and kindred subjects; politics was discussed we failed to hear it mentioned.

Senator Curry made a speech if there was no suggestion of politics in his remarks. It was received with rounds of applause; Hon. L. B. Pounds made a speech that did not mention politics; his speech was received with much cheering.

In the afternoon the "boys" engaged in a game of base ball. Just what the result was could not be ascertained as we left the moorings shortly after three o'clock, just as the game had begun.

The trip is the first the editor has had in several years and it was thoroughly enjoyed, every minute of it.

It revealed many things to us. First, that Chilton's people are excelled by no others in hospitality; second, that they know how to feed royally and bountifully; third, that when assembled for a "good time" they "go after it and get it."

The crops along the route were the prettiest we ever saw; only a field of corn in the 15 mile route looked "peeked;" all of the other fields were green and well tilled; the cotton was unusually large and well developed—taking into consideration the late season in which it was planted.

The fruit trees and grape vines were bowing to the earth with their wealth of luscious fruit. Nature seems to have smiled good sweetly upon the people of Chilton, and they are, as a result, happy and contented.

Les Broadhead presented each of the Clanton "sailors" with a luscious forty pound water melon for which each is duly grateful.

All in all it was a good day; we were glad to be there; we want to go again.

JUST A SUGGESTION

In most cities, towns and villages, the quiet city of the dead—that hallowed spot where our loved ones are consigned to their final sleep—is distinguished by some particular name. In Clanton this is not so; ours is known as "Clanton Graveyard—that's all.

Why, even out in the country we hear of "Mullins' Burial ground' "Smith's Cemetery," "Walnut Grove Cemetery" and the like—but in Clanton its just Clanton Graveyard.

Clanton reveres its dead as does those of other localities; we tread lightly when we enter that sacred place; our thoughts turn heavenward as we move about among those lowly beds; our hearts fill with sorrow and anguish as we recall the yesterdays of life, wherein those who are now asleep within those silent avenues are, with tender memories, forced upon us. Why then, should it be plain, posaic, Clanton Grave Yard? Why not honor ourselves and our hallowed dead by selecting a title more in keeping with the sweet memories that cling around the place?

Why should not the "Ladies Improvement Society" take the matter up and select an appropriate title for our cemetery?

Let it be called Sunset-rest," "Oak-view," or some other suitable name, but lets quit calling it Clanton grave yard—it sounds canny, creepy and hollow. Will the Ladies Improvement Society take a hand.?

GENE MARTIN REMANDED TO JAIL

Monday morning before Judge E. B. Deason was held the preliminary trial of Gene Martin, charged with the murder of Will Zimmerman in the western part of the city about two years ago. It will be recalled that immediately after the killing Martin departed for parts unknown and eluded the officers of the law till a few weeks since when another negro "gave him away" in a distant western city, where he was apprehended and returned to Clanton.

After the examination of several witnesses the Judge decided that Gene should remain in jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

WE GOT AN ANSWER

HAD TO PART WITH RED AND PINK NECKTIES

Week before last we offered three prizes for the best answers to three different questions. One of the rules was that no two prizes were to go to the same person, and while we suspect that both answers were written by the same person, we have no positive proof of the fact and consequently had to produce.

The first question—the red neck-tie question—was: Why do patrons of the Clanton post-office lean up against the mail boxes of other patpons to read letters and carry on communications and thereby deprive others of the opportunity to be served? (want of sense, want of politeness, don't care for the other fellows' feelings and pure cussedness were not to be considered as answers) Everybody knows that, as a general thing one of these rules applies but we were seeking for some other explanation that at least could be offered to strangers, without reflecting upon the whole community.

HERE IS THE RED NECK-TIE PRIZE ANSWER

TOO DURNED LAZY TO STAND ALONE—WANT UNCLE SAM TO SUPPORT THEM WHILE WAITING FOR A FREE ALMANAC OR A PICTURE POSTAL!

The third question was: Why do men and boys, with their jaws full of tobacco, and who are facing the street, deliberately turn round when they wish to spit, and splash up the side walk, upon which ladies have to pass?

THIS GETS THE PINK TIE

The galoots want folks to know they are old enough to chaw terbakker and they are scared that if they don't spit the stuff around where people can see the pond they'll not get credit for chawing. Its only them that's proud of chaw in that spits on the side-walks.

We are waiting for an answer to our second question. That's the one in wheih we were most interested. There's a green neck-tie hung up for the best answer.

MR. ROOSEVELT THEN AND NOW

MAKES STATEMENTS THEN FALSIFIES THEM.

Referring to the much discussed subject of third terms for presidents and what Mr. Roosevelt has had to say about them, it will, perhaps, be interesting to note how he has changed since ambition has so completely taken charge of his system.

"We have organized the National Anti-Third Term League because we believe the integrity of our form of government and the preservation of our free institutions are seriously threatened by the proposed candidacy of Mr. Roosevelt for third term.

To be sure, he is the only person in the country who could possibly be such a candidate at the present time, for he is the only one who has had a second term. But our special opposition is not to him as a man or an account of the principles or want of principles which he may represent, but to the third term itself.

We protest against the indorsement of the third term, which is implied by the election of delegates pledged to vote for him as a candidate in the national convention.

We protest that the name ought not to be considered at all in that convention because he is the third term itself.

We do not believe the republican party in any state designs to disregard the unwritten law which prohibits either the "form or the substance" of the third term of presidency to any man, just the same "form and substance" of a third term as that which Mr. Roosevelt renounced and denounced in the most solemn manner.

We propose to help him redeem that pledge.

The National Anti-Third Term Leagne, Henry W. Blair, Pres.

Organized May 6, 1912.

PLATFORM.

No third term, either in "form or substance," for any man as President of the United States.

INDORSERS.

On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years and these three and a half years constitute my first term.

The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under the circumstances will be a candidate for or accept another nomination.

Theodore Roosevelt.

(After his election to the Presidency November, 1904.)

Three years afterwards he said he had not changed and should not change.

Roosevelt is not eligible and has no moral or legal right to be a candidate at all. He can not be President again for he has had two terms. He has said so himself. There are millions of Republicans who will never vote for him again as president. It is against the unwritten law, which is the strongest of all laws. No candidate for faction at convention can, and the people never will repeal it. Roosevelt is impossible. George Washington or Abraham, if now running for president would be defeated. I certainly for one would vote against both, and I am among the most conservative and hidebound of Republicans. I helped to organize the party, and have fought for it through thick and thin, both in war and peace. A third term is revolution. It takes first to overthrow and then to maintain itself by force. Revolutions never go backward.

The third term makes the United States first a Mexico and then a Russia.

But there will be no third term-Mark that.—Congressional Record

CLANTON WINS A GAME

Laft Friday on the local ball ground the Clanton aggregation went to victory over the assemblage to the tune of 9 to 2. There were no special features, no home runs no sensational plays—just hard down ball playing, except that manager Simpson hit the ball three times during the same game making a foul tip each time.

For the first game the following were batteries: Clanton—Pyron and Pyron; Jemison—Scott and Scott.

Immediately after the conclusion of the first game a second was entered into, the score standing 8 to 8 at its conclusion.

In the second game Clanton's battery was Wilson and Pyron, while that of Jemison was Thomas and Scott.

THE POTENTIAL OF TO BE

STRICTLY A CAN PROPOSITION. THE CAN-CAN FAMOUS IN NEW ORLEANS AND ELSEWHERE.

Can you can? If you can can and don't can you'll be sorry you didn't can; if you can't can then you can get some one who can can to can for you. Again, if you can can you will can and can soon. Secondly, if you can can and won't can then you can leave it alone and you can go without can goods this winter; but if you can can and won't can then we can't help it—and wouldn't, because you had an opportunity to can when you could can and wouldn't can. How then can you call upon us to help it even if we can?

You see lots of cans in the can stores, but there are many homes where you can never see a can except bought cans, though they can have them if they just would can.

There are some people who can see a can as far as a can can be seen though they seem never to think of a can till they can't can. That's one can question we can't work out on the can, but perhaps if we study the can a little more we can. We've heard of others who can and soon we'll be where we can.

We can recall that it wasn't a week since a gentleman said he was going to can for two years, and it looks to us if he can can for two years most others can can for a day or two—don't you think they can? In that length of time a man can can enough cans to keep him in cans for a whole season and perhaps longer—of course he can!

But, all this is merely preliminary to the statement that there is more fruit in Chilton this year than for years before and that the merchants are reaping a rich harvest selling cans—that is those who can.

But its not only fruit that is going into the can; vegetables of various kinds can be canned and are being canned; in fact everything that we can can is going into the can.

And to think of it, it won't be long before ribbon cane syrup will find its way into the can; can you think of anything more canny?

Then with canned fruit, canned vegetables, canned syrup and all the other good things that we can can going into the can can't we have a can-can old time of it this winter? At least those who can can.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help.

CHAPTER XVII—(Continued).

"Nothing," said the woman, never shrinking back an inch, facing him with all the courage and daring with which a Goddess might look upon a man. "Nothing but my weakness and your strength."

"Yes, that's it, but do not count too much upon the one or the other. Great God, how can I keep away from you; life on the old terms is insupportable. I must go."

"And where?"

"Anywhere, so it be away."

"And when?"

"Now."

"It would be death in the snow and in the mountains tonight. No, no, you cannot go."

"Well, tomorrow then. It will be fair, I can't take you with me, but I must go alone to the settlements, I must tell your friends you are here, alive, well. I shall find men to come back and get you. What I cannot do alone numbers together may effect. They can carry you over the worst of the trails, you shall be restored to your people, to your world again, you can forget me."

"And do you think," asked the woman, "that I could ever forget you?"

"I don't know."

"And will you forget me?"

"Not so long as life throbs in my veins, and beyond."

"And I too," was the return.

"So be it. You won't be afraid to stay here alone, now."

"No, not since you love me," was the noble answer. "I suppose I must; there is no other way, we could not go on as before. And you will come back to me as quickly as you can with the others?"

"I shall not come back; I will give them the direction, they can find you without me. When I say goodbye to you tomorrow it shall be forever."

"And I swear to you," asserted the woman in quick desperation, "if you do not come back they shall have nothing to carry from here but my dead body."

"And how will you prevent my going?"

"I can't. But I will follow you on my hands and knees in the snow until I freeze and die unless I have your promise."

"You have beaten me," said the man hopelessly. "You always do. Honor, what is it? Pride, what is it? Self-respect, what is it? Say the word and I am at your feet, I put the past behind me."

"I don't say the word," answered the woman bravely, white faced, pale lipped, but resolute. "To be yours, to have you mine, is the greatest desire of my heart, but not in the coward's way, not at the expense of honor, of self-respect—no not that way. Courage, my friend, God will show us the way, and meantime good night."

"I shall start in the morning."

"Yes," she nodded reluctantly but knowing it had to be, "but you won't go without bidding me good bye."

"No."

"Good night then," she said extending her hand.

"Good night," he whispered hoarsely and refused it, backing away. "I don't dare to take it. I don't dare to touch you again. I love you so, my only salvation is to keep away."

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Strength of the Weak.

Although Enid Maitland had spoken bravely enough while he was there, when she was alone her heart sank into the depths as she contemplated the dreadful and unsolvable dilemma in which these two lovers found themselves so unwittingly and inextricably involved. It was indeed a curious and bewildering situation. Passionate adoration for the other rose in each breast like the surging tide of a mighty sea, and like that tide upon the shore it broke upon conventions, ideas, ideals and obligations intangible to the naked eye, but as real as those iron coasts that have withstood the waves' assaults since the world's morning.

The man had shaped his life upon a mistake. He believed absolutely in the unquestioned devotion of a woman to whom he had been forced to mete out death in an unprecedented and terrible manner. His unwillingness to derogate by his own conduct from the standard of devotion which he believed had inhabited his wife's bosom, made it impossible for him to allow the real love that had come into his heart for this new woman to have free course; honor, pride and self-respect scourged him just in proportion to his passion for Enid Maitland.

The more he loved her, the more ashamed he was. By a curious combination of circumstances, Enid Maitland knew the truth; she knew that from one point of view the woman had been entirely unworthy the reverence in which her husband held her memory. She knew that his wife had not loved him at all, that her whole heart had been given to another man, that what Newbold had mistaken for a passionate desire for his society because there was no satisfaction in life for the wife away from him, was due to a fear lest without his protection she should be unable to resist the appeal of the other man which her heart seconded so powerfully. If it were only that Newbold would not be false to the obligation of the other woman's devotion, Enid might have solved the problem in a moment.

It was not so simple, however. The fact that Newbold cherished this memory, the fact that this other woman had fought so desperately, had tried so hard not to give way, entitled her to Enid Maitland's admiration and demanded her highest consideration as well. Chance, or Providence, had put her in possession of this woman's secret. It was as if she had been caught inadvertently eavesdropping. She could not in honor make use of what she had overheard, as it were; she could not blacken the other woman's memory, she could not enlighten this man at the expense of his dead wife's reputation.

Although she longed for him as much as he longed for her, although her love for him amazed her by its depth and intensity, even to bring her happiness, commensurate with her feeling, she could not betray her dead sister. The imposts of honor, how hard they are to sustain when they conflict with love and longing.

Enid Maitland was naturally not a little thrown off her balance by the situation and the power that was hers. What she could not do herself she could not allow anyone else to do. The obligation upon her must be extended to others. Old Kirkby had no right to the woman's secret any more than she; he must be silenced. Armstrong, the only other being who was privy to the truth, must be silenced too.

One thing at least arose out of the sea of trouble in a tangible way; she was done with Armstrong. Even if she had not so loved Newbold that she could scarcely give a thought to any other human being, she was done with Armstrong.

A singular situation! Armstrong had loved another woman, so had Newbold; and the latter had even married this other woman, yet she was quite willing to forgive Newbold, she made every excuse for him, she made none for Armstrong. She was an eminently sane, just person, yet as she thought of the situation her anger against Armstrong grew hotter and hotter. It was a safety valve to her feelings, although she did not realize it. After all, Armstrong's actions rendered her a certain service; if she could get over the objection in her soul, if she could ever satisfy her sense of honor and duty and obligation, she could settle the question at once. She had only to show the letters to Newbold and to say: "These were written by the man of the picture; it was he, and not you, your wife loved," and Newbold would take her to his heart instantly.

These thoughts were not without a certain comfort to her. All the compensation of self sacrifice is in its realization. That she could and did not, somehow ennobled her love for him. Even wrongs are allayed with balm mutual. In the powerful and universal appeal of this man to her she subdued at whatever cost the soul within that she could, to possess power, to refrain from using it in obedience to some higher law, is perhaps to pay oneself the most flattering of compliments. There was a satisfaction to her soul in this which was yet denied him.

Her action was quite different from his. She was putting away happiness which she might have had in compliance with a higher law than that which bids humanity enjoy. It was flattering to her mind. In his case, it was otherwise; he had no consciousness that he was a victim of misplaced trust, of misinterpreted action. He thought the woman for whom he was putting away happiness was almost as worthy, if infinitely less desirable, as the woman whom he now loved.

Every sting of outrage, every feeling of shame, every fear of disloyalty, scourged him. She could glory in it; he was ashamed, humiliated, broken.

She heard him savagely walking up and down the other room, restlessly impelled by the same Erinyes which of old scourged Orestes; the violator of the laws of moral being drove him on. These malign Eumenides held him in their hands. He was bound and helpless, rage as he might in one moment, pray as he did in another, no light came into the whirling darkness of his torn, tempest tossed, driven soul. The irresistible impulse and the immovable body the philosophers puzzled over were exemplified in him. Whilst he almost hated the new woman, whilst he almost loved the old, yet that he did neither the one thing nor the other absolutely was significant.

Indeed he knew that he was glad Enid Maitland had come into his life. No life is complete until it is touched by that divine fire which for lack of another name we call love. Because we can experience that sensation we are said to be made in God's image. The image is blurred as the animal predominates, it is clearer as the spiritual has the ascendency.

The man raved in his mind. White faced, stern, he walked up and down he tossed his arms about him, he stopped, his eyes closed, he threw his hands up toward God, his heart cried out under the lacerations of the blows inflicted upon it. No flagellant of old ever trembled beneath the body lash as he under the spiritual punishment.

He prayed that he might die at the same moment that he longed to live. He grappled blindly for solutions of the problem that would leave him with untarnished honor and undiminished self respect and healing, and yet give him this woman, this, by gain. He strove to find a way to reconcile the past with the present, nothing to be done by the other, all to be done by him. One of the [illegible] he [illegible] opened. [illegible] ideas and his ideals, or he must inevitably take the woman.

How frightful was the battle that raged within his bosom! Sometimes in his despair he thought that he would have been glad if he and she had gone down together in the dark waters before all this came upon him. The floods of which the heavens had emptied themselves had borne her to him. Oh if they had only swept him out of life with its trouble, its trials, its anxieties, its obligations, its impossibilities. If they had gone together! And then he knew that he was glad even for the torture, because he had seen her, because he had loved her, and because she had loved him.

He marveled at himself curiously, and in a detached way. There was a woman who loved him, who had confessed it boldly and innocently, there was none to say him nay. The woman who stood between had been dead five years. The world knew nothing, cared nothing; they could go out together; he could take her, she would come. On the impulse he turned and ran to the door and beat upon it. Her voice bade him enter, and he came in.

Her heart yearned to him. She was shocked, appalled at the torture she saw upon his face. Had he been laid upon the rack, and every joint pulled from its sockets, he could not have been more white and agonized.

"I give up," he cried. "What are honor and self respect to me? I want you. I have put the past behind. You love me, and I, I am yours with every fiber of my being. Great God! Let us cast aside these foolish quixotic scruples that have kept us apart. If a man's thoughts declare his guilt, I am already disloyal to the other woman; deeply, entirely so. I have betrayed her, shamed her, abandoned her. Let me have some reward for what I have gone through. You love me; come to me."

"No," answered the woman, and no task ever laid upon her had been harder than that. "I do love you. I will not deny it. Every part of me responds to your appeal. I should be so happy that I cannot even think of it, if I could put my hand in your own, if I could lay my head upon your shoulder, if I could feel your heart beat against mine, if I could give myself up to you, I would be so glad, so glad. But it cannot be, not now."

"Why not?" pleaded the man.

He was by her side, his arm went around her. She did not resist physically, it would have been useless, she only laid her slender hand upon his broad breast and thrust back, hard, and looked at him.

helpless, alone, but it must not be. I know you better than you know yourself. You will not take advantage of affection so unbounded, of weakness so pitiable."

Was it the wisdom of calculation, or was it the wisdom of instinct by which she chose her course? Resistance would have been unavailing, in weakness was her strength.

Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth! Yes, that was true. She knew it now, if never before, and so did he.

Slowly the man released her. She did not even then draw away from him. She stood with her hand still on his breast. She could feel the beating of his heart beneath her fingers.

"I am right," she said softly. "It kills me to deny you anything. My hearts yearns toward you. Why should I deny it? It is my glory, not my shame."

"There is nothing above love like ours," he pleaded, wondering what marvelous mastery she exercised that she stopped him by a hand's touch, a whispered word, a faith.

"No; love is life, love is God, but even God himself is under obligations of righteousness. For me to come to you now, to marry you now, to be your wife, would be unholy. There would not be that perfect confidence between us that must endure in that revelation. Your honor and mine, your self respect and mine, would interpose. If I can't have you with a clear conscience, if you can't come to me in the same way, we are better apart. Although it kills me, although life without you seems nothing, I would rather not live it, we are better apart. I can't be your wife until—"

"Until what and until when?" demanded Newbold.

"I don't know," said the woman, "but I believe that somewhere, somehow, we shall find a way out of our difficulty. There is a way," she said a little incautiously. "I know it."

"Show it to me."

"No, I cannot."

"What prevents?"

The same thing which prevents you: honor, loyalty."

"To a man?"

"To a woman."

"I do not understand."

"No, but you will some day." She smiled at him. "See," she said, "through my tears I can smile at you, though my heart is breaking. I know that in God's good time this will work itself out."

"I can't wait for God. I want you now," persisted the other.

"Hush, don't say that," answered the woman, for a moment laying her hand on his lips. "But I forgive you. I know how you suffer."

The man could say nothing, do nothing. He stared at her a moment and his hand went to his throat as if he were choking.

"Unworthy," he said hoarsely, "unworthy of the past, unworthy of the present, unworthy of the future. May God forgive me, I never can."

"He will forgive you, never fear," answered Enid gently.

"And you?" asked her lover. "I have ruined your life."

"No, you have ennobled it. Let nothing ever make you forget that. Wherever you are and whatever you do, and whatever you may have been, I love you, and I shall love you to the end. Now you must go, it is so late, I can't stand any more. I throw myself on your mercy again, I grow weaker and weaker before you; as you are a man, as you are stronger, save me from myself. If you were to take me again in your arms," she went on steadily, "I know not how I could drive you back. For God's sake, if you love me—"

That was the hardest thing he had ever done, to turn and go out of the room, out of her sight, and leave her standing there with eyes shining, with pulses throbbing, with breath coming fast, with bosom panting. Once more, and at a touch she might have yielded!

CHAPTER XIX.

The Challenge of the Range.

Mr. James Armstrong sat at his desk before the west window in his private room in one of the tallest buildings in Denver. His suite of offices was situated on one of the top floors, and from it he had a clear and unobstructed view of the mighty range over the intervening house tops and other buildings. The earth was covered with snow. It had fallen steadily through the night, but with the dawn the air had cleared and the sun had come out brightly, although it was very cold.

Letters, papers, documents, the demands of a business extensive and varied, were left unnoticed. He sat with his elbow on the desk, his head on his hand, looking moodily at the range. In the month that had elapsed since he had received news of Enid Maitland's disappearance [illegible] he had not taken in fresh hope. At first [illegible] opened. [illegible] the range, a prey to most despondent reflections, heavy hearted and disconsolate indeed.

After that memorable interview with Mr. Stephen Maitland in Philadelphia he had deemed it proper to await there the arrival of Mr. Robert Maitland. A brief interview with that distracted gentleman had put him in possession of all the facts in the case. As Robert Maitland had said, after presentation of the tragic story, the situation was quite hopeless. Even Armstrong reluctantly admitted that her uncle and old Kirkby had done everything that was possible for the rescue or discovery of the girl.

Therefore the two despondent gentlemen had shortly after returned to their western homes, Robert Maitland in this instance being accompanied by his brother Stephen. The latter never knew how much his daughter had been to him until this evil fate had befallen her. Robert Maitland had promised to inaugurate a thorough and extensive search to solve the mystery of her death, which he felt was certain, in the spring, when the weather permitted humanity to have free course through the mountains.

Mr. Stephen Maitland found a certain melancholy satisfaction in being at least near the place where neither he nor any one had any doubt his daughter's remains lay hid beneath the snow or ice on the mountains in the freezing cold. Robert Maitland had no other idea than that Enid's body was in the lake. He intended to drain it—an engineering task of no great difficulty—and yet he intended also, to search the hills for miles on either side of the main stream down which she had gone, for she might possibly have strayed away and died of starvation and exposure, rather than drowning. At any rate, he would leave nothing undone to discover her.

He had strenuously opposed Armstrong's recklessly expressed intention of going into the mountains immediately to search for her. Armstrong was not easily moved from any purpose he entertained, or lightly to be hindered from attempting any enterprise that he projected, but by the time the party reached Denver the winter had set in, and even he realized the futility of any immediate search for a dead body lost in the mountains. Admitting that Enid was dead, the conclusions were sound, of course.

The others pointed out to Armstrong that if the woman they all loved had by any fortunate chance escaped the cloudburst, she must inevitably have perished from cold, starvation and exposure in the mountain long since. There was scarcely a possibility that she could have escaped the flood, but if she had, it would only to be devoted to death a little later. If she was not in the lake, what remained of her would be in some lateral canon. It would be impossible to discover her body in the deep snows until the spring and the warm weather came. When the snows melted what was concealed would be revealed. Alone, she could do nothing. And admitting again that Enid was alone, this conclusion was as sound as the other.

Now no one had the faintest hope that Enid Maitland was yet alive, except, perhaps, her father, Mr. Stephen Maitland. They could not convince him, he was so old and set in his opinions and so utterly unfamiliar with the conditions that they tried to describe to him, that he clung to his belief in spite of all, and finally they let him take such comfort as he could from his vain hope without any further attempt at contradiction.

In spite of all the arguments, however, Mr. James Armstrong was not satisfied. He was as hopeless as the rest, but his temperament would not permit him to accept the inevitable calmly. It was barely possible that she might not be dead, and that she might not be alone. There was scarce up enough possibility of this to justify a suspicion, but that is not saying there was none at all.

Day after day he had sat in his office denying himself to everyone and refusing to consider anything, brooding over the situation. He loved Enid Maitland, he loved her before, and now that he had lost her, he loved her still more.

Daniel and the Lions.

And it came to pass that Daniel was cast into the den of lions by order of King Darius.

Early the next morning King Darius went to the den, rolled away the stone, and called out: "Do the lions bite?"

"Not unreasonably," replied Daniel, who was well up in the legal veracity of the day.

"Good," ejaculated King Darius as he pulled back the stone. Thereupon he went forth and proclaimed to the multitude that the lion question had been solved.—Puck.

PATHOS IN CHILD'S BRAVERY

Fortitude Shown by Little Sufferer in Hospital Touched Lady Henry Somerset.

Lady Henry Somerset, whose labors in behalf of the children of the London slums are constant and earnest, tells this affecting story of the way in which her interest in these little ones was aroused:

I was moved in that direction by the rare patience and imagination of one little boy. His example convinced me that patience was one of the qualities I needed most, and in seeking it I grew into that work.

I was in a hospital on visiting day, while the doctors were changing a plaster cast which held the crippled boy's limb. The operation was exceedingly painful, I was told. To my surprise, the little sufferer neither stirred nor winced, but made a curious buzzing sound with his mouth. After the doctors left I said to him:

"How could you possibly stand it?"

"That's nothing," he answered. "Why, I just made believe that a bee was stingin' me. Bees don't hurt very much, you know. And I kept buzzin' because I was afraid I'd forget about it being a bee if I didn't."—Youth's Companion.

Pittsburg Chivalry.

"What's going on here?" demanded a man as he came upon two little boys battling in a vacant lot on the South side. The lad who was on top was rubbing weeds over the face of the under one.

"Stop it," said the man, grabbing the victor by the neck and pulling him away. "What in the world are you trying to do to his face with those weeds?"

"Do? Why, he swore in front of some girls, and I rubbed some smartweed in his eyes to become a great man like Abraham Lincoln."—Pittsburg Sun.

Excellent Plan.

"I see," said Mrs. De Jones, while Mrs. Van Tyle was calling, "thta you have a Chinese chauffeur. Do you find him satisfactory?"

"He's perfectly fine," said Mrs. Van Tyle. "To begin with, his yellow complexion is such that at the end of a long, dusty ride he doesn't show any spots, and then when I am out in my limousine I have his pigtail stuck through a little hole in the plate-glass window and I use it as a sort of bell rope to tell him where to stop."—Harper's Weekly.

A Lottery.

"Is that picture one of the old masters you were telling me about?"

"Yes," replied the art dealer. "It is a genuine treasure; absolutely authentic."

"I'll buy it. I already have three just like it, and somewhere in the bunch I'm liable to hit the original."

Second Beetle—Must have been a temperance meeting. The place was full of water bugs.

A WINNING START

A Perfectly Digested Breakfast Makes Nerve Force for the Day.

Everything goes wrong if the breakfast lies in your stomach like a mud pie. What you eat does harm if you can't digest it—it turns to poison.

A bright lady teacher found this to be true, even of an ordinary light breakfast of eggs and toast. She says:

"Two years ago I contracted a very annoying form of indigestion. My stomach was in such condition that a simple breakfast of fruit, toast and egg gave me great distress.

"I was slow to believe that trouble could come from such a simple diet, but finally had to give it up, and found a great change upon a cup of hot Postum and Grape-Nuts with cream, for my morning meal. For more than a year I have held to this course and have not suffered except when injudiciously varying my diet.

"I have been a teacher for several years and find that my easily digested breakfast means a saving of nerve force for the entire day. My gain of ten pounds in weight also causes me to want to testify to the value of Grape-Nuts.

"Grape-Nuts holds first rank at our table."

JUDGE HANFORD QUITS UNDER FIRE

IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST HIM ORDERED DROPPED.

CHARGED WITH INTOXICATION

He Revoked Citizenship Papers of Immigrant Because He Was a Socialist.

Seattle, Wash.—United States District Judge C. H. Hanford, the first federal judge appointed when Washington was admitted to statehood 23 years ago, sent his resignation to President Taft, while the last witnesses were waiting to testify before the House Judiciary sub-committee which has been hearing evidence relative to charges of misconduct filed against Judge Hanford.

At the time set for the hearing a series of conferences between the committeemen and Judge Hanford's attorneys was begun. The proposal that the judge resign and the hearing be discontinued was submitted by Judge Hanford's attorneys and accepted. Judge Hanford sent his resignation by telegraph to President Taft. At the same time Chairman Graham of the sub-committee sent a telegram to Chairman Clayton of the House judiciary committee telling him of the change in the situation and recommending that the hearings be discontinued. This was done by a message from Chairman Clayton.

Judge Hanford has been much in the public eye since August 25, 1911, when after he had issued an injunction hostile to the position of Seattle citizens in a five cent fare fight against a street car company, he was denounced at a great mass meeting and resolutions demanding his impeachment were adopted.

During the Industrial Workers of the World demonstration in Washington last spring Judge Hanford condemned the carrying of the red flag through the streets. On May 10 he revoked the citizenship papers of Leonard Olsson, a member of the socialist labor party and of the Industrial Workers of the World, because Olsson, in appearing as a witness for another man seeking citizenship had said he was "not devotedly attached" to the constitution.

The national convention of the socialist party at Indianapolis took notice of Hanford's decision and asked Congressman Victor Berger to bring impeachment charges against Hanford. Berger introduced the charges on Juns 16, accusing Hanford of rendering corrupt decisions and of being a habitual drunkard.

Eight supplemental charges against Hanford were filed directly with the judiciary committee of the House by a Seattle attorney. The House unanimously referred Berger's charges to the House judiciary committee to take evidence in Seattle.

This sub-committee began its proceedings June 27 and continued its sessions steadily. The committee called every one who offered evidence.

Dozens of witnesses testified they had seen Judge Hanford apparently intoxicated in streets and a few swore that they had seen hima pparently intoxicated in the court room. Many of Judge Hanford's friends testified that his peculiarities and mannerisms had been misunderstood. Judge Hanford, 63 years old, had lived on Puget Sound 58 years. He was appointed supreme justice of the territory of Washington in 1888 and on the admission of Washington to statehood became district judge.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Chattanooga.—Hettie Wright, aged 7, was run over and killed by an automobile which Dr. Willard Steele of this city was learning to operate. The child lived several hours after being injured.

Washington.—Thomas W. Brahany, of Wisconsin, a former newspaper man here and for the last year secretary to the tariff board, probably will be appointed by President Taft as assistant secretary to the President, succeeding Sherman P. Allen, recently made assistant secretary of the treasury.

Jacksonville, Ill.—The Rev. C. G. Snow, born in New York 95 years ago, a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, and the oldest school teacher in Illinois, died here.

San Francisco.—Japan expects to spend nearly $1,000,000 for her exhibit at the Panama Pacific international exposition here in 1915. Her intentions were made known here by Harski Yamawaki, chairman of the Japanese commission.

Lisbon, Portugal.—Calm reigns but the republican troops continue patrolling those districts in which royalistic outbreaks have occurred. The peasants fraternize openly with the soldiers everywhere.

MADE BIG PROFIT FOR STATE

Purely Business Argument for the Establishment of Sanitoriums for the Tuberculosis.

According to figures contained in the annual report of Dr. H. L. Barnes, superintendent of the Rhode Island state sanitorium, the earnings of the ex-patients of that institution during the year 1911 would amount to over $266,000. This is a sum three times as large as that spent each year for maintenance of the institution, including four per cent. interest and depreciation charges.

The actual earnings in 1911 of 170 ex-patients were obtained by Dr. Barnes. These ranged from $2 to $31 per week, the total earnings for the year amounting to $102,752. On this basis, Dr. Barnes computes the figures above given. He says, however: "While institutions for the cure of tuberculosis are good investments, there is good reason for thinking that institutions for the isolation of far-advances cases would be still better investments.

Out of a total of 46,450 hospital days' treatment given, 39,147, or 84 per cent., were free, the treatment costing the state on an average $200 per patient. Out of 188 free cases investigated, 56 had no families and no income on admission to the sanitorium. Out of 132 patients having homes, the number in the family averaged 5.2, and the average family earnings were $5.46. In 59 cases the families had no income, and in only five cases were there any savings, none of which amounted to as much as $100.

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

The Middle-Aged Woman.

Of the many ways in which the middle-aged woman may vary the effect of her afternoon gowns none is simpler than the use of a collar and cuffs of white voile edged with scalloping and embroidery in a floral design. Another change may be the frock set of white chiffon with border of black malines, and still another is the one of black net hemstitched with silver thread. Some of these collars are so long in front that they terminate only at the waist line, where they cross in surplice effect and are tucked away under the girdle. An excellent model of this sort is of light blue lawn embroidered with black dots, and a second is of white agaric trimmed with tiny folds of broadcloth, alternating with eponge.

Voice of Conscience.

A western Kentucky negro was in jail awaiting trial for stealing a calf. His wife called to see him. On her way out the jailer, whose name was Grady, hailed her.

"Mandy," he inquired, "have you got a lawyer for Jim?"

"No, sah," said his wife. "Ef Jim was guilty I'd git him a lawyer right away; but he tells me he ain't guilty, and so, of co'se, I ain't aimin' to hire none."

"Mr. Grady," came a voice from the cells above, "you tell dat nigger woman down thar to git a lawyer—and git a dam' good one, too!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Her Affections Dampened.

A little girl was playing at the table with her cup of water. Her father took the cup from her and in so doing accidentally spilled some of the water on her.

"There," she cried, as she left the table indignantly, "you wet me clear to my feelings."—Everybody's Magazine.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the treatment of children's complaints.

Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory.

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

Yesterday was "Bull Moose" day in Birmingham; we didn't see any meese get on the train here tho' we are confident there are a number of them in the woods around. "Jest 'er waiting to see."

Today the Taft folks are hammering away in Birmingham. One thing the propose to do is to turn "the rascals out"—and by "rascals" is meant those who affiiiate with the Teddy gang. We predict that Chilton will furnish no more delegates to the "regular" convention than it did to the Bull Moose affair. "Jest er waitin' to see."

Secretary McVeagh made a polite request of Jody Thompsin to vacate his office by way of the resignation route, to which Thompsin replied "Nothin' Doin." We await net results with interest. Jody being a "Progressive" is merely a squatter on the Taft preserves now.

A letter from Senator Johnston to the editor of the PRESS says: "I know of no reason why I should not be a candidate for re-election. I have received but one election from the people of Alabama to this office." Well, all we have to say is that he has another election coming to him and will get it.

For the sake of those inquiring ones who seem to gloat over the mis-statement that there was a negro delegate in the Baltimore convention, we rise to remark that democracy is a party of white people—at least its conventions are composed entirely of white men; we do not permit negroes to select our candidates or become members of of our commjttees. There was no negro in the Baltimore convention. It was a telegraphic fake pure and simple. We bit like many others but we investigated. He wasn't there. Now what are you going to say buddy?

The city election is not far off now. Would it not be well for the council to begin to get ready to prepare to meet? It usually takes from three to eight weeks for them to assemble after they decide upon meeting, but as this is a matter of moment perhaps they can get together in five weeks if they try hard. Last year the election went by default because the council didn't have time to meet. If they don't meet this time and put out this election notice somebody's going to be called hard, cruel names.

That Senatorship.

Rather early to be making predictions as to whom will be our next Senator, but if we are permitted to make a guess we would venture to say he will be a red headed man whose initials are Joseph Forney Johnston.

That, however, is just a guess and before the eighteen months elapsing between now and the election at which a senator is to be chosen, we may have occasion to change our guess—we think not, however.

Governor Comer will not make the race for Senator; he has ambitions in that direction but the people of Alabama need him in the Governor's office again to straighten out the railroads and they are going to insist upon his going there.

Clayton has too good a berth to relinquish it and make a scramble for a place that is not much exalted over the Chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee of the House; Abercrombie having been nominated to one high office and making his announcement for a second before he is elected to the first has so crippled himself that he cannot be counted as a factor. He is success mad and has permitted his ambition to lead him into dangerous paths.

Hobson also has a high place; he defeated in his initial race one of the most successful of politicians; last year he again "put the crupper" on a man whose political ambition had never before been curbed, and it looks as if he is going to be a telling factor in the race of 1913, but there's one thing that will militate against him. He has been given everything for he has asked even before he sunk the Merrimack and since. He is a scholarly gentleman, an able politician and a pure statesman, but people sometime become surfeited—candidates never. (Vide, Abercrombie et id omnes genus). They will not forever give and never receive.

The red headed man has had but one term; he has spent that term in the Senate—not on the lecture platform; he has kept in touch with his people and has served them faithfully. He is entitled, under democratic custom, and by common decency, to a second term. The people will accord it to him.

The wool hat boys are not going to turn a faithful servant down merely to pile up honors upon another.

One of the great faults with the South is its frequent change of national representatives; we scarcely get a man in the House or Senate before we yank him out and send a raw recruit to take his place.

In the olden days the South furnished the nation's most eminent statesmen; we dictated, largely, the policies of the government because we sent able men forward and kept them there. They commanded attention, deserved respect and were made leaders because they had time to study conditions.

Webster was a power in the Senate, but he was matched by Clay and Calhoun. Lodge wields a great influence now—and has for years—but he had to take a back seat when Morgan arose to address that august body.

Hoar was recognized as a power in the "Upper Chamber," but L. Q. C. Lamar was his match.

And so with a score of others—Vest, George, Knott, Pettus, Daniels and others. They remained long enough to be of service, to learn and to serve. Johnston has learned much in his first term but he is just beginning to be a power in the Senate—it takes years to acquire a thorough familiarity with the working of the Senate and to become of genuine service. This is no reflection upon the man—it's the rule with all of them—the best as well as the most incapable.

Johnston has done too well already to change, and while Hobson is a personal friend of the editor, an old school mate in the days long agone, unless there is some other reason than his more ambition to cause us to change, we shall abide with Jos. F.

We do not expect to gain anything by it, but we do believe in "fair play;" in rewarding a faithful public servant for duty well performed.

If after he has had his reward he, too, should grow greedy, we would turn our fire toward his breastworks, but till he has had "his'n" we think he ought not to be molested.

The Political Outlook.

The unexcited reader or the casual observer, will, without much hesitation, come to the conclusion that this is a democratic year regardless of the angle of his viewpoint. This is true not only locally but otherwise. The election of Wilson and Marshall is as certain as anything in the future can be definitely fixed.

A northeastern newspaper (The New Bedford, Conn. Times—a staunch republican organ) says editorially:—

"Vote for Taft, pray for Roosevelt, but bet on Wilson."

This same view is entertained by a large majority of the republican papers, though expressed in a different manner; they all have to admit that the prospects are gloomy indeed. So uninviting is the Taft situation that a monster petition is being circulated requesting him to withdraw from the race with the understanding that Roosevelt will do the same thing and allow the G. O. P. to choose new men from top to bottom.

Taft, having practically disgraced himself to get the nomination by his unauthorized use of the steam roller, will not willingly relinquish what he has gained by fraud. Even if he should do so Roosevelt, who is a place hunter, pure and simple, would not agree to anything that leaves him high and dry. He's out after "the stuff" and is determined to get it or ruin things in the attempt.

Wilson, calm, dignified and scholarly, has made no enemies, has no one to placate, is under no obligation and is a terror to the "great interests" who heretofore have controlled the election of presidents.

This year the people are going to have a say; Roosevelt has failed to curb the trusts, though he vells vigorously against them; Taft has endeared himself to the interests and defied the plain people, hence Wilson is the logical victor. Roosevelt will not break into the "Solid South;" Wilson will capture many electoral votes in the north—enough with the south and his western following to land him safely.

This year it means democracy; it's been a long lane but the end is in sight

WILSON AND MARSHALL CLUB.

CHILTON MUST NOT FALL BEHIND.

All over the state Wilson and Marshall Clubs are being organized. These clubs serve a useful purpose and should receive the active encouragement of all good democrats. In the first place; they serve to educate the young voter, they instill enthusiasm into the liver of the older voter and they go a long way toward bringing out the full voting strength of the party in each community.

The Press man has received of Hon. Frank Goodwyn, Chairman of the State Committee, a request to organize a "Wilson and Marshall Club" and to form the organization into each beat in the county. We would gladly do so, but feel that some one else should undertake the job. It might work if anyone would try it, but so frequently we have requested "mass meetings" for what we considered laudable purposes, and as frequently had those meetings attended by as many as two—sometimes three, that we hesitate to launch the movement.

The reason Chilton Democracy has never accomplished anything is because it has never been organized, or if organized, it requires organizing every time anything is to be accomplished. It must stay organized more than for one meeting at a time.

We have all the necessary papers and have the spirit, but for the reason above given, we fear to make the call, for who will make it? Now, don't everybody speak at once.

Some one will "set a meeting" we'll guarantee as many as four will attend—others might be busy.

TEACHING FORCE ALMOST COMPLETED

Some days since the School Board elected Miss Blanche Tisdale of Bluff Springs, Fla., to preside over the primary department of Clanton Academy. Miss Tisdale comes to Clanton highly recommended as a teacher, and will, we doubt not, fulfill all the good things predicted of her.

The teaching force is now completed with the exception of one teacher—the intermediate grade.

As it now stands the following will be the corps of teachers for the coming year:

Prof. J. J. Pickens, Principal.
Miss Annie Stallsworth, 1st Assistant.
Miss Annie Williams, Juniors.
Miss Blanche Tisdale, Primary.
Miss Elna Sartor, Music.

The school building is being put in thorough repair and is now receiving a fresh coat of paint so that it will present a handsome appearance when the young folks are again called upon to sing "School Days."

DEATH OF MISS MARLAR

Tuesday night about eight o'clock the spirit of Miss Dora Marlar took its flight into realms beyond.

For months she had been a patient sufferer from an incurable disease and while loved ones hoped and prayed for her ultimate recovery, yet there was little foundation upon which to build hope; tne dread disease had so firm a hold upon the frail system that medical skill was powerless to do more than relieve suffering.

The burial took place at Walnut Creek cemetery yesterday.

A remedy that will put an end to nervousness, headaches, sickness of the stomach, painful irregularities, languidness, bad breath, poor appetite, is that fine old regulator DR. SIMMON'S SQUAW VINE WINE. It is prepared for women only, being especially adapted to act on the delicate female organism. It banishes suffering, corrects weakness and the whole brood of distressing symptoms which follow disorders in the derivative system. Price $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

MR. COMER'S MILL.

SEEKING TO LOCATE HERE.

Quite a little flurry of excitement wrs created on the streets Monday and Tuesday by the announcement that a monster mass meeting was to be held at the Court House Tuesday night, for the purpose of inducing Mr, B. B Comer to locate his $600,000 mill in or near Clanton

On all sides small groups of men could be seen discussing the probability or rather the possibility of having the mill erected here.

The meeting materialized Tuesday night as does most of the mass meetings in Clanton; there were a score or more of gentlemen out to the meeting.

They all seemed perfectly willing for Mr. Comer to locate in Clanton, in fact not one word of objection was raised;—thats a good sign, and this, being the case he may decide to bring his mill here—probably two mills.

It will be a glad day for Clanton when such a man as Mr. Comer takes part in its commercial life, but that day is far distant unless those already here show a little more of the "Roosevelt" spirit of progressiveness.

To meet and say we are willing for a great industry to locate here in nothing short of a real joke. To induce them to come something must be done.

FREE!

For IMMEDIATE RELIEF, in cases where suffering is intense, and where even the short time required to permit BEARLAX to act cannot be spared, we send FREE with each bottle of BEARLAX one Glycerine Suppository. This Suppository when inserted into the rectum, at once softens the accumulated matter and promptly results in a pleasant and thorough evacuation of lower bowels within 3 to 5 minutes. BEARLAX, Liquid Laxative, is then taken, just the same, to act upon the liver, stomach and intestines, as the Suppository does not affect these organs but is only intended to relieve immediate distress.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Bruce A. Hodges, a railway mail clerk, was instantly killed and several others seriously injured when the New York and Memphis train No. 25 was wrecked on the Southern railway five miles south of Bristol, Tenn. The cause of the wreck is not known. The tender of the engine left the rails on a reverse curve and although the tender turned over, it did not go down the bank, while the mail car, combination baggage and colored car and two day coaches went down the 25-foot embankment.

Henry East, a notorious white criminal who was serving eighteen months for burglary committeed at Florence, Ala., escaped from a Louisville and Nashville train at Cooper's Station, Ala., while in charge of the state agent en route to the state penitentiary from the coal mines. The train was moving at a rapid rate of speed. Three months ago East jumped from a moving train while being taken from Birmingham to Wetumpka, but was recaptured. Bloodhounds are on his trail.

Bob Harris, a crazy negro, on a rampage at Tampa, killed 3 persons, wounded two others, one of whom was white, and himself was slain by policemen after a siege in which gasoline was used to burn him out of a house. He was insane from drugs. He first went to the house of a woman and killed her and a man he found there. He then went to another house and fired on a woman with a baby. The former was slain. On his way out he shot another negress, Virginia Simpkins, who is expected to die, and a white policeman named Riggs. When he made a dash for liberty he was shot and killed.

Two white men and four negroes were killed in an explosion in the mines of the Gayton Coal company, 15 miles from Richmond, Va. The men were at work when the explosion occurred, and it is supposed that the premature setting off of a "shot" or charge of blasting powder was the cause. None of the men working near enough to the explosion to know its cause escaped.

General.

The Italian government announced in an official note that a flotilla of Italian torpedo boat destroyers attempted to enter the Dardanelles. The destroyers succeeded in advancing to Chanak-Kalesi, on the Asiatic side of the strait, when it was decided to withdraw on account of the severe bombardment directed at them from the Turkish forts and ships. The Italian vessels, the note adds, were not damaged. The town is defended by Castle Chanak-Kalesi, which of late years has been reinforced with heavy guns and modern equipment.

Emilio Vasquez Gomez, minister of the interior in the Diaz cabinet in Mexico, and for a week provisional president of the Orozco Revolutionary party, was arrested by United States secreta service officers at San Antonio, Texas. For days the United States authorities have known of a plot that has been forming in San Antonio. Large quantities of arms and ammunition are known to have been shipped through San Antonio from St. Louis, Kansas City and New Orleans, some of it going to El Paso, but the larger portion to Laredo, Texas.

The army worm is playing havoc with the cotton crop in the lowlands, especially on the Georgia side of the Chattahoochee river, and the farmers are busy with paris green and arsenate of lead in an effort to cut short its ravages. The army worm was discovered to be at work, and they have taken time by the forelock. The lowlands have been the first to suffer on account of the swamp conditions of the fields that has resulted from the continued rains. As yet the hilly country is free from the caterpillar, it is reported.

John W. Wade, Sr., who became a resident of Atlanta, Ga., when he brought here two of the first locomotives ever used in this state, and who at one time was engineer of the famous old "Texas," which played so dramatic a part in the Civil war, died in Atlanta in the 86th year of his life.

The market for live boll weevils closed with a total stock of 475,000 bugs bought since June 29 at 5 cents per hundred. The insects were captured in Adams county. It is said most of the bugs are not genuine.

Cuba is now freed of scourge suspicion. The plague suspect at Havana has "proved a negative."

Counterfeiting apparatus and one prisoner, George Spafford, were captured by United States officers in the electrical shop on Dauphine street, three blocks from Canal, New Orleans. No coin was found, but molds for 25 and 50-cent pieces were found.

INTERESTING STATE ITEMS

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF ALABAMA BOILED DOWN FOR HASTY PERSUAL.

CAPT. KOLB FOR GOVERNOR

He Discusses Issues Upon Which He Will Run—Judiciary Too Costly.

Montgomery.—With retrenchment as a basis for his candidacy, Captain Reuben F. Kolb, State Commissioner of Agriculture, made his tentative announcement for Governor.

Captain Kolb favors reduction in the expense of the judiciary, and wants to call a halt in the levying of taxes. He declares he wants Confederate Veterans properly cared for, but would not be willing to impose upon the State. He advocates good roads, and says he would do all in his power to promote agricultural interests.

Present whiskey laws should be thoroughly tested before there is any effort toward making a change, in the opinion of Captain Kolb, who believes that intoxicating liquors furnish a "problem for remedial policy of our best and sanest statesmanship."

Co-operation between the railroads and the State is what Captain Kolb says he wants, holding that questions of a fractional nature should be settled in the State courts.

Oneonta.—Former Governor B. B. Comer was acclaimed the Governor of Alabama when he appeared to speak here at a barbecue given by Oneonta Commercial Club. Five thousand persons were here for the occasion from all parts of the county. Mr. Comer indicated that he is a candidate, but would not say for what office he will run.

Birmingham.—Dr. W. L. Council, one of the negro physicians of Birmingham, was among the last to qualify and receive a registration certificate from the Jefferson county registration board the past week. He announced that he would vote the Wilson-Marshal ticket, and that he was considering offering his work in the way of speech making in doubtful states to the national committee.

Cuba.—Gustav Oehlsen, a Swede, was killed by Lank Catlett in the drug store of McElroy and Tate, when Cutlett fired one shot through the abdomen of the unfortunate foreigner. Oehlsen's death followed at Mattee Hersee Hospital, where he had been sent by the citizens of the town for surgical attention.

Fort Payne.—The county court house is being repaired and put in first-class condition.

Tuscaloosa.—Dr. W. E. Hind, of Auburn, state entomologist, is in Tuscaloosa this week to assist in killing the army grass worm and in preparing for the caterpillar which is now approaching.

Bay Minette—Perhaps the first car load of watermelons ever shipped from this place, and as far as learned the first ever shipped from the county, was sent to New Orleans. The car contained about 5,000 watermelons.

Fayette.—The Basket Lumber and Manufacturing company is rushing work on its railroad from Fayette to Newtonville and the first five miles of the grading will be completed in two or three weeks.

Mobile.—In the case of W. J. Thompson, former station agent of the Southern railway at Calvert, Ala., after hearing the evidence and arguments on both sides, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. There are four indictments against Thompson, charging him with grand larceny and embezzlement, but it is believed that these will be nol prossed.

Greenville.—Army worms can be seen in front of the Greenville High school building, crossing the concrete campus. They attract much attention.

Montgomery.—Numerous deer have been reported in Cleburne and Cherokee counties, according to information received by John H. Wallace, Jr., commissioner of game and fish. Commissioner Wallace says that the deer have been reported in immense numbers.

Florence.—The life of a large part of the cotton crop is threatened by the continued rain as grass is getting such a hold that much cotton is in danger of being abandoned.

Eutaula.—The Alabama good roads days set for August 14, 15 and 16 by Governor O'Neal will be observed in a practical way in this part of Barbour county; for on these days the Midell miles of road from Eutaula to Baker Hill will be improved, in the place of a committee party.

ALABAMA BAPTISTS MEET

State Convention Convenes at Jasper—Between 400 and 500 Delegates Present.

Jasper.—The Alabama State Baptist convention convened here. Between 400 and 500 delegates and visitors are present.

The convention proper convened on July 23 when the ministers assembled to transact business which comes within their sphere of authority. Prominent speakers from various schools and theological institutions of the church are present. A lunch was served on the church grounds.

Mobile.—In the matter of export valuations to Cuba, Mobile is the second port in the United States, New York city occupying the first position. Mobile exceeds by almost $1,000,000 the combined exports of New Orleans, Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, to the Queen of the Antilles. The statement is borne out by statistics of the customs office on export and import business of the port of Mobile as compared with those of the cities mentioned.

Uniontown.—Joseph E. Wing, of Ohio, states that the canebrake of Alabama is one of the most remarkable agricultural communities in the world. At an agricultural meeting held here under the auspices of the state agricultural experiment station, Mr. Wing, in the course of his remarks, compared this section as an alfalfa community to the valleys of Switzerland, the rich valleys of the Argentine, the valleys and irrigated counties of the west.

Gadsden.—A sensation was created here among Etowah county farmers by the discovery of the army worm in almost every corn field in the county. Young corn is being cut to shreds old corn is being damaged. Worms are found in the heart of the stalks of grown corn, and there seems to be no hope of saving it. Worms gathered in cans devour each other.

Cuba.—The county Sunday school convention in session here for two days, closed and delegates left for their various homes. It was largely attended, every school in the county being represented.

Selma.—The work of putting out the advertising matter for the Central Alabama fair which will be held in Selma September 30 to October 5, has been delayed for about two weeks, caused by the concern which did the printing making a mistake in printing the dates.

Talladega.—The second annual encampment of the Presbyterians of Alabama opened at Shocco Springs near Talladega under most favorable circumstances.

Mobile.—In all probability the bond election to obtain the authority of the people for the issuance of bonds for the construction of sanitary sewers will be held in the near future.

Montgomery.—W. S. Keller, state highway engineer, has gone to Tuscumbia to confer with the board of commissioners with reference to constructing a state aid road in Colbert county.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal appointed Valli W. Pruitt of Madisonville, registrar of Madison county to suceed C. H. Hampton.

Gadsden.—There are only two candidates, Mayor W. T. McCord and Dr. R. A. Burns, in the race for mayor of Alabama City. J. M. Garrett has withdrawn from the contest.

Sheffield.—Much interest is being engendered in the election asking for a commission form of government. The feeling is paramount that something must be done as the city is hopelessly in debt.

Tuscaloosa.—The University of Alabama Summer School closed here. The enrollment reached 517, the largest in the history of the institution.

Anniston.—At the meeting of the board of Calhoun county road and revenue commissioners, a contract was awarded for the construction of a modern $20,000 prison for this county.

Riverside.—The Odd Fellows will give a big picnic here on August 3 in honor of their 18th anniversary. Several prominent Odd Fellows throughout the state will be here to deliver some able addresses on behalf of Odd Fellowship.

Riverside.—Worms similar to the army worm that destroyed the cotton here last year are here in abundance. They are eating the corn, grass, watermelon vines, peas and potatoes completely up where they go.

Lineville.—Judge E. J. Garrison, in his charge to the grand jury, laid especial stress on the open violations of the prohibition laws.

Greenville.—A. D. Whitehead, district agricultural demonstrator, who has just returned from an inspection of the crop conditions in Southwestern Alabama, states that in Choctaw, Washington, Mobile, Baldwin and southern parts of Clarke counties the boll weevils are now in sufficient numbers to greatly damage the crops unless they are checked soon.

William Shaw, the secretary of the famous Christian Endeavor society, said in a witty after-dinner address in Boston:

"There is a little Back Bay girl who is much interested in her auntie's Christian Endeavor work. The little girl was writing a letter to her brother at Yale one day, and in the midst of the epistle she looked up and said:

"'Auntie, how do you spell devil?'

"'Devil!' cried her aunt, with a shocked smile. 'Why, child, don't you know you mustn't use such a word as devil?'

"'But, auntie,' protested the little girl, 'I want to tell brother about your Christian and devil meetings!'"

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

CROP PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

Optimism Regarding Future Trade Increased.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

The keynote of this week's developments is quite accurately epitomized in the phrase 'favorable crop prospects.' As a natural result optimism as regards future trade has notably increased. Retail trade has been stimulated by wet weather and clearance sales, the iron and steel trade retains all of its former life and railway officials are beginning to talk of car shortages in the fall. Dry goods demands has not yet expanded in a noteworthy way. Visiting represenatives of jobbing houses are not taking hold freely, though purchases cover a wide range of goods with staples receiving the call while buying of novelties aparently will be deferred until drummers make their visits. Prices of textiles are firm and tend, in view of the strike of the operatives in New Bedford mills, to generate concern as to deliveries of fine goods. Furthermore, the price situation is rendered especially firm through the attitude of mills, most of which are guarding against becoming oversold because of uncertainties regarding quotations for new crop cotton.

Leather is very strong and new buying of shoes is quite moderate. It is said some purveyors of relatively low priced shoes have substituted cheaper grades in preference to increasing prices, which are deemed legitimate because of the high cost of labor and raw materials. Collections vary. At southern points the payments continue slow.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending July 18, were 283, against 252 last week, 239 in the like week of 1911, 215 in 1910, 239 in 1909 and 263 in 1908.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Progress is in the right direction. A noteworthy incident this week is the decline in prices of all grains, especially in wheat, which was depressed sharply by reports of exceptional crop advancement in the northwest. Ten days will place the spring wheat crop beyond danger from drough. In the west manufacturing plants are busy and labor is well employed. Higher wages, large pay rolls and great activity in industrial lines mark progress in the Pittsburg district. Labor conditions at some New England centers are still a disturbing factor. A steady demand for cottons and woolens and enhanced cost of raw material make for a further hardening in quotations. Some little additional business is noted in footwear, but the trade still is delaying placing of considerable volume of business. Leather is more active and hides are in greater demand and prices tend higher.

Trade in the south, and southwest still marks time. In activity and slow collections in that section are customary at this season, but the progress of the week has been quite satisfactory. With industrial activity in the largest trades assured, agricultural prospects auspicious and mercantile conditions sound, there is less concern regarding those economies and social problems which have in the past served to unsettle business confidence and enterprises. A widening spirit of optimism is growing in all sections despite this is a presidential year.

Too Eager.

Fred Poyner, a Chicago dentist, was recently to a banquet given by the Dental association.

He said: "On one side is the right of things and on the other the wrong; sometimes the difference between the two is slight. As the following story shows: A gypsy upon release from jail met a friend. 'What were you in for?' asked the friend.

"'I found a horse,' the gypsy replied.

"'Found a horse? Nonsense! They would never put you in jail for finding a horse.'

TEXT WAS NEW TO HEARERS

German's Struggle With the English Language Praiseworthy, but Somewhat Mirth Provoking.

Prince Henry of Reuss, who speaks superb English, laughed good-naturedly at a dinner in New York, over the account of certain officers of the German fleet.

"One of our chaplains," said the prince, "had the hardihood to preach in English at one of your Lutheran chapels the other day. He astonished his congregation by saying, as he rose, that he would choose for his text the words:

"'And he tore his shirt.'

"A quite audible snicker went round.

The chaplain noticed it, flushed and repeated the text in a louder, slower, more distinct and impressive voice:

"'And he tore his shirt.'

"The snicker became a laugh, and the pastor rose and said:

"'Our good brother is quoting, of course, the familiar words:

"'And the door is shut.'"

To Protect the Flowers.

Edelweiss and other characteristic Swiss flowers are said to be in danger of total extinction because of the craze of tourists for collecting them. Women tourists especially are always anxious to take away souvenirs in the way of a plant, and do not simply pull the flowers, but dig up the plant. It is proposed to introduce a law that will prevent the buying, selling or digging of edelweiss, fire lily, Siberian spring crocus, Alpine columbine, the Daphne, Alpine violet or other national flowers.

Meeting Emergencies.

Senator Dixon was condemning a piece of political deception.

"The thing was as flagrant," he said, "as the railway case.

"Two men, one of them very short, were passing through a station toward the train gates when the bigger one was heard to say:

"'I've took a half ticket fur ye, George. Yer so little, ye'll pass, all right.'

"'But,' protested George, 'how about my beard?' And he twiddled his chin beard nervously.

"'Oh,' rejoined the other, 'tell 'em it's a mole.'"

ARE BUILDING ROADS

Hale county just before, Perry county and Dallas county since, the election in Green county have voted bonds for the building of good roads in the amount of $1,000,000 or more in each case. For Dallas county this is the third or fourth issue voted for the same purpose. Evidently these people are not afraid that the counties will be bankrupt nor that their houses and homes will be sold from over their heads to pay the bonds. Then, too, they have found out that they will never get good roads till they pay good hard money for them.—Exchange.

Yes, in the majority of the cases mentioned above the amount was considerably more than $100,000.

In Dallas, we know it was as much as $350,000 and perhaps more. The people in that section of the state do not become panic stricken at the mention of bonds; particularly when they are to be the recipients of the money derived from the sale of bonds.

They esteem good roads as one of the best assets of a county and are willing to pay for them.

Those counties in the state which have the best roads are the ones which have issued bonds to secure them; those which have no roads are those whose people take a conniption fit and die with spasms when bonds are mentioned.

DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT.

One of the loveliest entertainments yet recorded in Clanton's social annals, was that attendant upon the introduction of Miss Maude Jamison, of Kosciusko, Miss., to the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Mullins on Monday evening, from 9 to 11. Elaborately detailed and reflecting exquisite taste in each of the features, the splendor of the event will be one long to be remembered by those fortunate ones present.

With Japanese lanterns floating forth with each zepher from their lofty position, and shedding a soft light on the broad veranda, which had been converted into a nook of tropical greenery, it was indeed beautiful. Here from a fern-banked table with its covering of cluny lace, over white satin, a delicious iced beverage was dipped was presided over by little Miss Lilla Belle and Kathleen Mullins in their dainty lingerie dresses, with yellow sashes.

To prove a commensurate setting for the beauty of the elegantly gowned young women the reception hall and parlor were cleverly and artistically decorated for the occasion with ferns, palms and cut flowers. Catching the rays of the electric lights, with their yellow shades, the crystal pendents of the chandeliers vied with the huge sunflowers in adding another bit of charm to the picture. Mr. Ross Mullins stood first in the receiving line. Mrs. Ross Mullins whose frock of blue voile, over blue satin was most becoming to her fair, delicate type, stood with Miss Jamison in white Marquisette over pink satin.

Their cordial welcome was further augmented by that extended by Miss Ruth Kate Mullins, in yellow voile over yellow satin, who received them at the door.

After a floral contest, Miss Annie Spann was prononced the successful contestant, and was presented with a handsomely bound copy of Havergal's "Lilies." On a draw for the visitor's prize Miss Spann was again successful, receiving a silver mesh coin bag.

A delicious ice course was served.

The roster of the guests: Misses Annie Spann, Lena Downs, Sophia Courtney, Fannie Mae Haynes, Bettie Mullins, Lurline Harper, Bessie Thomas, Ruby Downs, Maude Eiland, Elna Sartor, Emmette Matthews, Estella and L. E. Morgan, Winnie and Willie Reynolds, Myrtle and Maude Mullins, Bessie VanDerveer, Annie Vardaman, Lake Jones, Maude Jamison, Ruth Kate Mullins, Mesdames Carrie Mullins and Gamma Anderson; Messrs. Clark Harper, Barney and Guy Roberts, Hugh Jones, Frank Thomas, Grady and Claude Reynolds, Bill Mullins, J. T. Morgan, Curry Thomas, Alvin Jones, Joe VanDerveer, Tom Woods, Sam and Julian Latham, Hosea Downs, Calvin Wilson, Eric Hart, Hance Alred, Nabors and C. Fenn Jones; Mr. and Mrs. Renfroe Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Tipton Mullins, Dr. and Mrs. Earle Gowan, Dr. and Mrs. Amzi Gowan, Mrs. Ora Campbelle, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jones.

In these days of high cost of living, a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a valuable and welcome remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., had kidney and bladder trouble, was confined him to his bed, unable to turn without help. "I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and can truly say I was relieved at once." His example is worth following. Alred Drug Co.

PICNIC AND DANCE

WORLD'S TOUR ON HIS TIPS

Manuel Alvarez, a Waldorf-Astoria Waiter, Has Saved His Money for Travel.

Waiter No. 303 at the Hotel Astor, Manuel Alvarez, has saved his tips and is about to make a tour of the world on the proceeds of that saving. He will visit every country, he says, and take eight years to do it.

"Life is nothing without knowledge," is his motto.

Alvarez mentioned the trip to guests at dinner recently.

"Why are you taking this trip?" he was asked.

"What for?" Alvarez replied. "Why, I want to see how these other fellows live. I want to see the Trans-Siberian railway. I want to see how they mine diamonds in Africa and what the German emperor looks like. I want to see the Japanese and Chinese, and how they live and what they eat, and the Turks I must see—such a funny people. I am a Spaniard. Besides Spanish, I speak French and English. That is enough to take me anywhere. Spanish and English are spoken in most parts of the world and French is the international language. But when I get to Germany I am going to stop awhile and learn German well."

"Won't all that cost a lot?" ventured a listener.

"What's the matter with you?" Alvarez demanded. "I have been a waiter here, and I got money. If my money ever gets low, why I can stop awhile and work and get more to go on with. But I got plenty, don't you fear."—New York World.

HE HAS NOTHING DELIVERED

Solicitor General Lehman Thinks Americans Are Too Keen for Convenience for Their Good.

Frederick W. Lehmann, solicitor general of the United States, was walking briskly toward his home one evening with four or five cumbersome packages tucked under each arm. A breeze struck him, and as one large package served as an impromptu sail, it was all Lehmann could do to make headway.

A friend met him as he was tacking desperately against the wind. "Why don't you have the stuff delivered?" asked the friend, noticing that the bundles contained the name of a store that keeps a squadron of auto delivery vans.

"Because I never have things delivered," replied Lehmann. "That's one trouble with the people of this country. They're too keen for convenience. A young woman thinks nothing of buying a spool of thread or a yard of silk and having it delivered. Somebody has to pay for that delivery. So, just as a matter of principle, when I buy anything I carry it home with me."

Dogs' Black List.

A dogs' black list has been established by the National Cyclists' Union to deal with ill-natured animals who interfere with cyclists. In bringing an action against the owner of a dog it is not sufficient to prove that the dog caused the accident and that the defendant is the owner. To succeed it must be proved that he was aware of its dangerous tendency. It may come out in evidence that the same dog had caused accidents before, but it must be proved also that the owner knew this. The National Cyclists' Union asks cyclists who know of one of these dangerous dogs to send on the name and address of the owner and description of the dog. As soon as the information comes to hand a registered letter is sent to the dog owner drawing his attention to his dog's dangerous propensities and notifying him that if an accident occurs a copy of the letter will be produced in evidence should the matter come into court.—London Globe.

End of His Masquerade.

A wedding is about to take place in the German capital between a nursing sister and a young man who has been living the life of a beautiful and accomplished "lady" assistant in a leading wholesale coal firm. The assistant, who was given power of attorney by "her" employers as a reward for "her" several years of faithful service, recently had to go to the hospital on account of an accident. The physicians were astonished to discover that their patient was a man instead of a woman. It was only a day or two before he fell violently in love with the nurse who was attending him, and a marriage was arranged. A few days ago, the office assistant resumed "her" duties but clad in a fashionable morning coat and trousers instead of in a tight skirt and blouse.

Reflection on the Promoters.

Charles P. Abbey, a Chicago attorney, was called upon at a recent banquet given to lawyers and judges. He said: "I was recently trying a case to foreclose a mortgage given by promoters of a new insurance company which had failed. I had as one of my witnesses a man named Kelley who had made a friend of a yellow dog while taking a morning walk. The dog followed him to court, and when the case was adjourned at noon the dog was waiting for Kelley. The attorney of the insurance people asked him if he was trying to steal the dog.

"Kelley thought a moment and then answered bluntly: 'Yes, I'm going to steal the dog, but I suppose him to resemble closely the men who organized the insurance company and got the low dog.'"

FAMILY RE-UNION

On Saturday, July 20th, the Killingsworth family met at the home of Mr. W. H. Killingsworth, two miles north of Jemison and spent a most enjoyable day. A number of friends of the family joined the many Killingsworths in making the day one of pleasure and enjoyment.

In the morning there were several short speeches and in the afternoon the crowd was entertained by Mrs. Shade Laird with a temperance lecture that was full of logic and should go far toward stamping out the use of whiskey in our country.

It is to be hoped that this prosperous and influential family will continue these family reunions each year and that they will be blessed with a continuance of good health and prosperity such as they have enjoyed in the past.

Heart Disease Almost Fatal to Young Girl

"My daughter, when thirteen years old, was stricken with heart trouble. She was so bad we had to place her bed near a window so she could get her breath. She took a great many bottles, but she is spared to me today, a fat, rosy cheeked girl. No one can imagine the confidence I have in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy." A. R. CANON, Worth, Mo.

FIFTH DISTRICT S. S. CONVENTION

The fifth District S. S. convention was held at Mt. Creek on Wednesday, July 17th

The convention was a decided success. Although the weather was not good, eight of the ten Suhday Schools in the district were represented. All of the speakers were present except Mr. C. R. Russell and Miss Mary Carr Gibson; we regret very much the absence of both. However, the latter's place was ably filled by Miss Della Williams.

It is requested that the good people of Mountain Creek be thanked for the kind hospitality shown the members of the convention.

The next convention will be held with Prospects school.

TWO BULL MOOSE PARTIES ON THE JOB

COLOR LINE QUESTION BRINGS ON MUCH TROUBLE.

Birmingham, Ala., July — Alabama now has two separate and distinct "Bull Moose" parties, which fact gives decided "color" to the political situation here as regards the candidacy of the Strenuous One, whose presidential dreadnaught sails forth to battle under the gory folds of the war-like red bandanna.

Soon after the mass convention on Wednesday assembled in the city hall, the whistle of the "steam roller" was heard; the great political juggernaut rolled heavily, but unfaltably down the center of the convention hall and when an adjournment was finally taken, there had rolled out, first, the Lilly White Bull Moose, and second, the same animal of a distinctly black and tan hue.

The trouble first started when some of the twenty-five or more negroes present wanted to know if it were going to be strictly a "white man's" party. He was W. Mixon, who, in suave tones, insisted it would be unwise and against the principles of Roosevelt himself, for the party to shut out the colored representatives. However, in spite of the protest, there were no negroes on the delegation to the convention at Chicago next month, and as a result the black and tan party now exists, the negroes having held a meeting Wednesday night and selected the following delegates to represent their state and race in Alabama: John Garrett, O. W. Adams, W H. Mixon, H. L. Goins, E. W. Simpson, A. A. Newton, R. L. Hunt, William Pickens. J. S. Moten, E. J. Stone, William Turner and Joe Thomas.—Advertiser.

It would appear from the above that the "BULL MOOSE" party is going to have as smooth sailing as was expected. The fact is that there would be something radically wrong in excluding W. H. Mixon from the Moose party. He was one of the prominent parties present at its borning in Chicago; he blessed it with prayer and has been attended all its meetings. He ought, therefore, of right to hold a high place in its councils. It is nothing short of "unadulterated gall" for Joe Thompson and a few others, who had no thing to do with the organization of the Bull Moose party, to attempt to turn Mixon and his crowd out simply because they are negroes. The negroes have the same right to exclude the whites because they are white. Neither has a monopoly, both were members of the original organization. Mixon received more encouragement from Roosevelt than did Thompson; he had a "say" in the original convention and should continue to have it in all other conventions of the Bull Moose—and he will—mind you.

BULL MOOSE SPLIT TICKLES TAFT WING

The Taft republicans are very much gratified at the factional fight which terminated the Bull Moose convention in this city yesterday and caused a division between the "lilly whites" and the "black and tans." At the federal building today everything in the way to politics and every member of the Taft regulars of the republican party smiled broadly when the bull moose was mentioned.

The members of the republican state committee, which met here and reached here last night and this morning and a large number of them were visitors to the federal building. Pope M. Long, chairman of the committee, reached the city this morning from his home at Cordova and expressed himself as being pleased with the republican situation in this state. P. D. Barker, another prominent member of the committee and one of the Taft leaders in the state, arrived here last night and is registered at the Hillman. Expressions today from a number of the visiting Taft republicans were all favorable in regard to the outlook of the Taft republicans in this state as compared with the Bull Moose party.—Birmingham Ledger.

The Taft people can get but poor comfort out of the seeming "split" in the Bull Moose party as quoted above. They may think that Mixon and his colored friends, having been kicked out of the Teddy party will return to the "regulars" and associate with them some more in conventions, but we miss our guess if this be true. Mixon and his crowd will not again go to republican conventions—that is not right soon. Of course a considerable number of negroes will stick with the Taft crowd but there will be a large number of them to go to the moose crowd and its candidates too. Taft can get no comfort out of this; he need not fear a wholesale desertion on this part of the negroes but he had as well realize that some of them are going to get on the Teddy wagon.

So after all, to rid oneself of the negro a man must come into the democratic party and stay there.

SIX REPUBLICAN STATES STRONG FOR COLONEL

LAY PLANS FOR CAPTURE OF REPUBLICAN ORGANIZATION.

Oyster Bay, July 25—Six staunch Republican states have adopted a plan, Colonel Roosevelt said tonight, for the bodily capture of the republican organization by the national progressive party. The states he named are Kansas, Minnesota, South Dakota, Idaho, California and Washington. In each of these states, according to the Roosevelt leaders who have talked with the ex-president or his aides, the republican organization is in control of the supporters of the new party to an extent sufficient to enable them to transfer the organization virtually intact to Colonel Roosevelt's support. In each case it is the intention to retain the name republican and place candidates for Congress and State officials on the regular republican ticket.

In states in which the law requires the names of Taft and Sherman be placed on the ballot as the republican nominees, the Roosevelt candidates for electors will go in a separate column. Where the law does not exact this the Roosevelt candidates probably will be placed under the republican emblem under the theory that Colonel Roosevelt is the legitimate nominee of the party. This claim goes back to the meeting in Chicago the night the republican national convention adjourned.

It was Colonel Roosevelt's expectation that no decision would be reached as to the procedure in these states until the general situation was discussed at the Chicago convention of the new party.

It has been reported to him, however, that the movement had advanced more rapidly than was expected, and there is no reason for delaying the work longer.

FIVE GENERATIONS LIVING

ALL ENJOYING GOOD HEALTH MRS. SARAH LATHAM HEADS THE LIST; MR. JAS. H. MIDDLETON JR. THE LAST.

If ever a man reflected in his countenance the pride and glow of happy fatherhood, that man is known as James Hurst Middleton of Clanton, Ala. Last Friday morning, at his home in the western part of the city, it was announced that Mr. James Hurst Middleton. Jr., had put in his appearance and was claiming part of the attention of the household which heretofore Jas. Hurst Sr. had monoplized. Well, Jim's a generous hearted fellow, so he gladly agreed to divide with his son and heir, so things are moving smoothly, even joyously out at James' home.

The advent of the young man, happy as it was and giving joy and gladness to so many hearts, marks a chapter in the history of tbe Latham family of this and Shelby counties not often attained by mortals.

There are five generations of this family now living within a radius of forty miles of each other; most of them within ten miles of each other.

Mrs. Sarah Latham of Montevallo, who now stands at the head of the family, is just one half dozen years under the century mark, and, notwithstanding her extreme old age, is enjoying perfect health. Dr. S. A. Latham of Montevallo, the second of the famiiy, acknowledges to sixty four, tho' he looks much younger and as spry as many a man at forty.

Mrs. J. T. Ellis of Montevallo is the third of this fortunate family; she is the mother of our own Mrs. J. H. Middleton, who before her marriage was known to her host of friends as Miss Jatie (J. T.) Lawrence.

Then comes the bouncing young Middleton, the pride and joy of the four preceding generations.

A most remarkable family record indeed; one not easily matched and, perhaps, never surpassed.

Dr. Latham stated to tne Press man that just as soon as the weather moderates a little he proposes to take the five generations to some suitable place and a "family group" made.

Can any of the state papers furnish a more remarkable family record?

COLLECTOR THOMPSON REMOVED FROM OFFICE

REFUSED TO RESIGN JOB.

Washington, July 25—As the result of his refusal to resign at the request of Secretary Mac Veagh, Joseph O. Thompson was removed today as collector of internal revenue for Alabama and Mississippi with headquarters at Birmingham. Mr. Mac Veagh dismissed the collector by telegraph on authority of the President. Mr. Thompson is the leader of the Roosevelt forces in Alabama. He was asked to resign several days ago. His refusal was received today by Secretary Mac Veagh, who immediately took up the case with the President and asked for authority to take summary action.

Washington, D. C., July 25—Secretary Mac Veagh today received the formal refusal of Joseph O. Thompson to resign as collector of internal revenue for Alabama and Mississippi. Mr. Thompson is the leader of the Roosevelt forces in Alabama.

DR. MASON MAY RECEIVE APPOINTMENT

THE PRESIDENT IMPORTUNED WITH THAT OBJECT IN VIEW.

Since Mr. Joseph O. Thompson has been turned out of the Collectorship by President Taft, rumor has been rife as to who would probably receive the appointment—Wright or Mason.

It will be remembered that Secretary of the Treasury McVeagh asked Thompson to resign in view of the fact that he had espoused the cause of Roosevelt as against Taft, from whom he had received the appointment, and failing to resign was turned out by wire.

Even before this movement was put on foot it was rumored that Thompson was slated to "walk the plank," because he had turned from the republican party. Mason, (the negro physician of Birmingham, who was a delegate to the National Convention at Chicago,) was, it is well understood, promised a lucrative position because of his loyalty to Taft, refusing for a considerable sum to turn over to Roosevelt. The article below shows that a strenuous effort is being put forth to have him appointed to the highest office within the gift of the president so far as Alabama is concerned. What do you think of that?

NEGRO COLLECTOR URGED UPON PRESIDENT TAFT.

Washington, July 29.

Thompson, recently removed as Collector of Internal Revenue for Alabama and Mississippi.—Advertiser.

THE COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association was held in Clanton, July 25 and 26.

There were present more prominent Sunday school workers from out of the county than at any convention heretofore held and it meant a great deal to the county workers to have the benefit of the broad knowledge and deep experience of these men and women from different parts of the state.

Mrs. S. P. Moore of Birmingham, State Superintendent of Teacher-Training; Mrs. Fred Thornton, who has charge of Teacher-Training work in Montgomery county; Dr. Geo. Eaves, minister of the Congregational church in Birmingham; Mr. D. H. Marbury, the Alabama member of the International Executive Committee; Mr. W. D. Dillard, Supt. of Home Department, and Mr. A. S. Scott, State Field Worker, added special interest to the sessions of the convention, while our own "home talent"—Messrs. Howard Roper, H. G. Williams, S. H. Herbert and W. E. Thomas and Rev. P. G. Maness were close seconds in helpful and inspirational speeches.

The reports of the county officers, the superintendents of the departments and the district presidents show that the Sunday school work is prospering throughout our county. The reports of four of the district presidents, Messrs. Thomas, Murphy, Crumpton and Mitchell, were evidence of the fact that they realize the responsibility of their positions and that they are giving time and thought and labor to the welfare of their districts. We were sorry that Mr. W. T. Johnson of district 3 and Mr. W. J. Billingsley of district 5 were absent. The Jemison district, No. 7, W. E. Thomas, president, made the best showing for the year. Mr Thomas was very ably assisted by the Secretary, Miss Addie Horsley, who has the distinction of being the best secretary in the county—with Miss Bettie Morris Gardner of the Verbena district No. 5, "next best."

Especial mention is made of the work done by the following department superintendents: T. E. Williams, Teacher-training; J. A. Hunter, Adult Class; Judge L. H. Reynolds, Temperance, and E. L. Thornton, Chairman of the Executive Committee. These gentlemen have attended district conventions, visited schools, written letters, sent out leaflets, made speeches and traveled "miles and miles" by rail and over country roads in the interest of their departments and while all have done exceedingly well, perhaps the prize goes to Mr. J. A. Hunter, whose enthusiasm and earnest effort has trebled the number of organized classes during the year.

The gratitude of the visitors is due Rev. R. J. Mills, who left protracted services at one of his circuit churches to bid the convention welcome to the church of which he is the minister; to Mr. W. I. Mullins, who in his own distinctive and characteristic manner presented the Sunday school folk with the "keys of the city" and made them welcome to the capital of the county; to those citizens of Clanton who hospitably opened their homes for the entertainment of the strangers within the city gates; to Mr. J. W. Stanfield and Mr. Barney Roberts, of the entertainment committee; and the county association in all its branches and ramifications is deeply indebted to the "Union" and the "Press" for generous space given to Sunday school affairs. The list of officers will be published later.

PRELIMINARY TRIAL

Before Hon. E. B. Deason, County Judge, on Tuesday morning was held the preliminary trial of Mr. J. V. Higgins, charged with assault to murder, upon the person of Postmaster Dudley.

Ten or twelve witnesses for the state were summonsed but there seemed to be no witnesses for the defense present.

Hon. J. O. Middleton represented the defendant, while the State was represented by Solicitor Latham.

After consultation, and without the examination of any witnesses, agreement was reached between the attorneys to continue the bond at the same amount fixed by the Sheriff ($500.00) and the defendant be held to await the action of the grand jury.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Maitland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping.

CHAPTER XIX—(Continued).

Not altogether admirable had been James Armstrong's outwardly successful career. In much that is high and noble and manly his actions—and his character—had often been lacking, but even the base can love, and sometimes love transforms, if it be given a chance. The passion of Cymon for Iphigenia, made a man and prince out of the rustic boor, and his real love for Enid Maitland might have done more for Armstrong than he himself or anyone who knew him as he was, and few there were who had such knowledge of him, dreamed was possible. There was one thing that love could not do, however; it could not make him a patient philosopher, a good waiter. His rule of life was not very high, but in one way it was admirable, in that prompt, bold desire action was his chiefest characteristic.

On this certain morning a month after the heart-breaking disaster, his power of passive endurance had been strained to the vanishing point. The great white range was flung in his face like a challenge. Within its secret recesses lay the solution of the mystery. Somewhere, dead or alive, beyond the soaring rampart was the woman he loved. It was impossible for him to remain quiet any longer. Common sense, reason, every argument that had been adduced, suddenly became of no weight. He lifted his head and stared straight westward, his eyes swept the long semicircle of horizon across which the mighty range was drawn like the chord of gigantic arc or the string of a mighty bow. Each white peak mocked him, the insolent aggression of the range called him irresistibly to action.

"By Heaven," he said under his breath, rising to his feet, "winter or no winter, I go."

Robert Maitland had offices in the same building. Having once come to a determination, there was no more uncertainty or hesitation about Armstrong's course. In another moment he was standing in the private room of his friend. The two men were not alone there. Stephen Maitland sat in a low chair before another window removed from the desk somewhat, staring out at the range. The old man was huddled down in his seat, every line of his figure spoke of grief and despair. Of all the places in Denver, he liked best his brother's office fronting the rampart of the mountains, and hour after hour he sat there quietly looking at the summits, sometimes softly shrouded in white, sometimes swept bare by the fierce winter gales that blew across them, sometimes shining and sparkling so that the eye scarce sustain their reflection of the dazzling sun of Colorado; and at other times seen dimly through mists of whirling snow.

Oh, yes, the mountains challenged him also to the other side of the range. His heart yearned for his child, but he was too old to make the attempt. He could only sit and pray and wait with such faint and fading hope as he could still cherish until the break up of the spring came. For the rest, he troubled nobody; nobody noticed him, nobody marked him, nobody minded him. Robert Maitland recognized his quietness, a little more softly, a little more gently, that was all. Yet the presence of his brother was a living grief and a living reproach to him. Although he was quite blameless he blamed himself. He had not known how he had grown to love his niece until he had lost her. His conscience accused him hourly, and yet he knew not where he was at fault or how he could have done differently. It was a helpless and hopeless situation. To him, therefore, entered Armstrong.

"Maitland," he began, "I can't stand it any longer. I'm going into the mountains."

"You are mad!"

"I can't help it. I can't sit here and face them, damn them, and remain quiet."

"You will never come out alive."

"Oh, yes, I will; but if I don't, I swear to God I don't care."

Old Stephen Maitland rose unsteadily to his feet and gripped the back of his chair.

"Did I hear aright, sir?" he asked, with all the polished and graceful courtesy of birth and breeding which never deserted him in any emergency whatsoever. "Do you say—"

"I said I was going into the mountains to search for her."

"It is madness," urged Robert Maitland.

But the old man did not hear him.

"Thank God!" he exclaimed with deep feeling. "I have sat here day after day and watched those mighty hills, and I have said to myself that if I had youth and strength as I have love, I would not wait."

"You are right," returned Armstrong, equally moved, and indeed it would have been hard to have heard and seen that father unresponsively; "and I am not going to wait, either."

"I understand your feelings, Jim, and yours, too, Steve," began Robert Maitland, arguing against his own emotions, "even if she escaped the flood, she must be dead by this time."

"You needn't go over the old argument, Bob. I'm going into the mountains, and I'm going now. No," he continued swiftly, as the other opened his mouth to interpose further objections, "you needn't say another word. I'm a free agent, and I'm old enough to decide what I can do. There is no argument, there is no force, there is no appeal, there is nothing that will restrain me. I can't sit here and eat my heart out when she may be there."

"But it's impossible!"

"It is impossible. How do I know that there may not have been somebody in the mountains; she may have wandered to some settlement, some hunter's cabin, some prospector's hut."

"But we were there for weeks and saw nothing, no evidence of human-ity."

"I don't care. The mountains are filled with secret nooks you could pass by within a stone's throw, and never see him; she may be some of them. I suppose she is dead, but I'll not believe it until I have examined every square rod within a radius of 50 miles from your camp. I'll take the long chance, the longest, even."

"Well, that's all right," said Robert Maitland. "Of course, I intend to do that as soon as the spring opens; but what's the use of trying to do it now?"

"It's use to me. I'll either go mad here in Denver, or I must go to seek for her there."

"But you will never come back if you once get in those mountains alone."

"I don't care whether I do or not. It's no use, old man, I am going, and that's all there is about it."

Robert Maitland knew men. He recognized finality when he heard it, or when he saw it, and it was quite evident that he was in the presence of it then. It was no use to say more.

"Very well," he said. "I honor you for your feeling, even if I don't think much of your common sense."

"Damn common sense," cried Armstrong, triumphantly. "It's love that moves me now."

At that moment there was a tap on the door. A clerk from the outer office bidden to enter, announced that old Kirkby was in the ante room.

"Bring him in," directed Maitland, eager to welcome him.

He fancied that the newcomer would undoubtedly assist him in dissuading Armstrong from his foolhardy, useless enterprise.

"Mornin', old man," drawled Kirkby. "Howdy, Armstrong, my respects to you, sir," he said, sinking his voice a little as he bowed respectfully toward Mr. Stephen Maitland, a very sympathetic look in the old frontiersman's eyes at the sight of the bereaved father.

"Kirkby, you've come in the very nick of time," at once began Robert Maitland.

"Allus glad to be Johnny-on-the-spot," smiled the older man.

"Armstrong here," continued the other, intent upon his purpose, "says he can't wait until the spring and the snow melt, he is going into the mountains now to look for Enid."

Kirkby didn't love Armstrong. He didn't care for him a little bit, but there was something in the bold hardihood of the man, something in the way which he met the reckless challenge of the mountains that the old man and all the others felt that moved the inmost soul of the hardy frontiersman. He threw an approving glance at him.

"I tell him that it is absurd, impossible, that he risks his life for nothing, and I want you to tell him the same thing. You know more about the mountains than either of us."

"Mr. Kirkby," answered Stephen Maitland, "allow me. I don't want to influence you against your better judgment, but if your would all have equal chance, and plenty maybe she is there, and perhaps alive still, and in need, you would not say a word to deter him."

"Why, Steve," expostulated Robert Maitland, "surely you know I would risk anything for Enid. Somehow, it seems as if I were being put in the selfish position by my opposition."

"No, no," said his brother. "It isn't that. You have your wife and children, but this young man—"

"Well, what do you say, Kirkby? Not that it makes any difference to me what anybody says. Come, we are wasting time," interposed Armstrong, who, now that he had made up his mind, was anxious to be off.

"Jim Armstrong," answered Kirkby, decidedly. "I never thought much o' you in the past, an' I think sence you've put out this last projick of yourn, that I'm entitled to call you a damn fool, w'ich you are, and I'm another, for I'm goin' into the mountains with you."

"I'm Goin' Into the Mountains With You."

"Oh, thank God!" cried Stephen Maitland fervently.

"I know you don't like me," answered Armstrong. "That's neither here nor there. Perhaps you have cause to dislike me, perhaps you have not. I don't like you any too well myself, but there's no man on earth I'd rather have go with me on a quest of this kind than you, and there's my hand on it."

Kirby shook it vigorously.

"This ain't committin' myself," he said cautiously. "So far's I'm concerned, you ain't good enough for Miss Maitland, but I admires your spirit, Armstrong, an' I'm goin' with you. 'Tain't no good, 'twon't produce nothin', most likely we'll never come back agin; but jest the same, I'm goin' along. Nobody's goin' to show me the trail. My nerve and grit, w'en it comes to helpin' a young female like that girl, is as good as anybody's, I guess. You're her father," he drawled, on turning to Stephen Maitland, "an' I ain't no kin to her, but, by gosh, I believe I can understand better than any one else yere what you are feelin'."

"Kirkby," said Robert Maitland, smiling at the other two, "you have gone clean back on me. I thought you had more sense. But somehow I guess it's contagious, for I am going along with you two myself."

"And I, cannot I accompany you?" pleaded Stephen Maitland, eagerly drawing near to the other three.

"Not much," said old Kirkby promptly. "You ain't got the stren'th, ol' man. You don't know them mountains, nuther. You'd be helpless on a pair o' snow shoes; there ain't anything you could do, you'd jest be a drag on us. Without sayin' anything about myself, with I'm too modest for that, there ain't, three better men in Colorado to tackle this job than Jim Armstrong an' Bob Maitland an'—Well, as I said, I won't mention no other names."

"You three men even considered what was to be done next.

"We must begin a systematic search tomorrow," said Armstrong decisively, as the three men sat around the cheerful fire in the hut.

"Yes," assented Maitland. "Shall we go together, or separately?"

"Separately, of course. We are all hardy and experienced men. Nothing is apt to happen to us. We will meet here every night and plan the next day's work. What do you say, Kirkby?"

The old man had been quietly smoking while the others talked. He smiled at them in a way which aroused their curiosity and made them feel that he had news for them.

"While you was puttin' the finishin' touches on this yere camp, I come acrost a heap o' stuns that somehow the wind had swept bare, there was a big rift in front of it which kept it from seein' it afore; it was built up in the open w'ere there was no trees an' in our lumberin' operations we wasn't lookin' that a-way. I came across it by any chance an—"

"Well, for God's sake, old man," cried Armstrong, impatiently, "what did you find, anything?"

"This," answered Kirkby, carefully producing a folded scrap of paper from his leather vest.

Armstrong fell on it ravenously, and as Maitland bent to him, they both read these words by the firelight.

"Miss Enid Maitland, whose foot is so badly crushed as to prevent her traveling, is safe in a cabin at the head of this canon. I put this notice here to reassure any one who may be seeking her as to her welfare. Follow the stream up to its source.

"WM. BERKELY NEWBOLD."

"Thank God!" exclaimed Robert Maitland.

"You called me a fool, Kirkby," said Armstrong, his eyes gleaming. "What do you think of it now?"

"It's the fools, I find," said Kirkby sapiently, "that gener'ly gits there. Providence seems to be a-watchin' over 'em."

"You said you chanced on this paper, Jack," continued Maitland. "It looks like the deliberate intention of Almighty God."

"I reckon so," answered the other simply. "You see He's got to look after all the fools on earth to keep 'em from doin' too much damage to themselves an' to others in this yere crooked trail of a world."

"Let us start now," urged Armstrong.

"'Tain't possible," said the old man, taking another puff at his pipe, and only a glistening of the eye betrayed the joy that he felt; otherwise his phlegmatic calm was unbroken, his demeanor just as undisturbed as it always was. "We'd jest throw away our lives a-wanderin' round these yere mountains in the dark. We've got to have light, an clear weather. If it should be snowin' in the mornin' we have to wait until it cleared."

"I won't wait a minute," said Armstrong. "At daybreak, weather or no weather, I start."

"What's your hurry, Jim?" continued Kirkby, calmly. "The gal's safe; one day more or less ain't goin' to make no difference."

"She's with another man," answered Armstrong quickly.

"Do you know this Newbold?" asked Maitland, looking at the note again.

"No, not personally, but I have heard of him."

"I know him," answered Kirkby quickly, "an' you've seed him too. Why, he's the feller that shot his wife, that married Louise Rosser."

"That man!"

"The very same."

"You say you never saw him, Jim?" asked Maitland.

"I repeat I never met him," said Armstrong, flushing suddenly; "but I knew him wife."

"Yes, you did that—" drawled the old mountaineer.

"What do you mean?" flushed Armstrong.

"I mean that you knowed her, that all," answered the old man with an innocent air that was almost childlike.

When the others woke up in the morning Armstrong's sleeping bag was empty. Kirkby crawled out of his own warm nest, opened the door and peered out into the storm.

"Well," he said, "I guess the old fool has beat God this time. It don't look to me as if even He could help him now."

"But we must go after him at once," urged Maitland.

"See for yourself," answered the old man, throwing wider the door. "We've got to wait 'til this wind dies down, unless we give the Almighty the go-by lookin' after three instid o' one."

EMPEROR PASSES FROM LIFE'S STAGE

NEWS OF DEATH WAS SEVERE SHOCK TO PEOPLE, WHO ADORED RULER.

ILL FOR SEVERAL MONTHS

Death Came to the Japanese Ruler After 48 Hours of Unconsciousness.

Tokio.—Mutsuhito, for 44 years Emperor of Japan, died at 12:43 o'clock. He had been unconscious for 48 hours. Yoshito Haru-No-Miya reigns under formula provided by the constitution promulgated by Mutsuhito, "The King is dead; long live the King."

Mutsuhito, who was the one hundred and twenty-first Emperor of Japan, passed gently away. He had been unconscious for many hours prior to his death and the Empress, the crown prince and the most prominent officials of the household and government were at the bedside.

Haruko, now Dowager Empress, yields to Princess Sadako, the young Empress, who is the mother of three sons of whom the eldest is Hirohito. Haruko has won universal sympathy because of her untiring vigil in the sick room where she remained continuously for 10 days. Even on the last day she pitifully begged the physicians for a short respite for the dying Emperor.

Everything known to science was done to prolong the life of the sovereign. The whole nation watched pathetically.

The outcome was inevitable from the first acute developments July 19. Death was due to acute nephritis. This was complicated by diabetes and an intestinal affection. As is usual in such cases the patient on occasion showed marked signs of improvement followed by a relapse. Since July 25 the condition of the Emperior gradually became worse with high fever, weak and irregular pulse and shallow respiration.

Sketch of Life.

His imperial majesty, Mutsuhito, was the 121st emperor of Japan. He was born at Kyoto on November 3, 1852, and was the second son of the Emperor Komei. In 1860, seven years before his father's death, he was declared heir apparent. He ascended the throne as a boy of 15, and on that occasion gave his solemn promise to grant some form of representative government. He fulfilled that promise in the most liberal manner and thus gave to his country its new birth. He is acclaimed by the entire world as the father of modern Japan.

Although Mutsuhito did not at first impress his personality upon the outside world, he did evince rare acumen in calling around him a group of the ablest men in his empire. These he called the "Elder Statesmen," and under their wise council the mikado saw his country develop into a world power almost in a night.

The two most conspicuous events of his long reign were the wars with China and Russia, both of which, as all the world knows, terminated happily for him.

The married life of the mikado was said to have been exceptionally happy. He leaves one child, a son, Prince Haru, who is an officer in the Japanese army.

This prince is not the son of the empress, but of a secondary wife, just as his father was. But to the prince the empress is his mother, and the woman who bore him is a perfect stranger.

REFUGEES POUR INTO EL PASO.

Americans Frightened by Threats of Rebels to Massacre Them.

TENTS FOR REFUGEES.

Washington.—The Senate passed a joint resolution authorizing the war department to supply tents for the care of American refugees from Mexico at El Paso. Telegrams from the mayor of El Paso said that 2,500 Americans from Mexico would be in El Paso within another day and that the city had no facilities to care for them.

El Paso, Tex.—Nearly 600 American women and children, hungry and fatigued refugees from the Mormon colonies in Casas Grandes district, 200 miles south of the border, arrived here by special train. Others are expected.

That the exodus of Americans from Mexico will be thorough is evidenced. There are already more than 800 refugees in this city. They are from three large and three small colonies, each with almost an entire American population, Dublan, with 1,200, Juarez with 800, Diaz with 750 and three minor mountain settlements with from 250 to 300 population each.

According to conservative figures given by Mormon churchmen here, more than 6,250 Americans in Mexico consider themselves in grave danger.

INDUSTRIAL LINES WELL EMPLOYED

Volume of Business Quite up to Normal.

New York.—R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Statistics of trade movements tell of a volume of business quite up to normal. That industrial lines are well employed is indicated by the advances in products of iron and steel and by the better demand and higher prices this week for copper.

Generally excellent crop prospects promise a larger traffic over the railroads and increased purchasing of equipment is noted as a result. During the past week orders for about 10,000 cars and 300 locomotives were placed while the buying movement is expected to gain momentum at an early date. In other finished steel new demands have fallen off, yet the volume of business still is very satisfactory, for the midsummer season. In spite of hot weather and a shortage of labor, production has not been materially curtailed, the leading interest operating at approximately 90 per cent of capacity and the independent plants being busier than for two years. Several price advances have been named, including a rise of $1 a ton on wire products and premiums continue to be paid for prompt deliveries of plates and shapes. There is an upward trend in sheets, the mills being well supplied with contracts several months ahead. Crude steel is becoming scarcer and some manufacturers have practically withdrawn from the market.

A moderate trade is noted in cotton goods. Numerous buyers are in the market and show some anxiety as to supplies for future requirements as stocks in all positions are believed to be very small. Higher prices have been announced for some grades and the market throughout is very strong. The demand for woolens is about all that could be desired and raw wool is readily taken at the higher prices asked. The shoe trade makes a further gain this week and New England and other manufacturers constantly receive some additional orders, but the higher prices still tend to check business.

Prices in leather and hides move upward and available supplies are apparently reduced. There is no indication of undue speculation in any direction to threaten future stability and the firmer values in practically all departments of trade are sustained by the constantly increasing requirements of consumers.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

This week's reports furnish a veritable budget of good news. Practically every crop prospect pleases, current trade is of seasonable volume, buying for fall and beyond is expanding, the iron and steel industry is oversold, labor is scarce, the railroads are preparing for a heavy traffic in the autumn, gross earnings are improving; just now no one seems to be much concerned about political matters and although retail dealers have to cut profits to move stocks business has been stimulated. Expansion in trade is most visible in the northwest. Eastern centers also note an uplift.

Print cloths are firm with staple goods showing activity. Deliveries of dress goods and men's wear are so far behind as to cause clothing manufacturers some concern and mill agents reserve the right to advance prices any time. In the knit goods and hosiery line business for next spring is expanding and purchasers of washed fabrics and fancy cottons are sampling quite liberally in preference to buying freely for the spring of 1913. Premiums have to be paid to warehouses for prompt shipment of steel products and advances are noted on wire, skelp and light rails, while the scarcity of labor, which commands relatively good pay, tends to restrict outputs. However, new business is somewhat under shipments, but railroad buying of cars is more liberal. Pig iron is higher and in the west is more active.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending July 25 were 252 against 283 last week, 241 in the like week of 1911, 200 in 1910, 223 in 1909 and 275 in 1908.

Business failures in Canada for the week number 20, which compares with 22 last week and 22 in the corresponding week of last year.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending July 25 aggregate 2,056,958 bushels against 1,984,456 last week and 2,514,204 this week last year.

For the four weeks ending July 25 exports are 9,530,359 bushels against 7,329,067 in the corresponding period last year. Corn exports for the week are 99,422 bushels against 44,954 last week and 350,098 in 1911. For the four weeks ending July 25 corn exports are 353,307 bushels against 2,759,027 last year.

NEWS BREVITIES.

London.—The Duc DeLorges, a French nobleman, fell down the elevator shaft in a home he was visiting and died from his injuries a few hours later.

El Paso, Texas.—General Orozco denounced as unauthorized any demand for $100,000 gold with a threat to destroy the Mexican Northwestern railroad if not paid. Orozco stated the demand was not authorized by him.

HERE IS REALLY GOOD IDEA

Fire Insurance Would Be an Easy Matter if It Could Be Conducted That Way.

Senator Williams at a dinner at Yazoo, said in condemnation of a mooted tariff change.

"They who advocate this change know just as much about the tariff as the old lady knew about fire insurance.

"This old lady visited an insurance office and insured her barn for $3,500. The policy was drawn up, signed, sealed and handed over to her and she put it in her cabba and started out.

"'But hold on, ma'am,' said the agent. 'I must ask you, please, for the first year's premium.'

"'The first year's premium,' said she. 'And how much will that be?'

"'There it is, ma'am, written on the policy,' said the agent. 'A small matter of $24.'

"'Oh,' said the old lady, 'I'm in a hurry this morning. You just let the premiums stand and deduct them when the barn burns down.'"

ECZEMA FOR TEN YEARS

1809 Little Walsh St., Baltimore, Md.—"I was afflicted with eczema for about ten years, the most tormenting and agonizing. It was dry eczema, all itching. It was scratch, scratch, scratch and burn, burn, burn. By scratching I brought sores which scabbed. I tried all remedies which I knew or heard of; some gave me temporary relief, but none permanent cure. I couldn't sleep for scratching, after which there was burning. I saw the advertisement for free samples of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and wrote for them. They did me good immediately and I then bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I was cured in two weeks." (Signed) George Wooden, Jan. 21, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Force of Momentum.

The old mountaineer, who was standing on the corner of the main street in a certain little Kentucky town, had never seen an automobile. When a good-sized touring car came rushing up the street at about 30 miles an hour, and slowed down just enough to take the corner on two wheels, his astonishment was extreme.

The old fellow watched the disappearing car with bulging eyes and open mouth. Then turning to a bystander, he remarked, solemnly:

"The horses must sho'ly ha' been traveling some when they got loose from that gentleman's carriage!"—Youth's Companion.

Order From Sister, Too.

Mr. Briggs called one evening to see his sweetheart, and her little brother, Tom, was entertaining him until the young woman came down.

"Tom, when your sister comes down and is comfortably seated on the couch with me, I want you to tiptoe in softly and turn the gas down low, will you?"

"You're too late," replied the boy. "Sister just told me to come in and turn it out."—Judge.

Incredible.

"Cholly told me solemnly yesterday that he once had a brainstorm."

"Pooh, pooh! I'd just as soon believe that a jelly fish could have the backache."

HER EVENING TO BLUNDER

Fate Evidently Was Determined to Be Unkind to Fair Diner Making Conversation.

"Can you tell me," remarked a fair lady of her partner at the supper table, "who that exceedingly ugly man is? I mean the one sitting opposite you?"

The gentleman smiled sardonically.

"Oh, he's my brother!" came the reply.

The lady went scarlet, and her confusion was almost painful.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" she stuttered, apologizing profusely. "You see, I did not notice the resemblance between you."

A moment later she turned to her neighbor on her left, who happened to be a woman.

"Do you see that handsome fellow over there, twisting his mustache?" she asked. "He's been watching me, and making eyes at me all the evening. Who is he?"

The other woman turned scornfully and angrily upon her.

"Oh, he's only my husband!" came the biting reply.

Foiled.

The lovers whispered together before the doors of her father's hangar, planning the last details of their elopement.

"Hurry, dearest," he urged. "We will wheel out your runabout monoplane and together we'll fly away on the wings of the night, nevermore to be separated!"

"Wait," she exclaimed. "I have a better plan. We will run it out and hide it in the old stable; then we will walk to the trolley and papa will never suspect us."

They were hardly half a mile on their way down the road when, from overhead, came the roar of the triple propellers of the racing monoplane as papa dashed out into the darkness in hot pursuit.—Puck.

Time for Patriotism.

The organist was not lacking in patriotism, yet he rebelled when requestetd to play "The Star-Spangled Banner" at a wedding.

"It is not appropriate,' said he.

'Ain't it?" said the bride's father. "For this wedding it is the most appropriate thing you can play. Cut all the rest of the program, if you like, but stick to that. I had the hardest kind of a fight to keep Bell's mother from marrying her off to a foreigner. Between Belle and me we won out for an American and if this isn't the time for the 'Star-Spangled Banner,' I'd like to know what is."

Carrying a Suffrage Banner.

"Was your wife in the suffrage parade?" asked Morrowby, meeting Jelliffe on the street.

"You bet she was!" said Jelliffe enthusiastically. "Why, she is the flag bearer for her chapter!"

"Mercy!" cried Morrowby. "Do you mean to tell me that little woman carried a flag all that distance?"

"Well—no," said Jelliffe. "My chauffeur and I took turns at it."—Judge.

Tuberculosis Day in October.

Churches and religous societies, to the number of at least 100,000; will be urged to give special attention to the prevention of tuberculosis on Sunday, October 27, or on some day during the week preceding or the week following that date. This season has been set apart and designated as the Third National Tuberculosis Day by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Tuberculosis Day was originally set on April 28, but was postponed because of a conflict with Conservation Sunday of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which was held on that date. The observance of Tuberculosis Day in the fall of this year will be utilized by anti-tuberculosis workers only for the general education of churchgoers on consumption, but also for the purpose of interesting them in the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals.

What the Addition of an "s" Did.

"Please Do Not Pluck the Flowers Without Leave;" was the request placed conspicuously in the garden of a residence to which the public occasionally is admitted.

One day a practical joker added "s" to the last word of the sign. The result was that everybody who visited the estate for the next few days carried away a large bouquet of the flowers, and with the blooms, lots of leaves.

RECORD OF A GREAT MEDICINE

Doctors Could Not Help Mrs. Templeton—Regained Health through Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Hooper, Nebraska.—"I am very glad to tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me. For five years I suffered from female troubles so I was scarcely able to do my work. I took doctors' medicines and used local treatments but was not helped. I had such awful bearing down pains and my back was so weak I could hardly walk and could not ride. I often had to sit up nights to sleep and my friends thought I could not live long. At my request my husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I commenced to take it. By the time I had taken the seventh bottle my health had returned and I began doing my washing and was a well woman. At one time for three weeks I did all the work for eighteen boarders with no signs of my old trouble returning. Many have taken your medicine after seeing what it did for me. I would not take $1000 and be where I was. You have my permission to use my name if it will aid anyone."—Mrs. SUSIE TEMPLETON, Hooper, Nebraska.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of woman—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, heart disease, chronic weakness, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems as if from the big stir created amongst specialists when THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that reap so largely the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures—should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng., and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been searching in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. Peugeot Co., 26 Broadway, New York.

The movement to bring the Comer mill to Clanton skygacked but that is no reason why we should not go after the railroad.

How can a man be for Taft and Roosevelt too? What does he hope to gain by such a straddle? Is it possible that he thinks to deceive anyone?

Byron Trammell is slated to lose his job for going off after Roosevelt but he says "let 'er go" "I'm a Roosevelt, moose man, not a Taft republican.

Can't get under two emblems this year buddy; you must choose one or the other, and that real soon. Come out now and tell us —Where is you at?

"He that is not for me is against me" says the Good Book: Roosevelt could far more easily and forcibly use that statement as the slogan of the Bull Moose party than the "Thou shalt not steal" he is now using.

Now that the city election is fast approaching would it not be well for those intending to run for Mayor and Councitmen to declare themselves? The people want to know who you are. Speak out!

Marse Jody Thompsin refused to resign the Collectorship held by him thro' appointment of Taft and was fired by wire. That was rapid work. Jody went off after Roosevelt and Taft went after him.

Joe Thompson, when he espoused the cause of Roosevelt, repudiated the republican party. That's the way all good Roosevelt republicans are doing—except in Chilton. They want to hold to both here.

"Lets not declare for either side; lets lay low and try to win the county ticket; let the presidential candidates fight it out among themselves, without us taking either side."

Now when it comes to party loyalty, party devotion, commend us to this brand of politicians. But such trickery will avail nothing; the eyes of the thinking voter are open and his mind is working. He can solve a few problems himself, without the aid of "bosses."

Under Which Flag Benzonian?

We have watched the columns of the local republican organ with some degree of interest lately, hoping to ascertain with which side the republicans of the county proposeto align themselves.

Thus far all indications point to a desire to hold with the hounds aud run with the hares. No editorial squib or news item in that sheet shows whether they are "regular" or mooses.

It is a foregone conclusion that the party leaders are deceiving no one except themselves by this "political trick." A man can't eat his cake and have it too. A political leader cannot run with two parties which are diametrically opposed to each other and hope to succeed—as leader.

Men—sure enough men—will not follow such leadership.

A leader, whatever the movement may be, whether religious, social, political or otherwise, must be either flesh, fish or fowl if he expects to enjoy the confidence of the people and continue in the capacity of leader. One thing is sure, the alignment must come sooner or later; there can be no side-stepping in these days, as in former days—in the days when candidates snuggled under two party emblems.

The Chilton republicans must be for Taft or against him; for Roosevelt or opposed to him; there can be no straddle.

Of course there may be a veiled movement to delay declaring themselves in order to "stave off" any possibility of a third ticket, but that will do no particular good. Democracy is going to win, whether there be two, three or four tickets in the field; whether Chilton republicans sail under the colors of Taft or Roosevelt.

By the way, how can a sure enough republican get under the Roosevelt colors anyway? In all other places those who espouse the cause of Roosevelt are declaring against the republican party—are Chilton republicans different from from the republicans in the rest of the world?

There is no use undertaking to fool the people by such a thinly veiled political trick. Come out into the open; take the people into your confidence. Let them know where you stand and give them an opportunity to think for themselves. Men are tired of being haltered up like mules and driven about at the beck and call of one or two others—who pose as leaders.

We do not believe they are going to submit to it any longer; they are going to think some for themselves.

We have heard it said—as coming from the "leaders" too—that the republicans of the county were not going to "line up" with either Taft or Roosevelt, but would steer clear of both and try to save the county ticket!

Now isn't that beautiful party leadership? Isn't it loyalty with a vim? But that little scheme won't work. It used to work in other days, but this is today, not yesterday or last week.

The Banner once claimed to be independent; it sold out (we are not speaking of the $150.00 sell out in the Fall of 1910) to what was known then and has always been known as a republican paper so that whatever of influence and weight the Banner had went into the republican party; there is no denying the fact that the Union has always been republican; the Union-Banner was established for and as a republican paper—why will it not take a stand and declare itself?

Why will it not tell its readers whom it proposes to support in the coming election?

We are anxious to know. Come out in the open, brother; be candid with the people. Deception may work for a short while but it fails in the end. Tell us where you stand.

CRITICAL ILLNESS OF MR. HARPER

As we go to press Mr. A. C. Harper lies critically ill at his home on Seventh street. For more than two weeks this good gentleman has been confined to his bed with kidney trouble. More than once he has rallied and hopes were entertained that he would ultimately recover his wanted health and strength, but as the days passed his illness grew more critical till now no hope whatever is held out for his recovery. Last Saturday evening in addition to his kidney trouble he was stricken with paralysis, which, of course, adds considerably to the seriousness of the situation.

He has been unable to take nourishment for the past several days, so that now it is a mere matter of endurance. Repeatedly has he tried to communicate with his loved ones, but the power of speech having been lost, and his eyesight in a weakened condition, this also he has failed to accomplish. His family and loved ones are gathered about him momentarily expecting the end.

Mr. Harper is among Clanton's best beloved citizens; to know him was to become his friend, and to associate with him is to love him. Clanton will sustain a severe loss in the departure of Mr. A. C. Harper than whom no more worthy citizen ever lived.

DOG DAYS

WHEN DO THEY START?

Considerable discussion was indulged in upon the streets during last week as to when "Dog Days" actually begin—and especially when they begun this year. The Press man was approached to settle the discussion, and made his guess; later on he had occasion to investigate the matter and finds that the encyclopedia says 'Dog days, a period when the star "Sirius" (the dog star) rises with the sun and accompanies it in its circle of the globe, &c., &c; dog days begin as early as the 3rd day of July and as late as the 24th of July, last thirty days"

During the year 1912 dog days begun on the third day of July—the earliest date known, and according to the authority quoted, will expire on tomorrow—the second of August.

From the above it would appear that "dog days" is, like Easter, a changeable period or "celebration" varying with the rising of the star "Sirius."

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the imflamed membranes. Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse substitutes. Rev. J. F. Bilbro, of the Alabama Conference, was in Clanton Sunday and delivered an excellent sermon at the Methodist church at the morning service.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

Latest returns from the Texas primary show Governor Colquitt maintains the lead for the governorship by 8,000 over his competitor, Judge Ramsey. Congressman Morris Sheppard's lead for United States senator has increased with the fuller returns. He now has a majority of 12,000 over all his competitors. Returns as to other offices are meager. Apparently, Congressman James Young of the Third district and Congressman Oscar C. Alloway of the Twelfth district have been nominated.

Governor Hooper gave out an interview in regard to his recall of the revocation of the extradition of W. J. Massee from South Carolina, in which he says the action was based on the statements made in Tennessee that the case had not been fairly heard in Georgia, and while not accepting the statements as correct, he takes the view that it would not be harmful to have the controversy passed on by unbiased power.

The French market, where four generations of housewives have bargained and bought meats and vegetables, will soon have passed. The New Orleans sanitarians won in their fight for conditions that will insure purer food, and the market, part of which has stood since its first establishment in 1801, is to be replaced by a remodeled structure, with white-tiled stalls and modern screening instead of the open-to-fly booths a century old. The renovation of the market has begun. For years the old market, the first the Spaniards erected in the latter part of the 18th century, in Decatur street, then the levee, has been sought by painter and writer for its local color.

Savannah, Ga., was visited by a severe electrical storm that brought along with it a tremendous fall of rain and during which time lightning played pranks in many parts of the city. Two fires were started by the lightning; the street car service was stopped and a great deal of inconvenience caused. The flagpole on top of the four-story Odd Fellows' hall, on Barnard and State streets, was struck by lightning. The large building is tenanted by a great many people, and the blinding flash of lightning and the terrific peal of thunder, accompanied by the falling pieces of pole to the earth, almost created a panic among them for a time.

Rev. W. C. Freeman, Primitive Baptist minister and storekeeper of the village of Mixie, Tenn., was found dead in his storehouse, as the result of a bullet wound in his head. Whether the minister was assassinated or shot himself was not determined. A small caliber rifle was found near the body. One theory advanced, however, is that possibly the rifle was thrown near the body of the minister as a ruse by those responsible for his death.

While swimming in about four and a half feet of water off Sullivan's Island, S. C., Corporal Kirkpatrick of the Seventy-eighth company, coast artillery corps, was bitten by an eight-foot shark. The soldier sustained the loss of several toes. Kirkpatrick, seeing the shark, undertook to escape by hurrying for the shore. The fish followed him and snapped at his feet. The victim suffered great pain.

General.

A honeymoon trip of four hours, duration in a balloon that rose to the height of 8,700 feet, traveled 22 miles and came down in a pig pen, was described at Smithville, Mo., by Mrs. Milo Hartman, who landed near here, when the pilot balloon Kansas City III, came down. She was the only woman in the party and became the bride of Dovtor Hartman in Kansas City just before the balloon was cut loose to show the course for the contesting balloons in the national race, which started from Kansas City.

Harry K. Thaw, in the eyes of the law, is still insane and must remain in the asylum, where he was placed on February 1, 1908, after he had killed Stanford White. Justice Martin J. Keogh of the Supreme court, denied Thaw's application for freedom. The court took the ground that Thaw's release would be dangerous to public safety.

When a piece of slate fell on a mine mule, it kicked the driver, Mike Reed, off the first car, and that car and another ran over and killed him when the mule started up in Terre Haute, Indiana.

Storms did damage of $50,000 or more in Louisville, and kept thousands of Sunday excursionists marooned.

D. L. Koonts of Altoona, Wis., returned to Chicago after an absence of seventeen years and became lost. He obtained the aid of a negro in finding a hotel. The "hotel" proved to be an alley where the negro robbed Mr. Koonts of $40 and then fled.

Americans in northern Mexico have been officially notified by rebel commanders to give up their arms and leave the country, according to advices received in El Paso, Texas, by representatives of the Mormon colonists. An only alternative is to join the rebel ranks and fight against the constitutional government of the republic. Refugees from Mormon colonies are flocking to the border. They will be housed in tents if necessary, and the El Paso customhouse building will be thrown open to them. The American population of Colonia, Juarez and Dublian is fifteen hundred.

Death and widespread devastation from tremendous rains has resulted in western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia. From all sections comes details telling of persons drowned or buildings wrecked or completely washed away; streets torn up and bridges swept down; crops ruined; light plants put out of commission and towns left to suffer their misery in darkness, while transportation, telegraph and telephone facilities are badly crippled.

From Brownsville, Pa., it is reported that horsemen dashing frantically down the Red Stone valley, often with water up to the saddle girths, made a journey of nine miles in time to save the lives of hundreds of persons at Smock, a mining village. Aside from the great quantity of water due to the cloudburst, it was feared a huge reservoir was about to let go. Within a few minutes a thousand families were rushing in and through the muddy waters to the hillsides. Soon the water rushed into the mining village, causing heavy damage.

That mail trains frequently are compelled to run more than eighty miles an hour to make the schedules demanded by the United States government, was brought out at the investigation of the recent Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad wreck at Western Springs, Ill., in which thirteen lives were lost. The Illinois railroad and warehouse commission is making the investigation, Robert Rice, superintendent of the railroad, told of having ridden more than eighty miles an hour on mail trains.

Washington.

What has become of the Atlantic and Great Western canal movement inaugurated by the Atlanta chamber of commerce five years ago to revive interest in this great waterway project? A favorable report on the canal was made by Maj. Walter McFarland to Brig. Gen. A. A. Humphreys, chief of the engineers of the United States army, dated May 25, 1872, and is contained in volume two of the secretary of war's report in 1872. It is stated that a state commission will be appointed to investigate the advisability of having the state construct this great public work.

Samuel T. Farmer of Carrollton, Ga., is in Washington, with a story of a seedless watermelon, which, he says, rivals the discovery of the seedless orange. "Why, in my watermelon patch I accidentally broke off a portion of a melon vine," said Mr. Farmer. "I replanted the new portion. In a few days it began to send forth delicate roots. It cut the melon from the vine and carried it to the house, where, to our great surprise, we found it was seedless."

Each battleship of the navy will be equipped with a speedy hydroplane within the next year if later plans of the navy department materialize. Rear Admiral Phillip Andrews, acting secretary, has called upon manufacturers to notify the department not later than August 15, whether they will submit hydroplane designs to meet naval requirements. It is proposed a speed in the air of not less than 50 miles an hour, carrying two passengers.

President Taft will appoint Dorr Hazlehurst of Evansville, Ind., a brother of Second Lieut. L. W. Hazlehurst, who was killed in an aeroplane accident at College Park, Md., June 11, a cadet at large to West Point. The president has ten of these appointments each year, and he has made it an invariable rule to name the sons of army officers.

The excise bill was put through the United States senate by a coalition of Democrats and Insurgent Republicans. It extends the provisions of the corporation tax to all persons and firms having an annual net income in excess of $5,000. The vote was 37 to 18. This action, following the adoption of the LaFollette wool bill, presages the passage of a bill sharply reducing sugar duties.

The house committee on agriculture recommended an immediate appropriation of $5,000 to stop the ravages of the army worm in Southern states. Secretary Wilson asked for it. Representative Heflin of Alabama told the committee that the worm was stopping railway trains in his district. The committee will try to rush the appropriation through before the agricultural bill is agreed upon.

Legislation which will make effective the anti-liquor laws of prohibition states; which will divorce the express office from the liquor business; strike a stunning blow at the "bootleggers" and the "blind tigers" and make dry states dry in fact, was ordered favorably reported by the judiciary committee of the senate. This was a decided victory for the temperance folks who have for several years valiantly sought to overcome the barrier raised by the Supreme court of the United States in its decision of the Wilson law. Blind tigers will be outlawed.

INTERESTING STATE ITEMS

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF ALABAMA BOILED DOWN FOR HASTY PERSUAL.

FARMERS ARE FEELING GOOD

Wonderful Improvement Is Made In Cotton Prospects During Past Two Weeks.

Montgomery.—In numerous parts of Alabama, farmers are smiling over the condition of their cotton crop. The last two weeks has wrought a wonderful change, and has lifted many of the Alabama planters from a slough of despond to a condition of cheerful optimism.

Cotton is looking good. So say the large majority of reports which come from every section of the State. The hot, dry weather of the last two weeks has given the farmer an opportunity to work out his cotton from the grassy condition which came with excessive rains. The hot weather is exactly what is needed for the development of the plant, also, and cotton is in fair condition.

The crop will be late. Estimates from various reviewers place the lateness at from one to four weeks, due altogether to the setbacks received at the first of the season from cool nights and later on from too much rain.

The excessive amount of rainfall has injured the crop in many localities, as in Dallas County, making it small, and yellow in some cases. Between moisture in too great quantity, and cool weather, the plant nowhere is in a condition equal to that of last year at this time. In fact, the good condition over which the farmers are gloating is only relative. The condition is compared to what it was two or three weeks ago; compared to last season's condition, this year's crop is deficient.

Cotton is spotted in most localities; that is, its condition varies, good or bad, in accordance with the place in which it grows. Cotton in the lowlands is not so good as cotton in the higher plots.

It appears that little harm has been sounded by the farmers concerning pests in cotton. Corn has felt the deteriorating effects of destructive pests much more than has cotton. But even at this, some cotton pests have been found, the most common of which is a sort of caterpillar. Cotton has suffered but little from the real caterpillar, however.

In Montgomery County the crop condition is relatively good, and, although the crop will be late, and although it will be inferior in amount and condition to the crop of last year, still the farmers are not complaining.

In Dallas County a great increase in acreage of cotton is noted. But it is reported, the farmers are turning at the same time to diversified farming, and even with a poor crop of cotton, they will make money by the season's venture.

Tuscaloosa.—The Tuscaloosh County Teachers' institute begun a week's session.

Opelika.—A Wilson-Marshall club has been formed in Opelika with about 125 charter members.

Mobile.—The immense steel sheds of the city wharves are now nearing completion and will be ready to turn over to the city within a few days.

Talladega.—Work on the cotton compress, obtained through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce, goes on with unabated force, lumber and machinery being already on the ground.

Huntsville.—Thurston's feed store and John Jones' grocery, adjoining on West Holmes street, were burned by a fire that started in the feed store. Both buildings were frame and they made a fire that threatened to spread throughout the block. The total loss did not exceed $2,000.

Montgomery.—Co-operation of hotel men of Alabama for mutual protection against "traveling fakirs and lead-beats" is necessary, thinks E. C. Taylor, manager of the Gay-Teague hotel, and to effect that end he has invited the hotel men of the state to meet in Montgomery August 7 to organize an association.

Eufaula.—The citizens have arranged for another street fair some time during the fall months. An effort is being made to get attractions.

Mobile.—Architect A. H. Downey announced that the Mother Superior of the Order of Little Sisters of the Poor had given him an order to draw plans for an $80,000 structure to be erected on the site of the present building in Monterey street.

Eufaula.—The Methodist denomination has determined to erect a new church edifice to take the place of the one now in use. The new structure will cost $35,000 to $40,000 when completed.

WANTS $10,000,000 DAMAGES

Decatur Man Presents Petition Asking For That Amount For the Death of His Wife.

Decatur.—Fred Reisingler presented a petition to the city of Decatur, asking for $10,000,000 damages for the death of his wife.

Mr. Reisinger claims that the death of his wife was due to a fall which she received on the streets, and claims it was caused by the city allowing clinkers to accumulate on the street. Evidently Mr. Reisinger, who is a foreigner, thinks that there is no limit to the wealth of Decatur.

Brewton.—Ground was broken for the new hotel that is to be erected here. The new building will cost something like $30,000.

Gadsden.—No advance sales of cotton are being made although farmers are being offered 12 1-2 cents for deliveries to be made in November and December.

Florence.—Preparations are being made to hold the district conference of the Woman's Missionary conference of the Florence district in Florence during the second week in August.

Selma.—With all of the necessary requirements complied with and proof establishing the legality of the bond issue, the city of Selma will within the next week or so receive the money for the issue of $35,000 school bonds which was recently authorized by the voters of the city. As soon after the money is secured as possible definite arrangements for the building of the new high school building in the western part of the city will be started.

Evergreen.—I. F. Goodson, as tax commissioner of Conecuh county, has raised the valuation of property in this county to the amount of approximately one and a half million dollars. There is great complaint at the action of Mr. Goodson, and nearly all the people who are affected are earnestly protesting against the raises; but the tax commissioner says he is amply justified in what he has done, and will stand by his raise.

Gadsden.—The Albertville Fair Association has awarded a contract to local contractors for the erection of a grandstand, exhibition hall and stables at the Fair Grounds at Albertville. The building will cost about $3,000 and will be completed by September 1 and will be used by the association for the Fair that will be held in October. A race track was built this summer at a cost of about $3,000.

Jasper.—Enterprise won out after a spirited contest over Selma and Montgomery for the honor of entertaining the next state Baptist convention which has been in session here. The convention also decided to hold the next session in November instead of July, as has been the custom. The Rev. J. L. Thompson will preach the introductory sermon.

Birmingham.—The Christian Fraternal association has filed articles of incorporation in the probate office here. The association has a constitution that indicates co-operative principals and gives the right to build schools, colleges, universities and other things of that nature. It is intended to adopt rituals and to confer degrees like fraternal orders.

Mobile.—The third day's campaign to raise $10,000 to insure the location in Mobile of the $50,000 orphan asylum, which the Episcopal church in Alabama has decided to build, resulted in the collection of cash and promissory notes aggregating $2,953.50. This brings the total amount raised during the three days to $10,787.75.

Selma.—Dr. W. E. Hinds, State Entomologist, inspected a number of farms in Dallas county and examined into the army worm conditions. "I find the conditions deplorable," was a statement made by Dr. Hinds.

Anniston.—Joseph Dawson, a private in Company E, First Florida infantry, was painfully injured in the sham battle when he was shot in the right arm with the wadding from a blank cartridge.

Gadsden.—The condition of crops throughout Etowah County are much better than they were a week or ten days ago. There has been ample sunshine for the past two days and a large amount of work has been done in the fields. Grass and weeds plowed up have died immediately.

Florence.—William Richardson killed himself in East Florence by shooting himself through the head. He lived only an hour after firing the fatal shot.

Gadsden.—A large force of men are working on Lock 4 on the Coosa River. About 100 men have been employed steadily. The lock will be completed next year.

Dothan.—Will Haisten, who has been on trial at Ozark for the murder of Conductor Paul Johnson at Pinkard last fall, has been sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment by a jury here. This shortens his first sentence 10 years, he having been given a 20 year sentence in January.

PLEAD "RIGHT" TO TAX

REPUBLICAN PARTY STILL STRONG FOR PRIVILEGE.

Chairman Hilles, in His First Official Document, Pleads for the Trusts Against the Interests of All the People.

Charles D. Hilles, the newly chosen chairman of the Republican National committee, as his first official act sounds a defiance to the enemy. The Democratic platform begins with recognition of the notorious fact that the Constitution does not authorize the laying of tariff taxes for the protection of manufactures. Says Chairman Hilles:

"It (the Democratic platform) declares as false the vital issue of the constitutional liberties of the individual. * * * It would leave the individual defenseless in the protection of those rights declared inalienable under the Constitution."

It might be just as well for us to get clearly in mind exactly what "right of the individual" Chairman Hilles is defending. It is the right of one man to tax another for his own benefit.

That is what protection means. Under the Payne-Aldrich tariff there is a heavy tax on gloves. Mr. Hilles, like all good Republicans, stands for the "right" of ex-Congressman Littauer of Gloversville, N. Y., to tax the working women of St. Louis by exacting a higher price for inferior gloves than good ones would bring if sold in competition with the open market.

Under the Payne-Aldrich law articles manufactured of rubber are protected by a heavy tax. Chairman Hilles stands for the "right" of the Aldrich rubber interests thus to tax American consumers of rubber for their own profit.

Under the Payne-Aldrich law there is a heavy tariff on steel rails. This enables the Steel trust of Mr. Gary, Mr. Perkins and Mr. Morgan, which makes steel so cheaply as to sell tens of thousands of tons each year in the foreign market in competition with the world, to lay a heavy burden on the purchaser of steel at home—a burden which forms part of every railroad rate and is one factor of the high cost of living in every home. And Mr. Chairman Hilles stands for the "constitutional liberty" of Mr. Morgan and the steel magnates thus to tax the rest of us in order to make more Pittsburgh millionaires and pile up more cash and securities in the vaults of the Steel trust banks!

The Democratic party asks nothing better than the opportunity to join battle with the Republicans on the "right" to tax everybody for the profit of somebody.—St. Louis Republic.

Proper and Improper Tariffs.

Daniel C. Roper, chief clerk of the ways and means committee of the house, statistician and tariff expert, says:

"The Democrats have clearly shown that there are two kinds of tariff; one for revenue, and one for protection; that a revenue tariff is intended to produce the necessary money to support the federal government; that a protective tariff is to tax the people to raise revenue for private pockets. As the tariff wall of prohibitive duties is increased, just so are trade combinations fostered and the people required to pay exorbitant prices. Prohibitive tariffs prevent relief from without the country, while combinations plunder the people within the country. Again, as the revenue for private pockets increases, that for the public treasury diminishes, because of the high and protective wall created against imports."

Can Reduce Cost of Living.

The promise to reduce the cost of living has been held out so often and so fruitlessly by seekers after office during the past few years that the wonder is that we should hear it again. When Governor Foss was elected for the first time two years ago it was on the platform that his election would cheapen commodities to the people of Massachusetts. He is now well in his second term and the cost of living is higher than it was at the date of his first inaugural. A governor of Massachusetts has no real power to reduce prices directly. A president of the United States, standing on a sympathetic national platform, can initiate legislation and general policies tending to wipe out some of the factors of excessive prices, not high prices. His platform has behind it the pledge of legislation to put it in operation.

Verdict Is Against Taft.

He has been tried. The verdict of the big majority of his own party, the unanimous verdict of all other parties is that William Howard Taft is unfaithful, unreliable, unfit.

Duty of the Democracy.

The task now before the Democracy is to revise the tariff in the interest of the people and not of the plundering barons of the steel, wool, cotton and rubber interests, to infuse earnestness into trust prosecutions, and to reform the currency laws. We want to put a Democratic president at one end of Pennsylvania avenue and a Democratic senate at the other, so that when Champ Clark lifts the gavel over the new Democratic house the best chapter in the history of legislation at Washington will begin.

WORTHY OF ALL CONFIDENCE

Democratic Presidential Ticket Will Appeal to the Country as an Ideal Selection.

Governor Wilson is a progressive Democrat, and in theory he must be regarded as decidedly radical in his theories, but he is evidently too prompt and practical in his disposition of the affairs in which the public welfare is involved to disturb unnecessarily the business interests of the country. Business is practically the daily bread of the people. To work is every man's duty, imposed upon him from the foundation of the world, and that he shall be duly and justly paid for his services was a duty laid upon human society by that same divine decree, but at the some time there must be no invasion of constitutional rights and no despoiling of private property. That the governor in his present high official station recognizes these laws and that he will continue to regard them as the chief magistrate of the American republic is to be fully trusted to his sense of justice and accepted by the people with the fullest confidence. A scholar may be a mere dreamer and pragmatic theorist, but Governor Wilson has too much of political and practical initiative and ability to be put in such a category. He is going to be president of the United States as far as human conditions can make him so, and he will be a good one. The Democratic ticket was completed by the nomination to the vice presidency of Governor Thomas Riley Marshall of Indiana. Governor Marshall is also a man of high educational attainments, and is a lawyer of high standing, but, curiously enough, like Governor Wilson, he never held a political office until he was elected governor of his state. The two nominations reverse the notion that in order to attain high official station a man must go through a course of political training from subordinate places to the highest stations. Here are two citizens who were elevated at a single movement to the highest public places in their respective states and they have gained such favor that they are now nominated to the highest places in the nation. That is a striking fact.—New Orleans Picayune.

Riding to a Hard Fall.

President Taft is generally believed to be entirely confident of re-election. Reports to that effect come from many sources. He refuses to be convinced by the arguments of those to whom his cause looks hopeless. He is not even depressed by their warnings and their low estimates of his chances.

The president's most implacable enemies could not ask anything more than that he may continue to be in this state of mind until election day. The confident candidate who is not victorious rides to the hardest falls sustained in politics. He suffers the worst bruises when he goes down.

In this case it is difficult to understand how anyone can figure out a fair chance for the success of the Taft ticket. The conditions are such that it is unlikely to get half as many electoral votes as are needed to choose a president. The proportion may not exceed one-fourth or even one-tenth of the number required.—Cleveland Leader (Rep.).

Come Over to the Democrats.

Senator Cummins practically agrees with Governor Osborn. The former intimates that the Chicago nominee is not the nominee of the Republican party; the latter says bluntly that the party is without a candidate for the presidency. For Republicans who believe the Chicago convention to have been unrepresentative and its actions fraudulent, and who still desire to retain their connection with the party, this seems to be the only correct position. They can eliminate the bosses only by reorganization or by fighting them from within. The end cannot be attained by bolting into another party, as completely and as viciously bossed as is the one of their present association, and which represents nothing but the exaggerated egoism of a defeated candidate. By supporting the Democratic boss-killer Progressive Republicans would most effectually and expeditiously emancipate their own party.

Democracy's Task.

Democracy believes that a way can be found to put an end to monopoly and plunder in the name of Big Business, not in ways strange and new, but by restoring and exalting principles as old as this government, which have been neglected and trampled under foot.

This is a big task. It will require all the conscience and wisdom and energy the Democracy can bring to its performance. We must be patient enough to think, earnest enough to do right whatever it costs us, energetic enough to fight harder for equal opportunity than the men on the other side will for unrighteous gain.

Marshall Strengthens Ticket.

The contrast between Marshall and Sherman speaks for itself. Sherman is universally recognized as a load which Mr. Taft, already overburdened, must carry. Governor Marshall, on the other hand, brings to Governor Wilson the added strength of his own popularity in Indiana, which Mr. Taft carried by only a narrow margin four years ago, which is now represented by two Democratic senators, and which should not be counted in the Democratic column as a result of putting Governor Marshall on the ticket.

ONLY THING IS TO FIND HER

Every Man Has an Affinity Somewhere on the Earth, Is a Law of Nature.

Every man has a best girl waiting

Every man has a best girl waiting for him somewhere in the world. The moment that he is born, the catalogue clerk in Time's great factory assigns him to a best girl or else puts him on the waiting list.

There is no escaping your best girl. No matter where she may be born or how far apart from her you were when you started, the inevitable attraction will work your destiny, and when you meet you will both know it.

All that is lacking is the material realization, and inasmuch as all ideas eventually find their way to the surface, yours is bound to come.

Sometimes a man's best girl is homely; sometimes her mouth is not a cupid's bow, and her features are irregular; that makes no difference; he will love her just the same when he meets her.

Also, she may be another man's wife. Such things have been known.

Here's hoping that it will not happen to you.—Life.

Couldn't Signal.

An old darky with an old gray mule hitched to a ramshackle wagon stood on the incline of Capitol hill, in Washington, during one of the worst sleet storms in January.

The old man huddled in his rabbit skin cap shivering, the mule trembling with the cold. Two congressmen, waiting for a belated car, were attracted by the strange outfit and wondered, as time went on and the darky made no effort to depart, what ailed the old fellow.

One of the congressmen walked over and said: "Why don't you move on, uncle?"

The old darky pointed a trembling finger at his "team", and replied: "'Cause dis yere mule won't go 'less I whistle at him, and it's so cold I cayn't whistle!"—Everybody's.

An Ominous Assurance.

"I think," said the young statesman, "that some of my speeches will be recalled with interest in years to come."

"They will," replied Senator Sorghum, "unless you are exceptionally lucky."

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration; I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine too highly."

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep; if you are in a general run down condition and unable to bear your part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but that is no reason why you should delay treatment.

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merits a trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you.

Sold by all druggists. If first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned.

SPRUNG A SURPRISE

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE CAUGHT Nnapping.

For the first five days of last week the Chilton county Teachers' Institute was in session, the Press having given a full account of the proceedings up to Tuesday afternoon—the only publication giving a detailed statement of the happenings of the Institute.

A part of the "statistics" of the Institute were omitted from last week's account, however, which we produce this week in order that we may comment upon it if we may. The omission was made by our "staff correspondent," Prof. Mack Wyatt, because he felt that the statistics reflected somewhat upon the teachers of the county. It is due to Prof. Wyatt, and his assistant, Prof. Roper, to state that they informed the editor of the omission and why it was omitted, but the information came too late to insert it in the issue of last week.

We produce these statistics this week in order that we "set" our teachers right in the eyes of any who may have secured the information without some kind of an explanation.

During the early part of the Institute, when Prof. Shackelford was conducting, the question:—"How many of the teachers, members of this Institute, are graduates of any college?" But two members of the Institute answered in the affirmative. Prof. Shackelford and the two conductors, of course, gave affirmative answers, but as they are not Chilton county teachers they are not included in the above. The next question was:—"How many are graduates of Normal colleges?" Two more answered in the affirmative.

Then next, "How many have graduated from High schools?" Seven was the answer.

Then next, "How many have completed the eighth grade in High School?" To this question seven gave affirmative answers.

"How many have completed the grades in rural schools?" Forty-seven, was the answer.

This would make forty-one teachers out of an enrollment of forty-four—that was the number at the time the questions were asked, but that number was subsequently increased to one hundred and four—who had gone as high as the seventh grade in rural schools, leaving fifty-one who had gone so high as even the seventh grade.

Under ordinary circumstances this would be a very poor showing, indeed; it would plainly indicate that Chilton county teachers were attempting to teach that which they have not themselves learned, but that, taken as a whole, more than fifty per cent of them are capable.

This, we are glad to say, is not true; our teachers are as competent as are those of the average county; their ability to teach will compare favorably with the ability of teachers elsewhere. We have often heard that it is an essential of good teaching that the teacher be a graduate of a college. So far as history goes the greatest Teacher the world ever knew never attended school at all; many of the world's greatest scholars were those who never entered college halls. The generation now fast passing away are men and women, most of them, whose education was acquired by the light of a pine knot in the lowly hovels which abounded in the South during their childhood days, yet no one will deny the fact that our mothers and fathers were men and women of exceptionally fine sense. Of course it adds much to the value of a teacher to secure a lucrative position or one in some endowed university, to be able to write "A. M.," "D. D.," "Ph. D.," or "L. L. D." after their names, but that, we repeat, is not an essential; the essential consists in the ability to impart knowledge to others and the capacity to acquire more knowledge and impart that.

No man, however learned, or however many "degrees" he may have received, knows it all or has reached the "end of the limit."

We knew a man over sixty years of age, who had several degrees from high grade colleges and who could write all kinds of high sounding titles after his name, who sought more knowledge that he might not only enjoy it himself, but that he might transmit it to others; he contended that a person was never a "finished scholar" till death overtook him—and that even then, polished as he might be, there was much more to be learned.

But this is extraneous, not germane.

The teachers in question feel that they were "caught napping;" that the question was inopportune and that it should not have been propounded.

The question, we think, was timely. It was good to bring the teachers face to face with facts and to show them where they really "stood," for it will doubtless stimulate them to higher and better things; it was unfortunate, however, that the questions were not understood and that many who could have answered in the affirmative failed to do so because they did not see the importance of the answer.

We know of several who are graduates who did not respond to any one of the questions.

But, what we started out to say is that however good college training and high school knowledge may be, neither is absolutely essential to good teaching.

Then there is another word we would like to put in "edgeways," namely:—Our teachers are just as competent as the patrons of our schools permit them to be. It cannot be expected of a teacher that he or she shall spend half of life time in college acquiring knowledge and then return to a country school to "teach the young idea how to shoot" at a salary of thirty or forty dollars per month for a session of three, four or five months When college learning has been obtained the average teacher "aims higher" than the little one room school house in the thicket—and he usually secures "his aim."

If our school patrons would supplement the State funds and increase the salary of the teacher, and at the same time increase the length of the term, teachers would be inspired to attend colleges, normal schools and chautauquas, but with the scant salary paid for their services for a few months in the year it becomes necessary for them to secure employment at other things in order to keep "body and soul together," rather than to pay out their few hard earned dollars attending college.

Again, we repeat, the questions were timely, but unfortunate only in that they did not bring out the imformation sought.

Our teachers are far in advance of those under whom they learned; they are improving with each passing day; they are fully capable to care for the schools over which they preside and as the schools advance our teachers will equip themselves.

All honor to these patient, overworked, underpaid ladies and gentlemen who are devoting their lives to the betterment of the conditions of the youth of our land; thrice honored be they who, in rickety school houses, expend their lives that others may adorn society.

Chilton is willing to "stack up" with the other counties of the State insofar as her teachers are concerned.

That they are not themselves satisfied with conditions was clearly proven when forty of them stated that it was their intention to attend some college or normal school next year in order that they may the better qualify themselves for the arduous, thankless tasks to which they have set themselves.

Can any county in the State make a better showing? Are the teachers elsewhere evincing more ambition to become thorough?

Tear down the one room school houses; grade the schools of the county; build comfortable quarters for the teachers and pupils; decrease the number of schools and increase the number of teachers; put school houses at comfortable distances from the homes of the pupils and give them good roads to travel to and from school; pay the teachers a living salary and aid them in their desires to mould healthy sentiment, build brain as well as brawn and the schools of Chilton county will rank "along side of" those whose opportunities have been far greater than ours.

A DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT

Miss Mayme Foshee contributed another event of a delightful character to the many Midsummer festivities, on last Friday, when she entertained, from five to seven, with a porch and lawn party.

A color motif of pink and green was chosen.

Before entering the gate the guests were served delicious punch from a beautifully appointed table, under an improvised arbor of vines, with large bunches of luscious grapes suspended here and there; clusters of grapes were tastefully placed around the punch bowl. Here Misses Kathleen Mullins and Beverly Hester presided in their dainty white dresses with pink accessories.

Growing plants, with their own blossoms indicating the pink of the party tints, and ferns composed the details of the decorations arranged on the veranda; there Miss Foshee, in white satin with pink trimmings, received her guests, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Johnson, in pink chiffon over pink satin, and Miss Sadie Willis, in blue satin with lace trimmings.

An "Old Sayings" contest was very much enjoyed by the guests. Mrs. Renfroe Mullins, having the most correct answers, was presented with a daintily bound volume of Kipling's 'Leaves." On a cut for visitors' prize, Miss Parker received a pink silk bandeau.

An ice refreshment, showing the tints of the selected color, was served.

Throughout the afternoon an orchestra gave a program of airs of the day, thus heightening the general air of merriment, prevailing during the gathering of the vivacious young people.

Those present were: Misses Sadie Willis, Winnie and Willie Reynolds, Emmette Matthews, Ruby Gore, Myrtle, Maude and Ethel Mullins, Kate Davis, Elna Sartor, Lena Downs, Alma Jones, Velma White, Norma Denty, Emma and Bessie Thomas, Estella and L. E. Morgan, Ruby Downs, Glennie Evans, Ruth Kate Mullins, Sophia Courtney, Bessie VanDerveer, Bernice Parker, of Billingsley, Lena Sawyer, of Mountain Creek, Maude Eiland, of Montgomery, Carrie and Louise Mullins, of Jumbo. DEATH OF MR. A. C. HARPER.

A GOOD CITIZEN GONE TO HIS REWARD.

Last Friday night at his family residence on Seventh street, surrounded by all the members of his immediate family, the spirit of Mr. A. C. Harper took its flight into the great beyond.

For several weeks Mr. Harper had been confined to his bed with kidney trouble, but at first it was thought he would rally and again assume his accustomed place among his friends; as the days went by, however, this hope was dispelled, for instead of improving, he gradually grew worse; two weeks after he was stricken he suffered a paralytic stroke and tho' some faint hope of his recovery was still entertained, it was hope born of despair.

Mr. Harper was one of Clanton's best beloved citizens; to know him was to admire him; to be well acquainted with him was to call him friend; to associate with him was to love him.

He was a man of generous impulses, an upright citizen and a model husband and father.

Not only does his immediate family sustain a great loss in his taking away, but the entire community, in fact the great circle of his friends throughout the State, has lost one whose place it will be difficult to fill.

Mr. Harper is survived by his wife and six children, all of whom except Mr. Douglas Harper of Jacksonville, Texas, reside in this county, namely, Mrs. S. E. Johnson of Verbena, Misses Lurline and Annie May, Messrs. Clark and Courtney Harper of Clanton.

The interment was had at Fayetteville on Saturday last, the body being accompanied to that place by members of the family and by Messrs. W. H. Foshee, W. T. Callen, E. M. Pinckard, Renfroe Mullins, J. C. Jones and Judge E. B. Deason as an honorary escort.

A LETTER FROM MR. F. A. GULLEDGE

Verbena, August 5, 1912

Editor Press:—On Jan. 21st last you remember we had a mass meeting of the taxpayers and those subject to road duty, protesting against working the roads further by taxation. They petitioned the Board of County Commissioners to place them back under the old law of popular warning and working the roads, practically pledging themselves to put the roads in good condition if their request was granted. The Board acceded to their demand. I now ask each and every one who favored going back to the old system if he or they are going to fulfill that pledge? As apportioners will you do your whole duty? As overseers will you do yours? As hands and citizens will you do yours? Again, if not done, will the overseers go to the courts and reports those who do not? Then if they do, will each juror before whom a derelict is brought, do his whole duty in upholding the law against violators? The law says the overseer must assemble his men each with a good tool at 8 o'clock a.m. (Time 8 a.m. to 12 m. and 1 to 5 p.m.) and that all able bodied men are subject. That brings up another question. I know men who claim exemptions who do all manner of heavy work. Because of an apparent disability he avoids road duty, and yet hire this same man and his price would indicate a giant.

Another question: Will the County Board require real knowledge of the disability of each applicant before they give him a certificate and not let the little fee influence them?

We all, and each of us, have one common interest in our public roads and even the man who walks the road should have an interest in them.

Now, the Governor of our State has called by proclamation on all citizens to come together on 14th, 15th and 16th days of this month and work the public roads of our respective communities. I feel that our Judge of Probate should issue his proclamation too, calling on all citizens of good old Chilton to come forward and do their duty, and I will say to his Honor, come on out, Judge, or send a good team or a couple of good hands and help get word to your friends and others who spin the automobiles to "meet at the hatters" with a big army and let us fix the roads good enough and wide enough that we clod hoppers will not be forced to take the woods when they say "toot toot" to us.

Yours for good roads,

F. A. Gulledge.

STUNG BY GRAVY!

THE BOYS PUT IT OVER IN GOOD SHAPE; THE LAUGH IS ON THE GREAT BIG BEAUTIFUL DOLLS

If you see Bill Mullins licking his chops or Barney Roberts with a smile on his face as broad as a horse blanket, or Joe VanDerveer looking saucy out of those dreamy brown eyes, or Buck Hart acting as if his best girl had just said a low cooing "yes" to his oft repeated pleading, or Guy Roberts doing the "can-can" in a highly approved fashion, you need not become alarmed; they're alright and their merry pranks are just what they have "coming to them." They turned the trick good and proper and a great big juicy grin is coming to them in car-load lots.

If ever a bevy of youths knocked a persimmon off the Christmas tree just as it was ripe for the slant eyed 'possum, these boys cut the caper.

The telling of it makes good reading, and the thought should inspire action in others.

Listen, its a good one.

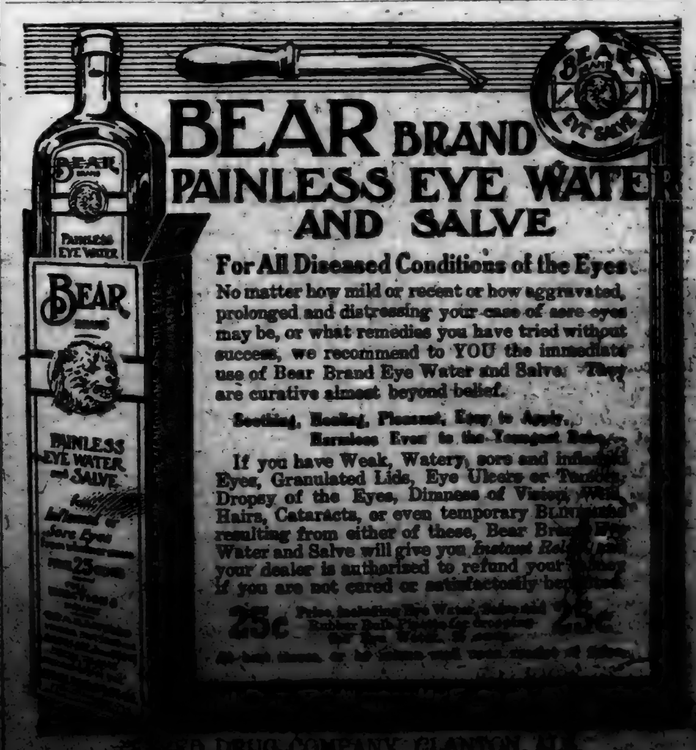
For some weeks these young men have been accustomed to engage the services of the local string band and in the wee sma' hours of the night hie themselves to the homes of their best beloved where sweet, soulful music would be despensed. These trips were made weekly, or even more frequently, for the young men, in addition to being ardent admirers, are great lovers of music and knew that their young lady friends were fond of that which hath power to soothe the breast of even the savage beast. Well, the boys went frequently, as we have said, but never, no never did they discover any "eats" laying about loose as a reward for their thoughtfulness and devotion.

In that coy manner known only to this particular set of young men, they let it be known to their young lady friends that they were disappointed—that even a musician is entitled to refreshments occasionally.

The young ladies took the "hint" and suggested that if they knew when to expect the serenaders refreshments would be served in abundance. The plot worked well; the young men stated that on the following Friday night they would make their usual rounds and would be delighted to find many delicies conveniently placed within easy reach.

They went; the young ladies were expecting them; refreshments were procured, and, reposing upon handsomely painted chinaware. were placed within easy reach of the "marauders"

The only instrument of music carried along by these plotters—not counting their sonorous voices, was an old fiddle that had done service when Heck was a pup; whnpple jawed, jay-bird heeled, crack brained and dusty. The boys would slip up quietly upon the gallery and Joe VanDerveer would begin to "tune" his fiddle while the other boys groped about looking for "delicacies." Joe would strum along for some minutes till the boys had located and pounced upon the refreshments; then he'd strum along again on another string till they had gotten all the good things well in hand and—and then yes, and then they'd sneak out with the refreshments and "narry a tune" did they play.



In their rounds they gathered in pound cake, sponge cake, marble cake, layer cake, cocoanut cake, walnut cake, plain cake, mixed cake, iced cake, pie, custard, sandwiches—the ham kind, the chicken kind and other kinds—salads, pickles, olives, confections and various and sundry other good things to eat—they got the "eats," enough to last till next Friday night.

The young ladies were stung, STUNG badly!

The young men, when they pass the young ladies, put up a triumphant smile but they keep their eyes lowered.

Yes, they got the "eats" alright, and the young ladies will doubtless remember Friday night, August second, as a night on which they were NOT serenaded though they expected to be.

Miss Celia McMillan, a very charming young lady of Columbiana, is in Clanton, the guest of Mrs. J. Q. Wade.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Maitland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping. Fate brings all the actors together.

CHAPTER XX.

The Converging Trails.

Whatever the feeling of the others, Armstrong found himself unable to sleep that night. It seemed to him that fate was about to play him the meanest and most fantastic of tricks. Many times before in his crowded life he had loved other women, or so he characterized his feelings, but his passion for Louise Rosser Newbold had been in a class by itself until he had met Enid Maitland. Between the two there had been many women, but these two were the high points, the rest was lowland.

Once before, therefore, this Newbold had cut in ahead of him and had won the woman he loved. Armstrong had cherished a hard grudge against him for a long time. He had not been of those who had formed the rescue party led by old Kirkby and Maitland which had buried the poor woman on the great butte in the deep canon. Before he got back to the camp the whole affair was over and Newbold had departed. Luckily for him, Armstrong had always thought, for he had been so mad with grief and rage and jealousy that if he had come across him, helpless or not, he would have killed him out of hand.

Armstrong had soon enough forgotten Louise Rosser, but he had not forgotten Newbold. All his ancient animosity had flamed into instant life again, at the sight of his name last night. The inveteracy of his hatred had been in no way abated by the lapse of time, it seemed.

Everybody in the mining-camp had supposed that Newbold had wandered off and perished in the mountains, else Armstrong might have pursued him and hunted him down. The sight of his name on that piece of paper was outward and visible evidence that he still lived. It had almost the shock of a resurrection, and a resurrection to hatred rather than to love. If Newbold had been alone in the world, if Armstrong had chanced upon him in the solitude, he would have hated him just as he did, but when he thought that his ancient enemy was with the woman he now loved, with a growing intensity beside which his former resentment seemed weak and feeble he hated him yet the more.

He could not tell when the notice, which he had examined carefully, was written; there was no date upon it, but he could come to only one conclusion. Newbold must have found Enid Maitland alone in the mountains very shortly after her departure, and he had her with him in his cabin alone for, at least a month. Armstrong gritted his teeth at the thought. He did not undervalue the personality of Newbold. He had never happened to see him, but he had heard enough about him to understand his qualities as a man. The tie that bound Armstrong to Enid Maitland was a strong one, but the tie by which he held her to him, if indeed he held her at all, was very tenuous and easily broken; perhaps it was broken already, and so he hated him still more and more.

Indeed, his animosity was so great and brooding that for the moment he took no joy in the assurance of the girl's safety; but he was not altogether an unfair man, and in calmer moments he thanked God in his own rough way that the woman he loved was alive and well, or had been when the note was written. He rejoiced that she had not been swept away with the flood or that she had not been lost in the mountains and forced to wander on finally to starve and freeze and die. In one moment her nearness caused his heart to throb with joyful anticipation. The certainty that at the first flush of day he should seek her again sent the warm blood to his cheeks. But those thoughts would be succeeded by the knowledge that she was with his enemy. Was this man to rob him of the latest love as he had robbed him of the first? Perhaps the hardest task that was ever laid upon Armstrong was to lie quietly in his sleeping bag and wait until the morning.

So soon as the first indication of dawn showed over the crack of the door, he slipped quietly out of his sleeping bag and without disturbing the others drew on his boots, put on his heavy fur coat and cap and gloves, slung his Winchester and his snow shoes over his shoulder, and without stopping for a bite to eat, softly opened the door, stepped out and closed it after him. It was quite dark in the bottom of the canon, although a few pale gleams overhead indicated the near approach of day. It was quite still, too. There were clouds on the mountain top heavy with threat of wind and snow.

The way was not difficult, the direction of it, that is. Nor was the going very difficult at first; the snow was frozen and the crust was strong enough to bear him. He did not need his snow shoes, and, indeed, would have had little chance to use them in the narrow, broken, rocky pass. He had slipped away from the others because he wanted to be first to see the man and the woman. He did not want any witnesses to that meeting. They would have come on later, of course; but he wanted an hour or two in private with Enid and Newbold without any interruption. His conscience was not clear. Nor could he settle upon a course of action.

How much Newbold knew of his former attempt to win away his wife, how much of what he knew he had told Enid Maitland, Armstrong could not surmise. Putting himself into Newbold's place and imagining that the engineer had possessed entire information, he decided that he must have told everything to Enid Maitland as soon as he had found out the quasi relation between her and Armstrong. And Armstrong did not believe the woman he loved could be in anybody's presence a month without telling something about him. Still, it was possible that Newbold knew nothing, and that he told nothing therefore.

The situation was paralyzing to a man of Armstrong's decided, determined temperament. He could not decide upon the line of conduct he should pursue. His course in this, the most critical emergency he had ever faced, must be determined by circumstances of which he felt with savage resentment he was in some measure the sport. He would have to leave to chance what ought to be subject to his will. Of only one thing he was sure—he would stop at nothing, murder, lying; nothing, to win the woman, and to settle his score with that man.

There was really only one thing he could do, and that was to press on up the canon. He had no idea how far it might be or how long a journey he would have to make before he reached that shelf on the high hill where stood that hut in which she dwelt. As the crow flies, it could not be a great distance, but the canon zigzagged through the mountains with as many curves and angles as a lightning flash. He plodded on, therefore, with furious haste, recklessly speeding over places where a misstep in the snow or a slip on the icy rocks would have meant death or disaster to him.

He had gone about an hour, and had perhaps made four miles from the camp when the storm burst upon him. It was now broad day, but the sky was filled with clouds and the air with driving snow. The wind whistled down the canon with terrific force. It was with difficulty that he made any headway at all against it. It was a local storm; if he could have looked through the snow he would have discovered calmness on the top of the peaks. It was one of those sudden squalls of wind and snow which rage with terrific force while they last, but whose rage was limited, and whose violent duration would be short.

A less determined man than he would have bowed to the inevitable and sought some shelter behind a rock until the fury of the tempest was spent, but there was no stern that blew that could stop this man so long as he had strength to drive against it. So he bent his head to the fierce blast and struggled on. There was something titanic and magnificent about this iron determination and persistence of Armstrong. The two most powerful passions which move humanity were at his service; love led him and hate drove him. And the two were so intermingled that it was difficult to say which predominated, now one and now the other. The resultant of the two forces, however, was an onward move that would not be denied.

His fur coat was soon covered with snow and ice, the sharp needles of the storm cut his face wherever it was exposed. The wind forced its way through his garments and chilled him to the bone. He had eaten nothing since the night before, and his vitality was not at its flood, but he pressed on, and there was something grand in his indomitable progress. Excelsior!

Back in the hut Kirkby and Maitland sat around the fire waiting most impatiently for the wind to blow itself out and for that snow to stop falling through which Armstrong struggled forward. As he followed the windings of the canon, not daring to ascend to the summit on either wall and seek short cuts across the range, he was sensible that he was constantly rising. There were many indications to his experienced mind; the decrease in the height of the surrounding pines, the increasing rarity of the icy air, the growing difficulty in breathing under the sustained exertion he was making, the quick throbbing of his accelerated heart, all told him he was approaching his journey's end.

He judged that he must now be drawing near the source of the stream, and that he would presently come upon the shelter. He had no means of ascertaining the time. He would not have dared to unbutton his coat to glance at his watch, and it is difficult to measure the flying minutes in such scenes as those through which he passed, but he thought he must have gone at least seven miles in perhaps three hours, which he fancied had elapsed, his progress in the last two having been frightfully slow. Every foot of advance he had had to fight for.

Suddenly a quick turn in the canon, a passage through a narrow entrance between lofty cliffs, and he found himself in a pocket or a circular amphitheater which he could see was closed on the farther side. The bottom of this enclosure or valley was covered with pines, now drooping under tremendous burdens of snow. In the midst of the pines a lakelet was frozen solid; the ice was covered with the same dazzling carpet of white.

He could have seen nothing of this had not the sudden storm now stopped as precipitately almost as it had begun. Indeed, accustomed to the grayness of the snow fall, the eyes were fairly dazzled by the bright light of the sun, now quite high over the range, which struck him full in the face.

He stopped, panting, exhausted, and leaned against the rocky wall of the canon's mouth which here rose sheer over his head. This certainly was the end of the trail, the lake was the source of the frozen rivulet along whose rocky and torn banks he had tramped since dawn. Here, if anywhere, he would find the object of his quest.

Refreshed by a brief pause, and encouraged by the sudden stilling of the storm, he stepped out of the canon and ascended a little knoll whence he had a full view of the pocket over the tops of the pines. Shading his eyes from the light with his hand as best he could, he slowly swept the circumference with his eager glance, seeing nothing until his eye fell upon a huge broken trail of rocks projecting from the snow, indicating the ascent to a broad shelf of the mountains across the lake to the right. Following this he saw a huge block of snow which suggested dimly the outlines of a hut!

Was that the place? Was she there? He stared fascinated and as he did so a thin curl of smoke rose above the snow heap and wavered up in the cold, quiet air! That was a human habitation, then. It could be none other than the hut referred to in the note. Enid Maitland must be there; and Newbold!

The lake lay directly in front of him beyond the trees at the foot of the knoll, and between him and the slope that led up to the hut. If it had been summer, he would have been compelled to follow the water's edge to the right or to the left; both journeys would have led over difficult trails, with little to choose between them, but the lake was now frozen hard and covered with snow. He had no doubt that the snow would bear him, but to make sure he drew his snow shoes from his shoulder, slipped his feet in the straps, and sped straight on through the trees and across it like an arrow from a bow.

In five minutes he was at the foot of the giant stairs. Kicking off his snow shoes, he scrambled up the broken way, easily finding in the snow a trail which had evidently been passed and repassed daily. In a few moments he was at the top of the shelf. A hard trampled path ran between high walls of snow to a door!

Behind that door what would he find? Just what he brought to it, love and hate, he fancied. We usually find on the other side of doors no more and no less than we bring to our own sides. But whatever was there there was no hesitation in Armstrong's mood. He ran upstairs, laid his hand on the latch, and opened it.

What creatures of habit we are! Early in that same morning, after one vain attempt again to influence the woman who was now the deciding and determining factor, and who seemed to be taking the man's place, Newbold, ready for his journey, had torn himself away from her presence and had plunged down the giant stair. He had done everything that mortal man could do for her comfort; wood enough to last her for two weeks had been taken from the cave and piled in the kitchen and everywhere so as to be easily accessible to her; the stores she already had the run of, and he had fitted a stout bar to the outer door which would render it impregnable to any attack that might be made against it, although he saw no quarter from which any assault impended.

Enid had recovered not only her strength, but a good deal of her nerve. That she loved this man and that he loved her had given her courage. She would be fearfully lonely, of course, but not so much afraid as before. The month of immunity in the mountains without any interruptions had dissipated any possible apprehensions on her part. It was with a sinking heart, however, that she saw him go at last.

They had been so much together in that month; they had learned what love was. When he came back it would be different, he would not come alone. The first human being he met would bring the world to the door of the lonely but beloved cabin in the mountains—the world with its questions, its inference, its suspicions, its denunciations and its accusations! Some kind of an explanation would have to be made, some sort an answer would have to be given, some solution of the problem would have to be arrived at. What these would be she could not tell.

Newbold's departure was like the end of an era to her. The curtain dropped; when it rose again what was to be expected? There was no comfort except in the thought that she loved him. So long as their affections matched and ran together nothing else mattered. With the solution of it all next to her sadly beating heart she was still supremely confident that love, or God—and there was not so much difference between them as to make it worth while to mention the one rather than the other—would find the way.

Their leave taking had been singularly cold and abrupt. She had realized the danger he was apt to incur and she had exacted a reluctant promise from him that he would be careful.

"Don't throw your life away, don't risk it even, remember that it is mine," she had urged.

And just as simply as she had enjoined it upon him he had promised. He had given his word that he would not send help back to her but that he would bring it back, and she had confidence in that word. A confidence that had he been inclined to break his promise would have made it absolutely impossible. There had been a long clasp of the hands, a long look in the eyes, a long breath in the breast, a long throb in the heart and then—farewell. They dared no more.

Once before he had left her and she had stood upon the plateau and followed his vanishing figure with anxious troubled thought until it had been lost in the depths of the forest below. She had controlled herself in this second parting for his sake as well as her own. Under the ashes of his grim repression she realized the presence of live coals which a breath would have fanned into flame. She dared nothing while he was there, but when he shut the door behind him the necessity for self-control was removed. She had laid her arms on the table and bowed her head upon them and shook and quivered with emotions unrelieved by a single tear—weeping was for lighter hearts and less severe demands!

His position after all was the easier of the two. As of old it was the man who went forth to the battlefield while the woman could only wait passively the issue of the fight. Although he was half blinded with emotions he had to give some thought to his progress, and there was yet one task to be done before he could set forth upon his journey toward civilization and rescue.

It was fortunate, as it turned out, that this obligation detained him. He was that type of a merciful man whose mercies extended to his beasts. The poor little burros must be attended to and their safety assured so far as it could be, for it would be impossible for Enid Maitland to care for them. Indeed he had already exacted a promise from her that she would not leave the plateau and risk her life on the icy stairs with which she was so unfamiliar.

He had gone to the corral and shaken down food enough for them which if it had been doled out to them day by day would have lasted longer than the week he intended to be absent; of course he realized that they would eat it up in half that time, but even so they would probably suffer not too great discomfort before he got back.

All these preparations took some little time. It had grown somewhat late in the morning before he started. There had been a fierce storm raging when he first looked out and at her earnest solicitation he had delayed his departure until it had subsided.

His tasks at the corral were at last completed; he had done what he could for them both, nothing now remained but to make the quickest and safest way to the settlement. Shouldering the pack containing his axe and gun and sleeping bag and such provision as would serve to tide him over until he reached human habitations, he set forth. He did not look up to the hut, indeed he could not have seen it for the corral was almost directly beneath it, but if it had been in full view he would not have looked back, he could not trust himself to, every instinct, every impulse in his soul would fain drag him back to that hut and to the woman. It was only his will and, did he but know it, her will that made him carry out his purpose.

He would have saved perhaps half a mile on his journey if he had gone straight across the lake to the mouth of the canon. We are creatures of habit. He had always gone around the lake on the familiar trail and unconsciously he followed that trail that morning. He was thinking of her as he plodded on in a mechanical way while the trail followed the border of the lake for a time, plunged into the woods, wound among the pines, at least reaching that narrow rift in the encircling wall through which the river flowed. He had passed along the trail oblivious to all his surroundings, but as he came to the entrance he could not fail to notice what he suddenly saw in the snow.

Robinson Crusoe when he discovered the famous footprint of Man Friday in the sand was not more astonished at what met his vision than Newbold on that winter morning. For there, in the virgin whiteness, were the tracks of a man!

He stopped dead with a sudden contraction of the heart. Humanity other than he and she in that wilderness! It could not be! For a moment he doubted the evidence of his own senses. He shook his pack loose from his shoulders and bent down to examine the tracks to read if he could their indications. He could see that some one had come up the canon, that someone had leaned against the wall, that some one had gone on. Where had he gone?

To follow the new trail was child's play for him. He ran by the side of it until he reached the knoll. The stranger had stopped again, he had shifted from one foot to another, evidently he had been looking about him seeking some one, only Enid Maitland of course. The trail ran forward to the edge of the frozen lake, there the man had put on his snow shoes, there he had sped across the lake like an arrow, and like an arrow himself although he had left behind his own snow shoes, Newbold ran upon his track. Fortunately the snow crust upbore him. The trail ran straight to the foot of the rocky stairs. The newcomer had easily found his way there.

With beating heart and throbbing pulse, Newbold himself bounded up the acclivity after the stranger, marking as he did so evidences of the other's prior ascent. Reaching the top like him he ran down the narrow path and in his turn laid his hand upon the door.

He was not mistaken, he heard voices within. He listened a second and then flung it open, and as the other had done, he entered.

Way back on the trail, old Kirkby and Robert Maitland, the storm having ceased, were rapidly climbing up the canon. Fate was bringing all the actors of the little drama within the shadow of her hand.

Just a Man!

In the long line of cabs and automobiles in front of a big New York hotel was one car around which a few idlers had gathered. Something was wrong. Prone upon the ground lay an animal of some kind. A dear old lady happened along. She saw the little knot of people and put up her glasses to observe the cause. Then she saw the brown fur of the thing on the icy asphalt.

"Poor creature, poor creature!" said she aloud in her compassion. "Is his leg broken?" She pushed close to the prostrate figure in the brown fur. It moved. The dear old lady took a closer look. Then she made a sound approximating a ladylike snort. It was the chauffeur of one of the taxicabs, clad in his brown furry coat in the usual attitude of flatness, tinkering the under part of his machine with a monkey wrench.

Red Cross Seals Being Printed.

Seventy-five million Red Cross seals are now being printed for the holiday sale of the anti-tuberculosis stickers for 1912. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which in co-operation with the American Red Cross will conduct the sale, makes this announcement and states further that the outlook this year is bright for a higher sale than ever before.

The seal this year is said to be the best of its kind that the Red Cross has ever issued. The design is in three colors, red, green and gray. A Santa Claus head in the three colors is shown in the center surrounded by holly wreaths. In each corner is a small red cross. The seal bears the greeting: "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, American Red Cross, 1912."

SOCIETY BURGLAR MADE RICH HAUL

$250,000 WORTH OF STOLEN PROPERTY RECOVERED BY POLICE.

IS BELIEVED TO BE CRAZY

Wonderful Collection of Precious Stones, Art Treasures, Bric-a Brac, Etc.

Chicago.—After 24 hours work the police took an inventory of the art treasures, bric-a-brac, jewelry, silver plate and other articles stolen by Jacob F. Guthrie, alleged society burglar and forger, now under arrest, and announced that the goods recovered are estimated to be worth $250,000.

After a partial examination of the barn and the room in a storage warehouse in which Guthrie used to hide a portion of the articles stolen, the police estimated the value at $150,000. This was nearly doubled when half a dozen additional trunks and chests filled with jewelry, laces and bric-a-brac were dug up. Much of the stolen property was found in Guthrie's home, where he lived with his mother, sister and brother, who is a Chicago policeman.

Further investigation of the young man's history revealed that after graduating in a course in electrical engineering at a Chicago technical institute he obtained employment with an electric company. Later he was employed in the municipal laboratory. Subsequently he was appointed an instructor in electrical engineering at one of the public high schools.

Guthrie is 26 years old, 6 feet in height and weighs 200 pounds. He is poorly dressed, although when arrested had more than $16,000 deposited to his credit in Chicago banks.

Dr. Leslie W. Schwab, who has been the family doctor for years, talked with him for an hour and later conferred with the head of the city detective bureau.

Dr. Schwab said:

"Guthrie is an educated fool in my opinion. I have known him since childhood. He has always been a bookworm. He read detective and problem novels constantly. The effect of this has been to create a mental condition. He has all the characteristics of a confirmed menace."

Chief of Detective Halpmen said:

"Beyond a doubt Guthrie has obtained the most various descriptions of stolen articles I have ever seen, silverware, bric-a-brac and art treasures. There are diamonds, rubies, sapphires, emeralds, and pearls worth thousands of dollars each.

"All his burglaries were committed in the homes of the city's wealthy people. He read the society column in the newspapers and when he noticed that some wealthy woman had left home for a few days he would break into the house and steal the most valuable articles he could find.

"He apparently kept all the things he stole which appealed to his artistic taste. But he must have disposed of a large quantity of the plunder."

ADJOURNMENT IN SIGHT.

It Is Confidently Expected That Congress Will Finish By August 15 or 17.

Washington.—Adjournment of congress by August 15 or 17 is confidently expected.

The postponement of the Archbald impeachment trial until December 3 has cleared the decks of the Senate so action on the remaining legislative matters can be pushed to a speedy finish.

Uncertainty exists as to the fate of some of the appropriation bills still at issue between the Senate and House. The determination to abolish the commerce court and to place a seven-year tenure of office in the civil service law has aroused antagonism which may be reflected from the White House in a veto of the bill appropriating money for the salaries of federal employes.

This contingency has been anticipated by the leaders of both houses and an effort is to be made to complete the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill so it may be sent at once to the President. In case of an executive veto it is believed it can again be considered, passed and resubmitted to him in amended form without seriously delaying plans for adjournment.

WHY COWS STOOD IN WATER

Artistic Limitations Responsible for Characteristic Attitude of the Humble Bovine.

In a north of England town there was a shiftless man who would never accept gifts outright, although he was always depending on charity, says Al-Priddy in his book, "Through the Mill," relates the Youth's Companion.

He painted landscapes, and my aunt, when benevolently inclined, would hire him to decorate our walls with rural scenes, highly colored in glaring tints, as if nature had turned color blind. There were cows in every scene, and Aunt Millie noticed that all the cows were up to their knees in water. Not one stood on the vivid green hills.

"Jorvey," she remarked to the old man, "why do you always put the cows in the water?"

"It's this way, Mrs. Brindin," the old artist responded. "You see, ma'am, I never learned to paint hoofs."

SCURF ON BABY'S HEAD

Campbell, Va.—"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for scurf on my baby's head and they made a complete cure. It came on her head soon after birth. It broke out in pimples and itched and she would scratch it and cause sores to form. Her head was very sore and her hair fell out in bunches. She was very cross and fretful and could not sleep at night. I tried many remedies, all failed, then I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they commenced to heal at once. I put the Cuticura Ointment on, and a half hour after washed her head with the Cuticura Soap. I used them a month and she was cured entirely." (Signed) Mrs. W. B. McMullen, Mar. 8, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

He Was Willing to Work.

The Democratic members of the house of representatives have been besieged ever by a horde of office seekers, willing to serve their country.

"It is refreshing," said one representative in discussing the office question, "to hear of an aspirant for public office who frankly admits his ambition, yet disdains to seek a position in which he will have nothing to do but to draw a salary.

"Two wayside pilgrims were talking over things when one of them asked:

"'Dick, you ain't a-hankerin' after no government place, are ye?"

"'I don't mind sayin' I'd take one of 'em ef I could git it,' responded the other, 'but I don't want no job that's all fat. I'm willin' to earn my wages.'

"'An' what sort o' job would be about your size?'

"Well, I'd like to fill fountain pens for some assistant secretary of the treasury.'"—Judge.

Mike Amazed.

Jerry was treating Mike to a trolley ride, says Judge. The conductor, a good-looking young Irishman, came through, collecting the fares. Mike watched his progress with great interest. Presently he turned to Jerry with tears in his eyes.

"Jerry," he said huskily, "I've a lump in me t'roat."

"What for?" demanded Jerry.

"'Tis the gladness of me that's too big to swally!" said Mike. "Every American has the big, generous heart! D'ye mind the poor young felly wi' the blue cap? 'Tis beggin' his livin' he is. I saw him hould out his hand to twenty-siven people and ivery blessed wan of thim gave him a nickel!"

Making Himself at Home.

Doris was radiant over a recent addition to the family, and rushed out of the house to tell the news to a passing neighbor.

"Oh, you don't know what we've got upstairs!"

"What is it?"

"It's a new baby brother!"—and she settled back upon her heels and folded her hands to watch the effect.

"You don't say so! Is he going to stay?"

"I guess so"—very thoughtfully. "He's got his things off."

HAD THE BANDMASTER GOING

Governor Suffered Because His Request Was Not Couched in Plain Enough Language.

Mr. Melvil Dewey, state librarian of New York, said recently that libraries would do well to furnish free music rolls for player-pianos, just as they now furnish books.

"In Toledo," said Dr. Dewey the other day, "my project has been lately inaugurated. It will accomplish much for the musical art."

Then, apropos of music and ignorance, Dr. Dewey told a story.

"A certain governor," he said, "was being lunched at a seaside town. During the repast the local band played on the beach outside the hotel. The drum was in charge of a blacksmith, and he beat it so resonantly that at last this message was sent out:

"'The governor requests the drummer to desist.'

"The bandmaster was puzzled by this message for a moment; then his face brightened in a smile, and he said:

"'More drum, Joe; the governor likes it.'"

Telling the Truth.

On little Arthur's birthday, he received a present of a very large furry toy monkey.

Two days later his father found it lying in a corner with both eyes missing.

"My boy," asked father, more in sorrow than in anger, "why have you spoiled that beautiful monkey by pulling its eyes out?"

"Didn't," replied Arthur briefly.

"Don't tell any untruths," snorted father, more in anger than in sorrow, "or I'll punish you! Why did you pull the monkey's eyes out?"

"Didn't!" repeated little Arthur defiantly. Then he hurried on, as father took off his slipper. "I—I pushed them in!"

Works in the Garden Now.

Grown old in the service of his master and mistress, James was a privileged retainer.

He was waiting at table one day, when a guest politely asked for a fish fork. Strangely enough, the request was ignored.

Then the hostess noticed the episode and remarked in a most peremptory manner:

"James, Mrs. Jones hasn't a fish fork. Get her one at once!"

"Madam," came the emphatic reply, "last time Mrs. Jones dined here we lost a fish fork."

James has now been relegated to the garden.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Will the Mayor and Council meet and call that election? They have but six or eight more days in which to do the work. The people are expecting at least this much from its town officials.

Look over Judge Deason's proclamation, supplementing that of Governor O'Neal and act accordingly. If you don't agree to the terms of the proclamation and assist in putting them into execution then quit fussing about the condition of the roads.

Most of the state papers have nailed to their mast heads the names of the presidental candidate they expect to support. Why has not the Union done likewise? Isn't it going to support either Taft or Roosevelt?

In case the local republican ticket attempts to secure passage under the Roosevelt emblem—which now seems certain—are the Taft managers in the state going to submit to it? That's the question. Will the local Taft folowlers be led into such a scheme?

There seems to be no sort of doubt now that the republicans of the county are going over to Roosevelt, he being locally much stronger than Taft. This, of course, is a scheme to try to save the county ticked at the expense of party organization.

The question is:- What will the "regulars"—the Taft followers do about it? Are they going to sit supinely by and see their party wrecked in any such fashion?

The almost certain action of the republicans here in seeking to ensconce their ticket under the Roosevelt emblem is nothing short of desertion of the national party in a vain attempt to secure local victory because of the fancied popularity of a presidential candidate.

We are of the opinion that when the attempt is made the staunch republicans of the county and state will frown upon such action.

Surely the national leaders in the state will not give countenance to it.

The Bull Moose of Meese has announced that he is not longer a republican; so has Beveridge, Johnson, Thompson, Dixon and Hundley. Now the question is:- If these are not republicans and the county ticket nominated by the republicans go under the Roosevelt emblem—who is not a republican, what are they to call themselves, republicans or Meese?

What right has a mass meeting to determine under what emblem a list of candidates nominated by a regularly organized party shall go?

With the Union would tell us something about its candidate for president; surely it is going to support somebody!

To say that the New York Herald does not pin the name of any candidate at its mast head is no reply. The Herald is, and has ever been, strictly independent. Besides that, it takes a stand for a candidate and works for him assiduously. Being an independent paper it has the right to wait till all candidates are nominated and then make its choice, but the Union being republican is expected to give its unqualified support to its candidate.

Way not come out in the open and be somebody? Come on in buddy, it ain't deep!

A call for the republican county convention to assemble on August 14th has been issued out. We presume this is to ratify the act of some Teddy and have it on that day as the representative convention.

Look at This and Decide.

Counting Grover Cleveland twice (he having been elected two terms not successively) we have had twenty three presidents.

Of the twenty three sixteen have been gentlemen with but one given name, seven have been gentlemen with a double name. In no instance where a candidate with a double name was elected was he opposed by a candidate with a single given name. It looks very much to us as if it is to be WOODROW WILSON this time, and if not WOODROW WILSON then Teddy Roosevelt stands the next best showing—judging of course, of names.

Lets see:- There was Geo. Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, Andrew Jackson, Martin VanBuren, Zachary Taylor, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan, Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, Grover Cleveland (again), William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, as against Jno. Q. Adams, W. H. Harrison, Jas. K. Polk, U. S. Grant, R. B. Hayes, Jas A. Garfield, W. H. Taft.

We fail to see how William H. Taft can get any comfort out of the contemplation of these names.

To be sure Roosevelt will be a factor in the national election, so will Debs, but a factor that does not count much; Taft and Wilson being the principal factors in the great struggle for office.

This being the case if Taft wishes to be considered in the running he had better drop the "Howard" part of his name and run simply as "Willie" Taft, provided he has any superstitions, for history is surely against a double name when it comes to running for president of these United Ststes,

Again we repeat, no man with a single given name has been defeated for the office by a candidate with a double given name; a number with double given names have been unmercifully defeated by those of a single given name. Will history repeat itself? It has done so twenty-two times out of twenty-two times "up"—a pretty clean record for history.

WOODROW WILSON is a history maker; he will repeat the performance we have no doubt.

It may be interesting to note, in this connection, that the only president of the Confederacy was a gentleman of but one given name.

Now let those who are skillful in manipulating names, dates and figures get busy; we are merely furnishing the material with which to work.

Notice to Road Workers

Whereas his Excellency, Emmet O'Neal, Governor of Alabama, has heretore issued his proclamation calling upon all good citizens to assemble at convenient places in their respective neighborhoods on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, (August 14th, 15th and 16th) with proper and necessary tools and implements for the purpose of working the public roads, and

Whereas I, as Probate Judge of Chilton county, heartily commend and endorse the said proclamation, and

Whereas, it is the earnest desire of all good citizens that Chilton county join in the discharge of the requirements of this proclamation made by our Governor to the end that our public roads may be put on a parity with the roads of other counties of the State,

Now, therefore, I, E. B. Deason, as the Judge of Probate of Chilton county, do hereby issue my proclamation to the effect that all good citizens of this county assemble themselves at convenient places on the above named dates for the purpose of putting our public roads in such condition as will commend them to the traveling public.

It is earnestly desired that ALL citizens join in this movement; where it is impossible or impracticable for individuals themselves to attend these gatherings let them send substitutes, teams, tools or such other aids as will be acceptble to those having the working of the roads in charge.

Let the present road overseers, where possible, assume the leadership and direct the working of the roads; where this cannot be done let those assembled select a foreman and work diligently under his direction; let us lay aside differences of opinion and work enthusiastically for the common good.

Given under my hand at office this 5th day of August, 1912.

E. B. DEASON,
Judge of Probate.

In Memoriam

The subject of this sketch, C. C. Deadwilder, was born October 13, 1842 and departed this life May 28th 1912.

In his death the county lost a good citizen, the community a good neighbor and the family a devoted husband and father.

He was a man whose moral character was above reproach and whose voice was heard lifted on the moral side of all questions.

For forty two years he was a devoted member of Mulberry Baptist church, and lived his religion as well as professing it.

For a number of months before his death he was confined to his room; most of the time his Bible being his constant companion.

No ill word concerning his fellow man ever escaped his lips; he was one who could truthfully have said "Write me as one who loves his fellow man".

After a lingering illness he peacefully passed away having this testimony: "The angels are round me ready to bear my spirit to mansions above."

May we all live so that when the invitable summons comes, we, like him, may be able to say: "Come welcome Death, I gladly go with thee". W. M. OLIVE.

Some folks are saying that there is soon to be a mass meeting at which the republicans of the county will determine under which emblem they are going to sail—whether Taft or Roosevelt. We don't know whether this is true or not, but we do know what they have not yet announced under which emblem they are going to seek votes.

Fact is, however, we didn't know there were two republican parties, Roosevelt and Thompson and Hundley say they are no republicans; they have quit that party for good and forever. How then can the republicans of Chilton secure place under his emblem and still be Republicans?

If they are not republicans then why not announce the fact? They assuredly received nomination as such. But it's none of our business; we just mention these facts so the public may know up which tree they are.

For the benefit of students who are not yet prepared to enter college, but who desire the advantages of a high grade preparatory school, the Southern University has established and maintains its FITTING SCHOOL. This school offers a standard high school course, under peculiarly attractive conditions. Students of the Fitting School enjoy the privileges of the college gymnasium, library, Y. M. C. A., and all public lectures and entertainments given by the college. At the same time, they have their own dormitory, where they live together with the principal and his family and the Matron, and so have the advantage of close association with their teachers, and constant supervision by them. This has all been placed since April 1st, and I have written several more these, whose names do not appear above, as their applications and examinations are now under consideration by the Company. You will remember I advertised this Policy some time ago, and I wish now to repeat the attractive feature in these Policies again. First the cost is as cheap, and a little cheaper, than many other reliable Old Line Companies. Second you get every fifth year a very attractive dividend. Third, these Policies have a disability clause: which guarantees if you become totally disabled from injury or disease of any kind, you will never have to pay any longer, but your Policy will mature, as though you were paying the premiums yourself in cash, and you would receive the same benefits. This Clause is in the face of the policy. There are other good features in this fine policy too numerous to mention, but if you will call at my office I will take pleasure in showing them to you. Again, when you buy this Policy you are patronizing a home man who will appreciate your business, and whose office is open and welcome for your use at any time. You will also be patronizing a home Company, the Old Volunteer State Life Insurance Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the oldest Southern Life Insurance Companies, which sounds good to us, and in patronizing a home man and a Southern Company, you are keeping the money at home, where it is made and where it belongs. Now a word to the skeptical along this line, I feel that it is my duty to take life insurance for the protection of my family, and inducing others to do the same, is one of the many ways to secure them. Today is here, yesterday is gone, and tomorrow may never come. I am at your service, and my whole soul is in the work, and your patronage will, I assure you, be greatly appreciated. You should investigate my Accident and Health Policy, my Fire and Tornado Policy, my combination Automobile Policy, and Bond Making.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

"Not guilty!" A startled cry fell from the quivering lips of Mrs. Daisy Ulrich Opie Grace, when the jury foreman pronounced the verdict that forever puts the woman beyond the pale of the law on the charge of shooting her husband, "Gene" Grace, in their home, 29 West Eleventh street, Atlanta, Ga., last March. The stirring climax of the trial crowded itself upon the prisoner, her attorneys, the court and others. The woman, pale and trembling, almost ran through the streets from the car line to the court room, where she sank, exhausted, in her seat.

In front of the Savananh, Ga., cotton exchange, the first bale of cotton for the new season of 1912-13 was sold at auction. The staple brought 31 1-2 cents, a new record for the first bale for many years. It graded middling and weighed 350 pounds. The bale was expressed to New York. The first bale was received in Savannah last year on July 26 and sold for 26 1-2 cents a pound.

Satisfied that 12c is an excellent price for cotton, even with the assured prospects of the shortest crop locally in several years, some farmers in Americus, Ga., evidence a willingness to sell at that figure. Several hundred bales were sold through a warehouse to American buyers for 12 cents, the cotton being good middling to be delivered during September. Similar lines were attempted three years ago.

A Socialistic lecture at Tallapoosa, Ga., by Mrs. Cates Richard O'Hare of St. Louis, Mo., in which she attacked the employment of children under legal age in cotton mills, was broken up by the fire department sprinkling the assembled crowd after Mayor C. E. Pearce, who is also superintendent of the largest cotton mill at Tallapoosa, had failed in his attempt to have Mrs. O'Hare arrested.

Movements of the Mexican Federal and rebel armies in the district south of the border at El Paso, Texas, together with the yet uncompleted desertion of the American colonies in the trouble zone, occupies the interest of officers of the United States troops engaged in patrolling the border at El Paso. A report has reached the United States secret service that General Salazar, with 1,000 rebels, has evacuated Casas Grandes with the two groups of Federals, greatly outnumbering the rebel forces, in pursuit. He is headed for the border.

The Berlin, Germany, Lokal Anzeiger publishes a Kiel dispatch saying that five Englishmen, whose names have not been made public, have been arrested at Eckenforde, in Schleswig-Holstein, on the charge of espionage. They appeared off the coast in a yacht and two of them went ashore. It is alleged that they were making photographs when they were arrested. The police confiscated plates which they found on the yacht and which, when developed, proved to be pictures of every harbor and bay of the Holstein coast.

After twenty-four hours' work the Chicago police completed an inventory of the art treasures, bric-a-brac, jewelry, silver plate and other articles stolen by Jacob F. Guthrie, alleged society burglar and forger, now under arrest, and announced that the goods recovered are estimated to be worth $250,000. Guthrie is 26 years of age, six feet in height and weighs 200 pounds. He is poorly dressed, although when arrested he had more than sixteen thousand dollars deposited to his credit in Chicago banks. It is said that he disposed of a large quantity of the plunder.

After a search of twenty-four hours the body of Celia Funka, an 18-year-old Austrian girl, who had been missing from her home at Manifold, Pa., three miles northeast of Washington, Pa., was found near Washington by a New Foundland dog, which had been her pet for years. August Funka, father of the girl, was led to a clump of trees by the animal, and there discovered his child. She had been choked to death. On her throat were the prints of fingers.

A tombstone toppled over in the cemetery at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., while the funeral of John D. Rockefeller, of Tivoli, a distant relative of the oil king was in progress, and crushed to death Raymond Callender, aged 4.

England will make no further protest against United States ships passing through the Panama canal free.

Because it obstructed the view of the Western mountains from the Biltmore house, George W. Vanderbilt has ordered the demolition of a three-story 30-room residence built by Mrs. Mitchell, sister-in-law of Marshall Field, at a cost of $75,000.

George Ballew, who shot four people and burned down a hotel at South Platt, Colo., committeed suicide three miles from Lajunta. He had been pursued from Rocky Ford by a sheriff and his posse, and took his life only after he had been wounded twice and brought to bay behind a hay stack. Ballew was overtaken on foot near the village of Ormega by Deputy Sheriff Devine.

Three men were drowned when a motor boat in which they were riding was run down by a freight steamer in the Delaware river, near Burlington, N. J. A one-armed man, George Tyler, Jr., of Burlington, N. J., was the only occupant of the motor boat to escape. He was thrown across the bottom of the wrecked craft and managed to remain afloat until rescued by the crew of the freight steamer. According to the crew of the freighter, the John W. Garertt, from Trenton, for Philadelphia, the motor boat failed to display any lights and ran directly across the steamer's path.

ford, the highest peak in the Selkirks, by Howard Palmer, secretary of the American Alpine Club, is announced in New York City in a message which was sent by Mr. Palmer to the American Geographical society. The ascent of the mountain, which is 11,634 feet high, and is practically one continuous wall of ice, was made one June 24. No less than eight separate attempts to scale Sir Sandford have been made during the last half dozen years.

The modern Rip Van Winkle lives in Liberty, Mo. This name is Gus Bishop. In forty-one years he never has been outside the city, he never has seen a telegraph instrument, never has seen an aeroplane, never has sen a moving picture show, never sa wan electric street car, never was inside a theater, never saw a horse race. There are scores of buildings in the little town that Gush Bishop has never seen.

A fifteen million dollar corporation for reclamation and drainage purposes and the development of electrical power in southwest Louisiana has been practically formed according to representations made to the state tax commission by Wellborn Bradford, representing New York interests. The company plans to divert water from the Red river by means of a natural and artificial waterway system through the southwestern portion of the state to supply irrigation and power for electrical transportation in that section.

General Pascual Orozco, commander-in-chief of the Mexican rebels, declares that he does not recognize the United States government. He made this remark to Thomas Edwards, the United States consul at Juarez, who called at the rebel leader's quarters to deliver a message from Secretary Knox. While Orozco did not receive Mr. Edwards as a representative of the United States government, he was glad, he said, to see Mr. Edwards and to receive him as an American citizen. Orozco accepted the message without comment.

Two Americans were hanged near Cananea, Sonora, Mexico. Their bodies were found and the incident reported to President Madero by the governor of Sonora. The governor has ordered an investigation. He believes the two men were executed by rebels in order to precipitate American intervention. The victims have not been identified.

Evidence of the growing anxiety of the administration in regard to the revolution in Nicaragua was shown when orders were issued to the gunboat Tacoma at Guantanamo, Cuba, to proceed forthwith to Bluefields. She is due to arrive soon, and will try to communicate with Managua, so Minister Weitzel may keep the state department informed of developments. The gunboat Annapolis, on the west coast, has been getting only fragmentary advices from Managua. These have been sufficient alarming to warrant sending another warship.

The senate gave its approval to the abolition of the "blue tag" system or fast freight branch of the second class mail service inaugurated by Postmaster General Hitchcock, agreeing to second class provisions of the postoffice appropriation bill, requiring transportation of periodicals in mail cars. Senator Swanson led an unsuccessful fight to give publishers the option of having their publications go by mail or fast freight, declaring that the postoffice bill as presented was unfair to the newspapers.

The United States has again protested to the Mexican government and to General Orozco, leader of the revolutionists, against attacks upon the American citizens and property in northern Mexico. Secretary Knox officially renewed his notive of two months ago, that the United States will hold Mexico to strict account for all damages, and unofficially notified Orozco that he would be held personally responsible for damages to Americans or their property.

The house ways and means committee determined to reintroduce the Democratic cotton tariff bill, which was passed at the last session of Congress and vetoed by President Taft. The importance of the tariff program was reflected in the meeting of the ways and means committee, all of the membership being called into conference. When the house met, Majority Leader Underwood presented the amended wool tariff measure and the excise tax bill passed last week by the Senate. He will ask that conferees be named to take the measures

Atlanta.—"Not guilty."

A startled cry fell from the quivering lips of Mrs. Daisy Ulrich Opie Grace, when the jury foreman pronounced the verdict which forver puts the woman beyond the pale of the law on the charge of shooting her husband, "Gene" Grace, in their home, 29 West Eleventh street, last March.

The stirring climax of the trial crowded itself upon the prisoner, her attorneys, the court and others. The wretched woman, pale and trembling, almost ran through the streets from the car line to the court room, and when she sank, exhausted in her seat, her lips were hard set and her fingers beat the table like strokes of a trip hammer.

She says that she is going back to Philadelphia just as soon as her attorneys would permit her.

Word was sent to the attorneys after the jury had retired that they wanted further instructions from Judge Roan and five minutes later it was announced by Deputy Lydell that the jury was ready to give its verdict. Mrs. Grace was not in her seat when Judge Roan ascended the bench to receive the verdict, but she rushed in before the jury came from the antechamber.

"Gentlemen, have you reached a verdict?" came clearly from the bench.

William A. Laird, the foreman, nodded. The court room was hushed. It was possible for one to hear the heavy breathing of the crowd when Foreman Laird raised from his seat with the indictment in his hand.

"Please read it," commanded the court.

Mrs. Grace moved a trifle forward. She bit down heavily on her lips. Her face was livid, and her hands clutched nervously at the yellow telegram which had startled her just a minute before.

"We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty!"

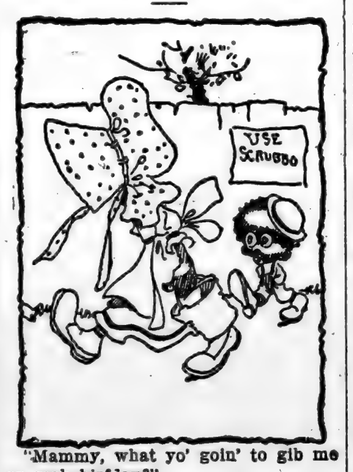
BEYOND LIMIT OF PATIENCE

Uses of the Telephone Will Be Apt to Condone Mr. Busiman's Brief Loss of Temper.

He was just about exasperated with the telephone, was Mr. Busiman.

Ten times that morning he had tried to get on to a number, and each time something had prevented him from speaking. Either it was "number engaged," or the person he wanted to speak to was out, or else he had been suddenly cut off. At last he got through.



"Hallo!" said he. "Is Mr. X. there?"

"Yes," replied a voice. "Do you want to speak to him?"

That was the last straw. Back came the reply in icy tones:

"Oh, no! Nothing of the sort. I merely rung up to hand him a cigar!"

UP TO HIM.

"Mammy, what yo' goin' to gib me on mah birfday?"

"Nuffin' if yo's good, chile."

Our Feathered Friends.

Rose Pastor Phelps-Stokes, during a recent visit to Philadelphia, told at a charity society a country-week story.

"Under an old apple tree," she said, "I gathered a half-dozen little country-weekers about me one August afternoon, and holding up a book, I said:

"'Now, children, I'm going to read to you. This is the book. It is called "Our Feathered Friends." Who are our feathered friends, does any one know?'"

"The urchins on the grass regarded one another doubtfully; then a little chap piped in a shrill key:

"'Angels?'"

"Exclamatory" Was Right.

Mrs. Mason's colored washerwoman, Martha, was complaining of her husband's health.

"Why, is he sick, Martha?" asked Mrs. Mason.

"He's ve'y po'ly, ma'am, po'ly," answered the woman. "He's got the exclamatory rheumatism."

"You mean inflammatory, Martha," said the patron. "Exclamatory means to cry out."

"Yes, ma'am," replied Martha, with conviction; "dat's what it is. He hollers all the time."—Judge.

No Danger.

"Do you believe we are in any danger of losing our birthright?"

"Not a bit—that is, those of us who are doomed to always work for what we get are not."

FAMILY RUNT

Kansas Man Says Coffee Made Him That.

"Coffee has been used in our family of eleven—father, mother, five sons and four daughters—for thirty years. I am the eldest of the boys and have always been considered the runt of the family and a coffee toper.

"I continued to drink it for years until I grew to be a man, and then I found I had stomach trouble, nervous headaches, poor circulation, was unable to do a full day's work, took medicine for this, that and the other thing, without the least benefit. In fact I only weighed 116 when I was 28.

"Then I changed from coffee to Postum, being the first one in our family to do so. I noticed, as did the rest of the family, that I was surely gaining strength and flesh. Shortly after I was visiting my cousin who said, 'You look so much better—you're getting fat.'

"At breakfast his wife passed me a cup of coffee, as she knew I was always such a coffee drinker, but I said, 'No, thank you.'

"'What!' said my cousin, 'you quit coffee? What do you drink?'

"'Postum,' I said, 'or water, and I am well.' They did not know what Postum was, but my cousin had stomach trouble and could not sleep at night from drinking coffee three times a day. He was glad to learn about Postum, but said he never knew coffee would hurt anyone." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"After understanding my condition and how I got well he knew what to do for himself. He discovered that coffee was the cause of his trouble as he never used tobacco or anything else of the kind. You should see the change in him now. We both believe that if persons who suffer from coffee drinking would stop and use Postum they could build back to health and happiness." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF ALABAMA BOILED DOWN FOR HASTY PERSUAL.

RECORB OF BOY TEACHER

Instructor in Central Alabama at the Age of 21 Receives a Life Certificate.

Montgomery.—That Alabama has a boy wonder, equal in some respects to John Stuart Mill, or Macaulay, has just become evident to the State Department of Education. The youthful prodigy lives in Central Alabama, where he has been teaching in the public schools of that section for the past five years.

He is now 21 years of age, and has successfully passed his examination for a life grade certificate to teach. But to apply for a life certificate one must have held a first grade certificate for five years. Alabama's boy wonder was, therefore, 16 years of age when he received his first grade certificate. Moreover, he was still in knee trousers when this mantle fell upon his shoulders.

But before receiving a first grade certificate he held a second grade, and this certificate was won when he was 14 years of age, when he first began to teach in the public schools of the state.

He has now taught seven years, has achieved success in every school where he engaged in pedagogical pursuits, and has just passed a successful examination for a life grade certificate.

His name is withheld by the State Department of Education owing to the fact that no announcement has yet been made of the results of the recent state examinations, and will not be until the examiners have finished grading the papers for his county.

Tuscumbia.—Killing one man outright, slightly wounding two others, firing at one other at close range and shaping his gun at yet another, is the record of Tom McCollister, a young man, perhaps 30 years old, residing at Littleville, this county, 12 miles south of Tuscumbia. He was captured by Sheriff Leggett and a posse in hiding under an old log house, six miles from this city, armed with a shot gun, but no shells, his last cartridge having been snapped but failed to explode. It was loaded with bird shot. McCollister is supposed to have been crazed with whiskey.

Mobile.—Mobile county will take two or three booths at the Chicago Land Show next November. News has been received here that the state has secured two booths. The Chamber of Commerce and Business league announced immediately that the farmer who had the best exhibit at the Mobile County fair will be sent with his exhibit to the Coliseum exposition. Alabama's section is immediately to the main entrance of this building.

Mobile.—For the past fiscal year Mobile shipped 272,000,665 feet of lumber. The shipments from Mobile show a decrease of a little over 10,000,000 feet. However, the postponement of the formal celebration did not change the plans of the Mineral for operating its trains. Both passenger and freight traffic begun on August 5th.

Montgomery.—"Alabama can furnish you all the corn and alfalfa land you can use," was the reply of Lee Cowart, state immigration agent, answering the inquiries of A. C. Drummond, of New Concord, O., with reference to available lands in the state. Mr. Drummond said he would want from 500 to 1,000 acres. "Look at Alabama's corn crop of last year," said Mr. Cowart, in talking about the matter, "then certain sections of the state are proving that alfalfa can be grown here to great advantage, and just as well as it can be grown anywhere."

Montgomery.—Premiums for auto mobile property damage insurance for 1911 in Alabama exceeded the losses by $10,054. This is looked upon as being a fairly good report, although two of the companies were compelled to pay out greater amounts for losses than they received for premiums.

Awful.

A West End woman called the attention of her husband to a little baby which was trying to sleep on the porch of its home on the opposite side of the street.

"It's lying on the bare boards, isn't it?" he observed.

"Yes, they haven't even placed a rug for the little chap to rest his head on."

The husband took another look.

"And what do you think of that?" he ejaculated. "They haven't even painted the boards."—Youngstown (O.) Telegram.

CARELESSNESS CAUSES DEATH

Saturday morning a colored woman named Marge Cooper came down to Clanton from Montgomery. where she had been living for some time, to visit relatives here. Previous to her leaving Montgomery she had sent a special delivery letter to her brother advising him of her proposed visit. The letter was delivered to another by the same name as her brother and was not returned to the post office for several days, so that her brother knew nothing of the intended visit. Marge had been sick in Montgomery for some weeks and her visit to Clanton was for the purpose of recuperating her health. When she arrived at the depot there was no one to meet her; she was still sick and fatigued from the trip. Some of her friends, realizing that she was in a critical condition, attempted to assist her, but before she had gone more than fifty yards from the depot she sunk from exhaustion and in a few moments passed away. It was not until Sunday afternoon that her brother was apprised of her death—some time after the unfortunate woman had had been burled. Had the letter intended for her brother been returned to the post office promptly by the party receiving it probably a human life might have been saved. Letters with special delivery stamps attached show that the contents is of importance and is to be rushed, otherwise the special delivery stamp would not be attached.

COUNTY COURT

County Court was in session all day Monday with a heavy docket. Judge Deason presided with his usual dignity. The following cases were adjudicated:—

Tom Broadhead, A to M., fined $50 and costs. Tom Broadhead, C. C. W., Waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed at $250. Atkins Watley, A. to M. pleads guilty, fined $50 and costs. Cora Young, P. D. waived to Grand Jury. F. C. (alias) Tom Henley, abandonment, waived to Grand Jury, Bond fixed at $200. Arthur Browder, abusive language, waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed at $100. Ida Ward, adultery, noll prossed. Flin Mickey, assault, fined $25 and costs. Cliff Oden, adultry, nol prossed. Della Simmons, adultery waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed at $300. Shelly Matthews, adultery, waived to Grand Jury, band fixed at $300. W. A Thomas, S. L., continued by state. Lige Harris, A. & B. waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed $200. Sam George, fail to work public roads, waived to Grand Jury, bond fixed at $150. Petro George, fail to work public roads, nol prossed. Jno D. Brown, obstructing railroad track; remanded to jail without bond. Wilson Thomas obstructing railroad track, remanded to jail without bond.

In the two latter cases the prisoners are little negro boys thirteen to sixteen years of age who were attempting to steal their passage from Montgomery to Birmingham; they were put off near Cooper station and in order to stop the next freight train and continue their journey had placed ties across the track in such a manner that north bound trains would surely have been wrecked Fortunately a south bound train came along first and discovered the obstructions thereby much property and many lives were saved.

COURTNEY-JONES

APPROACHING MARRIAGE OF TWO POPULAR YOUNG PEOPLE

Last Sunday's Advertiser contained the announcement of the engagement and early marriage of two of Clanton's most popular young people—Miss Sophia Courtney and Mr. Hugh Jones—the wedding to take place at the home of the bride's parents in Montgomery on Wednesday, August 21st.

Miss Courtney is one of Clanton's most cultivated young women, and besides having a brilliant intellect, she has a winsome manner that attracts to her as friends every one with whom she comes in contact.

Mr. Jones is a rising young business man of Clanton, holding the responsible position of bookkeeper for the firm of E. M. Pinckard & Company, and he, too, numbers his friends by the number of his acquaintances.

In speaking of the soon-to-be wedding, Mr. E. M. Pinckard said to the Press man:

Miss Courtney has been with us for quite a number of years in the capacity of cashier; during all her associations with our house she has held a position of trust and responsibility which she has filled with rare efficiency. By her sweet personality she has won the esteem of all who know her; her enviable host of friends in Clanton are glad to know that her future home will be among them.

Mr. Hugh Jones, the fortunate young man, is a gentleman of sterling worth and his upright integrity of character has won for him many friends.

All wish this young couple a happy future with just enough clouds to make a glorious sun-set.

EDUCATIONAL BOARD ELECTED

At a meeting of the District Trustees of Chilton County pursuant to the Laws of Alabama, the following proceedings were had to wit: J. W. Moore was elected Chairman and A. D. Bentley, Secretary of the meeting.

The meeting then went into the election of three members of the Board of County Trustees and T. J. Dormany, J. C. Veazy and L. A. Calloway were unanimously elected to serve as members of the County Board of Education for Chilton County. Mr. W. J. Billingsley and Prof. Howard Roper were nominated to be voted for as members of the County Educational Board. Mr. Billingsley receiving a majority of the votes cast, was elected as the fourth and last member of the County Educational Board of Chilton County.

The meeting then adjourned.

J. W. Moore, Chairman,
A. D. Bentley, Secretary.

STREET TAX COLLECTIONS.

Chief of Police Hayes has collected to date and turned over to the Town Clerk the sum of $965.50 in street taxes. This is twice as much as has ever been collected before and the Chief says he thinks he will collect at least fifty dollars yet—in fact he will get that much or some of "the boys" will have to leave town.

This is an extremely good showing for Chief Hayes, and while we would not pretend to throw a damper over the matter, we would like to ask just one little wee bit of a question.

Heretofore, when the street tax collection amounted to half the amount collected this year—or less than half, the city paid the salary of the Night Marshal. The property tax this year is surely as great, or greater than ever, and this is equally true of the privilege tax; then with the street tax twice as much why is it the merchants of the town have to pay the salary of a city official? Where is the enchantment? The electric lights have been reduced in number, there is no more street cleaning or grading than usual, the salaries of the other town officials have not been increased appreciably, we are not erecting any city buildings, so far as the Press has been informed, nothing has been said about saving up for a water works system, the old water wagon has not even put in an appearance this Summer—hot and dusty as it has been—there is no bonded debt for the discharge of which to create a sinking fund—in short nothing out of the ordinary, nothing out of the old come-day-go-day rut has been done for which the city funds are expended; why then, we repeat, should the merchants be called upon to pay the salary of a city official?

We are not begrudging the little fifty cents we contribute—it isn't that, but WHY? That's the question, W-H-Y?

RIDERVILLE NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reynolds are visiting relatives in Bibb county.

The school building here was totally destroyed by fire last Tuesday. No cause for the fire can be determined. Fortunately the piano and library had been removed from the building.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mattison have been entertaining at a house party Mrs. Henry, Miss Suttle and Mr. Suttle of Centreville, Mrs. Bondurant and Mr. Howard McCord of East Lake, Mrs. M. E. Thomas of Columbiana and Mrs. W. W. Arnold of Six Mile.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren of Gulfport, Miss., are visiting Mrs. Warren's parents, Mr and Mrs. T. D. Parnell.

Miss Levi of Sylacauga is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Peeples have returned from an extended visit to their son in Norfolk, Va.

Mrs. C. M. Norris spent the week end with relatives in Birmingham.

Mrs. P. M. Gay of Atlanta is on a visit here to Mr. Gay's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith entertained last Tuesday evening at a Forty two party in honor of their sister, Miss Levi, of Sylacauga. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns and lanterns. During the evening a course of ices, cakes, and bon-bons was served, carrying out a scheme of white and pink. It was said to be one of the most enjoyable features of this season.

SAMARIA

Mr. Editor:

Allow me to state through the Press that this part of the world is still living and progressing.

Our meeting has just closed and the effects are to be found as you wander around through the community and note the smiling faces that seem to be filled to overflowing with joy and thanks to the Master for such a successful meeting.

Farmers are enjoying the vacation by roaming over the fields of corn and cotton and noting the remarkable benefits that are being produced by the warm sunshine and bounteous rains.

Our Sunday school, under the supervision of Mr. J. P. Parrish, is approaching the banner mark.

The Invincible Literary Society of this place is, without a doubt, growing stronger. Next Saturday night, Aug. 17, if nothing prevents we will meet again to render a very interesting program.

We are expecting to have with us Mr. Howard Roper. whose address will be worthy of your coming to hear.

There will also be other essays o nnoteworthy subjects.

Everybody has a cordial invitation to come and enjoy the evening with us.

Remember, we will begin strictly at 8:15, and if you are after that time getting there you will be just that much loser.

EX-CONGRESSMAN MAKES STATEMENT

FORMER REPRESENTATIVE SYDNEY J. BOWIE TALKS ABOUT L. & N. FREIGHT RATES.

LOWER THAN OTHER ROADS

Southern Allowed to Charge $1.25 for Every $1.05 Allowed to Be Charged by L. & N.

To the Editor of the Birmingham Ledger:

I have noted your editorial of the 22nd inst., entitled "About Earnings and Rates." In this editorial you say: "With this showing the Louisville and Nashville insists upon restoring the 3 cent passenger rate and the old high freight rates in Alabama, while other roads, whose stock is selling far below that of the Louisville and Nashville, and whose earnings are much less, are satisfied to observe the rates fixed by the state." This statement is so inaccurate and misleading, that I feel in justice to you as well as to your numerous readers, that the truth in regard to the matter should be re-stated.

It is very evident that you have been grossly misinformed in regard to the facts. The other roads referred to in your editorial have not been satisfied to observe the rates fixed by the state for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad; upon the contrary, the Southern Railway, a very much larger and wealthier system, extending over a much greater mileage and backed by the most powerful set of capitalists in the world, is allowed by those statutes to which you refer, to charge $1.25 for every $1.05 allowed to be charged by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Alabama Great Southern, which has no branch mileage to speak of, whose business is concentrated upon a highly profitable through line whose gross and net earnings per mile are very much greater than those of the Louisville and Nashville, and whose investment per mile of line is much less, is allowed under these same statutes $1.20 for every $1.05 allowed to the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, having in Alabama only one through main line, with much larger volume of business per mile of line, a road much greater in the aggregate in mileage, and in capital invested than the Louisville and Nashville, and which has never done one-tenth of the development work of the latter road, is allowed $1.20 for every $1.05 allowed the Louisville and Nashville Railroad under the statutes referred to.

The Seaboard Air Line, a great competitor in every respect, is allowed $1.25 under these same statutes for every $1.05 allowed the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

As there are people, who do not know these facts or who, knowing it persistently ignore the same in their public statements (of course, I do not include the Ledger in this statement), I refer you to the acts of the special session of 1907 (pp. 91-159 inclusive) and subsequent orders of the railroad commission of Alabama, in which the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad is transferred from Class 1 to Class 2, the Atlantic Coast Line from Class 1 to Class 3, and the Seaboard Air Line from Class 2 to Class 3.

In these statutes you will see that with certain exceptions there noted, the railroads in Class 1, are allowed to charge 5 per cent above the standard rates of freight there fixed; the railroads in Class 2, 20 per cent above the standard rates there fixed; the railroads in Class 3, 25 per cent above the standard rates there fixed; and the railroads in Class 4, 50 per cent above the standard rates there fixed, (see particularly pp. 94, 103, 11, 119 137, 136, 145 and 154 of the acts of the extra session of 1907.)

Moreover, it was testified, under oath, in the rate cases lately tried, and it has never been denied publicly, that the average rates voluntarily charged by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad are still lower than the average of rates fixed by the statute for the Southern Railway and other roads enjoying the special favors of the former state administration. Of course, in the vast multiplicity of rates fixed under varying conditions, many of them extending over a long period of years, it could not be stated accurately that every rate on any one road for a given distance is either lower or higher than every rate on [illegible] but the [illegible] that it has [illegible] the policy of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad [illegible] and that the average rates charged by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad are lower than the average of rates charged by the Southern Railway. The testimony to that effect was not controverted.

Moreover, the average of rates of the Louisville and Nashville railroad in Alabama are lower than the average of rates of all railroads in the state of Georgia. The persistent efforts to create a prejudice, and an unjust prejudice, against the Louisville and Nashville railroad by making comparison with a few short lines in the state of Georgia enjoying a peculiarly heavy traffic, cannot always deceive and mislead the people. It is well known that the rates referred to in Georgia, which are especially low, apply to less than one-twelfth of the mileage of that state. We persistently hear of isolated cases where conditions are wholly different. We do not hear from the critics of the Louisville and Nashville railroad who are trying to build up an unjust sentiment against it anything about the rates of the state of Georgia, taken as a whole, compared with the rates of the Louisville and Nashville railroad in Alabama, taken as a whole.

We hear a great deal about the heavy tonnage which the state of Alabama furnishes to the Louisville and Nashville railroad, but we do not hear anything about the fact that every ton moved in Georgia yields nearly four times as much revenue as every ton moved in Alabama.

We hear much about the fact of the great volume of business hauled in Alabama. We are not told that, although practically one-half the tonnage moved by the Louisville and Nashville railroad originates in Alabama, less than one-fourth of its revenue is derived from this state. We hear the word "tonnage" referred to as if it was all revenue—no allusion is made to the fact that tonnage creates expense as well as revenue.

You speak of the income of the Louisville and Nashville railroad as measured by its capital stock. It is doubtless unknown to the Ledger, although the fact is a matter of record and capable of certain proof, that the average dividend returns of the stockholders of the Louisville and Nashville railroad since its incorporation have been less than 3 1-2 per cent; that it has been wisely and economically managed since its organization in 1851, having been practically under one management since 1865; that every dollar of its earnings, outside of the very meagre return to its stockholders mentioned, has been put back in the property and used in the extension of its lines, and in the increase of its facilities and equipment, all tending to enable it better to discharge its duties and obligations as a public carrier. These earnings have never been squandered upon speculations in Wall street, but have been devoted to development purposes, a very large portion of which has been expended right here in Alabama, and particularly in Jefferson county. It may not be known to many, but the fact is that the Louisville and Nashville railroad owns today over four hundred miles of track, including side track, in this county alone, and it is building additional lines. These earnings have gone into surplus, and surplus belongs to the company just as much as the original capital invested.

The property of the company could not be reproduced today for twice the value of the capital stock in addition to the total outstanding issue of bonds. In years of panic and depression it cuts off dividends and reduces the salaries of its officials; in years of prosperity it has taken its surplus earnings and put them back into new improvements and extensions. It is entitled to an earning upon its surplus and upon its natural increase in values just as much as it is upon its capital stock and its bonds. If by its energy, by its economy, by wise and prudent management and by far-seeing policy of development, it has gotten its stock where it is worth on the market $160.00 per share, as you state, it ought to be commended and encouraged instead of mercilessly condemned for the possession of these elemental virtues.

The fact that the road is a success, that it is well and prudently, economically and efficiently managed, is no reason why it should be the victim of unjust discrimination. When the fair value is taken today in Alabama, it is not earning a fair and just return from all of its business. It is not even now, on the average, charging as much as the Southern railway and other state-favorites, in whose behalf an unjust policy of discrimination has been placed on the statute books. Upon the contrary its freight rates, on the whole, are still lower than those of its principal competitors, notwithstanding the statutes, and this because the statutes mean one thing for the Southern Railway, and another for the Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad does not expect a square deal from those who want special favors and do not care how they get them; it does expect it from that large body of citizens who know the truth before they begin the controversy, and who are [illegible]

PRESIDENT M. H. SMITH MAKES REPLY TO RECENT ATTACKS

Defines Position of L. & N. in Rate Matters.

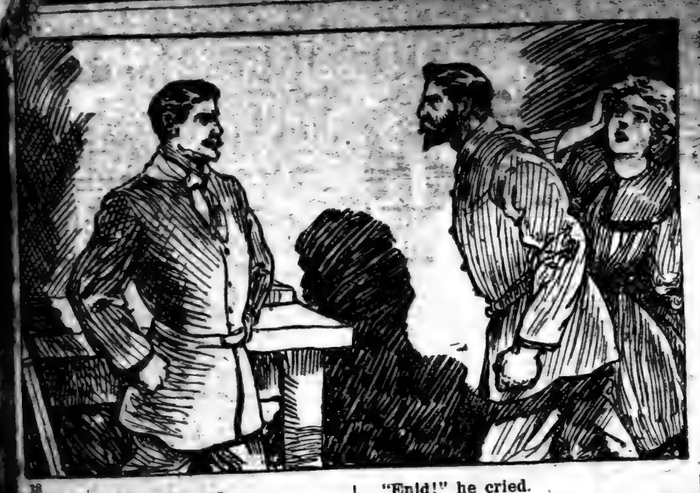
Goes Into Detail to Show the Road's Profits and Comparison of Alabama and Georgia Rates.

A formal statement has been issued by Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville railroad company, regarding some attacks which have been made upon the Louisville and Nashville in Alabama. Mr. Smith says:

Former Governor Comer and a number of wholesale merchants of Birmingham have recently inaugurated a political movement against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company with a view to coercing it into a surrender of its rights fairly determined in a court of justice. Ex parte statements have been made wholly unwarranted by the facts, the tendency of which is to arouse unjust prejudice in the minds of the people. This company feels it a duty to the public, to its patrons and to itself, to make reply to some of these statements.

At the outset, it declares that it has no personal issue with Governor Comer, or the wholesale merchants who have combined against it, and last of all, with the people of Alabama.

This company recognizes the right of every individual to his own opinion, but it insists that it has the right to be heard in its own behalf not only before the people themselves, but also in the courts of the land, which were organized for the purpose of protecting every person in his life, liberty and property.



This company has faith in the just intentions of the majority of the people, and it also has faith in their wisdom when their judgments are formed after a full consideration of all the testimony. It does not believe that a law suit, however, can be fairly tried on the political hustings, nor does it believe that any set of politicians, however personally honest and capable, should have the absolute right to dispose of the property of other people without their consent and without an opportunity to be heard according to the orderly procedure of a court of justice.

This company does not impugn the good faith, or the honesty of the representatives of the people when it declares that it is unwilling to have its rights determined in ex parte political proceedings, and it believes that if the politicians of the state, and the wholesale and retail grocery and dry goods merchants had the right to determine for themselves, without consultation with this company, what this company should charge for the use of its own property in which neither the politicians nor the wholesalers nor the retailers have a dollar of invested capital, it would be wholly unwise and prejudicial to the best interests of the public to permit them to exercise such power—and this for the reason that all history demonstrates that arbitrary power, by whatever, in whom vested, will sooner or later be used for selfish and personal ends, and that such power, either in a monarchy, or in a republic, has always been destructive of civil liberty and the public welfare.

Believing that it is due to the people the ttheir conclusions should not be based upon information derived solely from those having personal ends to serve, this company takes this opportunity to restate certain facts, which are not capable of disproof, which have never been denied or controverted in any forum where both sides had an opportunity to be heard, but which have been misrepresented in proceedings purely political, begun and instituted by those who were either seeking office or seeking the right to dictate [illegible] and schedules which would place themselves as illegitimate [illegible] over their own competitors.

THE TRUTH ABOUT GEORGIA RATES.

To begin at the beginning, it has been over and over again [illegible] that this company is charging its patrons in Alabama more than it is charging its patrons in Georgia. The untruthfulness of this assertion has been so completely demonstrated that new [illegible] taken in the speakers' [illegible] came on some articles to Atlanta and West Point like [illegible] West Point, Ga., and the [illegible] points from Atlanta, Ga., to [illegible] Texas, which rates [illegible] on the Louisville and [illegible] Alabama [illegible] necessary to quote at a rate [illegible]

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Maitland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping. Fate brings all the actors together. Newbold returns from hunting game and sees a man, near the hut. It is James Armstrong, who has at last located the missing girl, and he enters the cabin.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Odds Against Him.

The noise of the opening of the door and the inrush of cold air that followed awoke Enid Maitland to instant action. She rose to her feet and faced the entrance through which she expected Newbold to reappear—for of course the newcomer must be he—and for the life of her she could not help that radiating flash of joy, the momentary anticipation of which fairly transfigured her being; although if she had stopped to reflect she would have remembered that not in the whole course of their acquaintance had Newbold ever entered her room at any time without knocking and receiving permission.

Some of that joy yet lingered in her lovely face when she tardily recognized the newcomer in the half light. Armstrong, scarcely waiting to close the door, sprang forward joyfully with his hands outstretched.

"Enid!" he cried.

Naturally he thought the look of expectant happiness he had surprised upon her face was for him and he accounted for its sudden disappearance by the shock of his unexpected, unannounced, abrupt, entrance.

The warm color had flushed her face, but as she stared at him her aspect rapidly changed. She grew paler. The happy light that had shone in her eyes faded away and as he approached her she shrank back.

"You!" she exclaimed almost in terror.

"Yes," he answered smilingly, "I have found you at last. Thank God you are safe and well. Oh, if you could only know the agonies I have gone through. I thought I loved you when I left you six weeks ago, but now—"

In eager impetuosity he drew nearer to her. Another moment and he would have taken her in his arms, but she would have none of him.

"Stop," she said with a cold and inflexible sternness that gave pause even to his buoyant joyful assurance.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"The matter? Everything, but—"

"No evasions, please," continued the man still cheerfully but with a growing misgiving. His suspicions, in abeyance for the moment because of his joy at seeing her alive and well, arose with renewed force. "I left you practically pledged to me," he resumed.

"Not so fast," answered Enid Maitland, determined to combat the lightest attempt to establish a binding claim upon her.

"Isn't it true?" asked Armstrong. "Here, wait," he said before she could answer, "I am half frozen, I have been searching for you since early morning in the storm." He unbuttoned and unbelted his huge fur coat as he spoke and threw it carelessly on the floor by his Winchester leaning against the wall. "Now," he resumed, "I can talk better."

"You must have something to eat then," said the girl.

She was glad of the interruption since she was playing for time. She did not quite know how the interview would end, he had come upon her so unexpectedly and she had never formulated what she would say to him, that which she felt she must say. She must have time to think, to collect herself, which he in his part was quite willing to give her, for he was not much better prepared for the interview than she. He really was hungry and tired, his early journey had been foolhardy and in the highest degree dangerous. The violence of his admiration for her added to the excitement of her presence, and the probable nearness of Newbold as to whose whereabouts he wondered were not conducive to rapid recuperation. It would be comfort to him also to have food and time.

"Sit down," she said. "I shall be back in a moment."

The fire of the morning was still burning in the stove in the kitchen; to heat a can of soup, to make him some buttered toast and hot coffee, were the tasks of a few moments; she brought them back to him, set them on the table before him and bade him fall to.

"By jove," exclaimed the man after a little time as he began to eat hastily but with great relish what she had prepared, while she stood over him watching him silently. "This is cozy. A warm, comfortable room, something to eat served by the finest woman in the world, the prettiest girl on earth to look at—what more could a man desire? This is the way it's going to be always in the future."

"You have no warrant whatever for saying or hoping that," answered the girl slowly but decisively.

"Have I not?" asked the man quickly. "Did you not say to me a little while ago that you liked me better than any man you had ever met and that I might win you if I could? Well, I can, and what's more, I will in spite of yourself, Enid,"—he laughed. "Why, the memory of that kiss I stole from you makes me mad." He pushed the things before him and rose to his feet once more. "Come, give me another," he said, "it isn't in the power of woman to stand against a love like mine."

"Isn't it?"

"No, indeed."

"Louise Newbold did," she answered very quietly but with the swiftness and the dexterity of a sword thrust by a master hand, a mighty arm.

Armstrong stared at her in open mouthed astonishment.

"What do you know about Louise Rosser or Newbold?" he asked at last.

"All that I want to know."

"And did that damned hound tell you?"

"If you mean Mr. Newbold, he never mentioned your name, he does not know you exist."

"Where is he now?" thundered the man.

"Have no fear," answered the woman calmly, "he has gone to the settlements to tell them I am safe and to seek help to get me out of the mountains."

"Fear!" exclaimed Armstrong, proudly, "I fear nothing on earth. For years, ever since I heard his name in fact, I have longed to meet him. I want to know who told you about that woman—Kirkby?"

"He never mentioned your name in connection with her."

"But you must have heard it somewhere," cried the man thoroughly bewildered. "The birds of the air didn't tell it to you, did they?"

"She told me herself," answered Enid Maitland.

"She told you? Why, she's been dead in her grave five years, shot to death by that murderous dog of a husband of hers."

"A word with you, Mr. Armstrong," said the woman with great spirit. "You can't talk that way about Mr. Newbold; he saved my life twice over, from a bear and then in the cloudburst which caught me in the canon."

"That evens up a little," said Armstrong. "Perhaps for your sake I will spare him."

"You!" laughed the woman contemptuously. "Spare him? Be advised, look to yourself, if he ever finds out what I know, I don't believe any power on earth could save you."

"Oh," said Armstrong carelessly enough, although he was consumed with hate and jealousy and raging against her clearly evident disdain. "I can take care of myself, I guess. Anyway I only want to talk about you, not about him or her. Your father—"

"Is he well?"

"Well enough, but heart-broken, crushed. I happened to be in his house in Philadelphia when the telegram came from your uncle that you were lost and probably dead. I had just asked him for your hand," he added, smiling grimly at the recollection.

"You had no right to do that."

"I know that."

"It was not, it is not, his to give."

"Still when I won you I thought it would be pleasant all around if he knew and approved."

"And did he?"

"Not then, he literally drove me out of the house, but afterwards he said if I could find you I could have you, and, by heavens, I have found you and I will have you whether you like it or not."

"Never!" cried the woman, starting to her feet.

"You!" she answered, rising in horror.

"You!" she answered, rising in horror.

"Yes," he answered, smilingly, "I have found you at last. Thank God you are safe and well. Oh, if you could only know the agonies I have gone through. I thought I loved you when I left you six weeks ago, but now—"

In eager impetuosity he drew nearer to her. Another moment and he would have taken her in his arms, but she would have none of him.

"Stop," she said with a cold and inflexible sternness that gave pause even to his buoyant joyful assurance.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"The matter? Everything, but—"

"No evasions, please," continued the man still cheerfully but with a growing misgiving. His suspicions, in abeyance for the moment because of his joy at seeing her alive and well, arose with renewed force. "I left you practically pledged to me," he resumed.

"Not so fast," answered Enid Maitland, determined to combat the lightest attempt to establish a binding claim upon her.

"Isn't it true?" asked Armstrong. "Here, wait," he said before she could answer, "I am half frozen, I have been searching for you since early morning in the storm." He unbuttoned and unbelted his huge fur coat as he spoke and threw it carelessly on the floor by his Winchester leaning against the wall. "Now," he resumed, "I can talk better."

"You must have something to eat then," said the girl.

She was glad of the interruption since she was playing for time. She did not quite know how the interview would end, he had come upon her so unexpectedly and she had never formulated what she would say to him, that which she felt she must say. She must have time to think, to collect herself, which he in his part was quite willing to give her, for he was not much better prepared for the interview than she. He really was hungry and tired, his early journey had been foolhardy and in the highest degree dangerous. The violence of his admiration for her added to the excitement of her presence, and the probable nearness of Newbold as to whose whereabouts he wondered were not conducive to rapid recuperation. It would be comfort to him also to have food and time.

"Sit down," she said. "I shall be back in a moment."

The fire of the morning was still burning in the stove in the kitchen; to heat a can of soup, to make him some buttered toast and hot coffee, were the tasks of a few moments; she brought them back to him, set them on the table before him and bade him fall to.

"By jove," exclaimed the man after a little time as he began to eat hastily but with great relish what she had prepared, while she stood over him watching him silently. "This is cozy. A warm, comfortable room, something to eat served by the finest woman in the world, the prettiest girl on earth to look at—what more could a man desire? This is the way it's going to be always in the future."

"You have no warrant whatever for saying or hoping that," answered the girl slowly but decisively.

"Have I not?" asked the man quickly. "Did you not say to me a little while ago that you liked me better than any man you had ever met and that I might win you if I could? Well, I can, and what's more, I will in spite of yourself, Enid,"—he laughed. "Why, the memory of that kiss I stole from you makes me mad." He pushed the things before him and rose to his feet once more. "Come, give me another," he said, "it isn't in the power of woman to stand against a love like mine."

"Isn't it?"

"No, indeed."

"Louise Newbold did," she answered very quietly but with the swiftness and the dexterity of a sword thrust by a master hand, a mighty arm.

Armstrong stared at her in open mouthed astonishment.

"What do you know about Louise Rosser or Newbold?" he asked at last.

"All that I want to know."

"And did that damned hound tell you?"

"If you mean Mr. Newbold, he never mentioned your name, he does not know you exist."

"Where is he now?" thundered the man.

"Have no fear," answered the woman calmly, "he has gone to the settlements to tell them I am safe and to seek help to get me out of the mountains."

"Fear!" exclaimed Armstrong, proudly, "I fear nothing on earth. For years, ever since I heard his name in fact, I have longed to meet him. I want to know who told you about that woman—Kirkby?"

"He never mentioned your name in connection with her."

"But you must have heard it somewhere," cried the man thoroughly bewildered. "The birds of the air didn't tell it to you, did they?"

"She told me herself," answered Enid Maitland.

"She told you? Why, she's been dead in her grave five years, shot to death by that murderous dog of a husband of hers."

"A word with you, Mr. Armstrong," said the woman with great spirit. "You can't talk that way about Mr. Newbold; he saved my life twice over, from a bear and then in the cloudburst which caught me in the canon."

"That evens up a little," said Armstrong. "Perhaps for your sake I will spare him."

"You!" laughed the woman contemptuously. "Spare him? Be advised, look to yourself, if he ever finds out what I know, I don't believe any power on earth could save you."

"Oh," said Armstrong carelessly enough, although he was consumed with hate and jealousy and raging against her clearly evident disdain. "I can take care of myself, I guess. Anyway I only want to talk about you, not about him or her. Your father—"

"Is he well?"

"Well enough, but heart-broken, crushed. I happened to be in his house in Philadelphia when the telegram came from your uncle that you were lost and probably dead. I had just asked him for your hand," he added, smiling grimly at the recollection.

"You had no right to do that."

"I know that."

"It was not, it is not, his to give."

"Still when I won you I thought it would be pleasant all around if he knew and approved."

"And did he?"

"Not then, he literally drove me out of the house, but afterwards he said if I could find you I could have you, and, by heavens, I have found you and I will have you whether you like it or not."

"Never!" cried the woman, starting to her feet.

Regular practicing physicians recommend and prescribe OXIDINE for Malaria, because it is a proven remedy by years of experience. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest and administer at first sign of Chills and Fever.

Their Place.

"Where are marital rods in pickle kept?"

"I should suggest in family jars."

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50 cents.

Homely Philosophy.

"'After all, it isn't always those with the loudest voices that have the best things to say,' said the little brown hen."

For SUMMER HEADACHES

Hicks' CAPUDINE is the best remedy—no matter what causes them—whether from the heat, sitting in draughts, feverish condition, etc. 10c., 25c. and 50c. per bottle at medicine stores.

Business Practice.

"The new actor in this company certainly knows how to act on people's feelings with fine touches."

"Yes; he used to be a dentist."

If your appetite is not what it should be perhaps Malaria is developing. It affects the whole system. OXIDINE will clear away the germs, rid you of Malaria and generally improve your condition.

Pa's Rather Indefinite.

"Pa, what is an anachronism?"

"Oh, that's something or other smart people are always finding in Shakespeare's works. Now, run along and play."

Show Devotion to Queen.

Queen Alexandra was very much touched by the devotion of the woman of every station of life who sold flowers on Alexandra day for one of her pet charities, the hospitals of London. More than $150,000 was collected, and next year it is said that all of England will celebrate the queen mother's day in the same way.

Prize Winner.

"What are these cups for?" asked a well-dressed man of a jeweler, pointing to some lovely silver cups on the counter.

"These are race cups to be given as prizes."

"If that's so, suppose you and I race for one?" And the stranger, with the cup in his hand, started, the jeweler after him. The stranger won the cup.—Keystone.

New Idea for Dressmakers.

A New York woman has inaugurated a new departure. She sent word to a number of dressmakers that she had so many dresses to make, of such and such materials, and so many others to be altered, and named the alterations to be made and asked for bids. She will probably accept the lowest bid, and this seems to open up a new field in dressmaking. It will also develop a new variety of shrewdness on the part of successful dressmakers—the ability to figure on bids.

Expect Big Sale of Red Cross Seals.

The campaign for selling Red Cross seals this year will be carried on in practically every state and territory in the United States, and even in Porto Rico, the Canal Zone, Hawaii and Philippine islands. No less than 100,000 volunteer agents, including department, drug and other kinds of stores, motion picture theaters, individuals, and others, will be engaged in the work. Before the sale is completed, it is expected that at least 100,000,000 seals will have been printed and distributed, besides several million posters, display cards and other forms of advertising literature.

Fail to Select Food Nature Demands to Ward Off Ailments?

A Ky. lady, speaking about food, says: "I was accustomed to eating all kinds of ordinary food until, for some reason, indigestion and nervous prostration set in.

"After I had run down seriously my attention was called to the necessity of some change in my diet, and I discontinued my ordinary breakfast and began using Grape-Nuts with a good quantity of rich cream.

"In a few days my condition changed in a remarkable way, and I began to have a strength that I had never been possessed of before, a vigor of body and a poise of mind that amazed me. It was entirely new in my experience.

"My former attacks of indigestion had been accompanied by heat flashes, and many times my condition was distressing with blind spells of dizziness, rush of blood to the head and neuralgic pains in the chest.

"Since using Grape-Nuts alone for breakfast I have been free from these troubles, except at times when I have indulged in rich, greasy foods in quantity, then I would be warned by a pain under the left shoulder blade, and unless I heeded the warning the old trouble would come back, but when I finally got to know where these troubles originated I returned to my Grape-Nuts and cream and the pain and disturbance left very quickly.

"I am now in prime health as a result of my use of Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

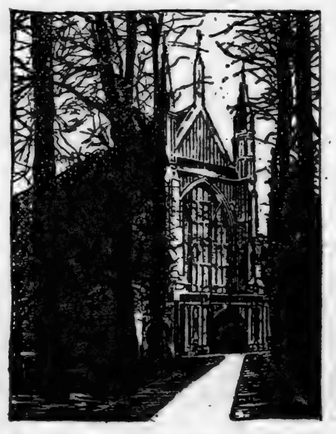
SAVED FROM RUIN

Undermining of Winchester Cathedral Stopped by Cement.



For Many Years the Historic Building Has Been Cracking, Bulging and Settling, Threatening to Collapse Completely.

London.—After a period of eight centuries, Winchester cathedral now rests on a solid and immovable foundation, saved from threatened ruin. Almost every day in the last few years the movements of a diver in regulation dress have been watched with curious interest as he entered or emerged from the water beneath the foundations of the cathedral. He was at work helping to save from ruin one of England's noblest historic buildings, and the successful issue of the undertaking has been celebrated by a thanksgiving service in the cathedral.

For several years the dean and chapter of Winchester had been watching ominous signs, such as cracks, bulgings and settlements, sure harbingers of a collapse of the cathedral. From the interior daylight could be seen through the cracks; the latter grew ever wider and wider. The walls on the south side and the Norman transepts, unequaled for their majestic simplicity, were riven in all directions.

The massive masonry of the Norman builders had from the beginning proved too ponderous for the watery, compressible soil which forms the foundation.

The first hole dug into the foundations revealed the cause of the whole trouble—water—and acting on expert advice, holes were dug in sections through the top soil and chalk and far through the peat. Then it was the work of the diver in his usual diving dress to enter the hole, remove further layers of peat so as to allow the water to rise into the cavity, and then to lay a flooring of cement to prevent the water from sinking back into the gravel. After the imprisoned water had been removed by pumping the cavity was filled up with brickwork in cement. This extended from the floor laid by the diver up to the solid stonework of the cathedral, showing like a roof of rock overhead.

While the work underground was being carried on, patiently and thoroughly, seven anxious years, the cracks in the walls, vaultings and arches of the fabric were welded by the injection of liquid Portland cement from a squirting machine, a process known as grouting, capable of being so manipulated as to fill either a shallow crack or a rent through the thickness of a massive wall.

Every crevice is now being repaired, every flaw and displacement remedied, every trace of instability in the foundations removed, and the cathedral seems to stand as solidly as the strongest building in the kingdom.

MAN'S SIGHT IS RESTORED

Fall Against Door Gives George Morgan Hope for Complete Recovery.

Wilmington, Del.—Becoming totally blind fourteen weeks ago, George M. Morgan Jr., aged twenty-three years, 1351 East Thirteenth street, had his sight restored to him through an accident. About eleven years ago Morgan was struck in one eye with a stone a small boy had thrown at a freight car. His sight was badly affected and last September he went to St. Joseph's hospital in Baltimore to have his eye treated. While sitting in his boarding house fourteen weeks ago he suddenly became totally blind without any warning whatever.

He came to this city to visit his parents on June 29, and he tripped over a rug and fell, his forehead striking a door-jamb with much force. When he arose he found that he could see the daylight and later developments showed that he could see better than before he went to the hospital last yar.

He intends to return to the hospital to continue the treatment, although the physicians told him they did not think he ever would be able to see again. His mother was at market at the time of the accident and could not believe her son's glad declaration when she returned until he told her the color of her hat and dress and described other things in the room.

ECZEMA BEGAN BY ITCHING

Goldsboro, N. C.—"My daughter suffered from eczema. The trouble began in the ears by itching and running water, and later it formed pus and became very offensive. She began to scratch it and it went into sores. When the scabs came off there was a yellowish watery discharge. The outside of the ear was one solid sore. She tried several different remedies but received no relief. She had been troubled with it between one and two years when she finally began using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment.

"She had not made but two treatments when all the scabs came off and the flesh just looked very red and dry. She kept up the treatment four or five weeks and she was entirely cured. It also cured other sores on the children, especially chapped feet on one of the little boys." (Signed) Mrs. W. H. Edgerton, Jan. 24, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

In the Meantime.

There had been a row at recess time, and Miss Martin had called in all of the pupils, and had a sort of a school court, which lasted until time for school to be dismissed. The trouble had started with some of the older boys in a misunderstanding over a game. After hearing both sides of the question, she decided proper punishment for the combatants, and told them to remain in their seats after the others had gone home. She remembered something she wanted to say to a little boy who did not take part in the affray, and she turned to him and said:

"No, in the meantime, Guy—"

"I wasn't in it, Miss Martin," Guy interrupted hastily.

"Wasn't in what?" asked Miss Martin.

"Why, in the mean time," said the eight-year-old. — Mack's National Monthly.

Illiteracy in Germany.

According to the latest official reports, only three persons out of 10,000 in Germany are unable to read or write, while the proportion of illiteracy in Great Britain is 150 per 10,000, as against 770 per 10,000 in the United States. These figures are based on a comparison of illiteracy among some of the leading nations which has just been made and issued for free distribution by the United States Bureau of Education.

More Time Needed.

"You must get three weeks vacation this year."

"Why?"

"Two weeks aren't enough."

"They're all I can get."

"I don't care. You've got to have three. Last year I had to come home with two new dresses that I hadn't had time to wear."

WERE NOT AT ALL DIVERTING

Serious-Minded Quaker Saw Nothing to Smile at in the Lighter Poems of Whittier.

The late Gertrude Whittier Cartland, cousin of Whittier, the Quaker poet, presented an ideal picture of the saintly aged Quakeress. Her sweet, serene face, framed in its tight little bonnet, seemed to shine with clear, spiritual radiance; to hear her recite, in a voice of tranquil music, the hymns and graver poems of her famous relative was always delightful.

But she did not leave her cousin's lively sense of humor; and it was hard to tell whether this lack lessened or increased the effect, when in exactly the same grave, even tones, she occasionally read aloud some of the verse that he wrote, not for publication, but for the pleasure of his intimate circle. That was always light, frequently gay, sometimes fairly rollicking.

Her admiration for the writer made her try very hard to appreciate his fun; and she thought she did so; yet mirth seemed always as alien to her tongue as a red rosette pinned upon her dove-gray shoulder-shawl would have been to her costume. This incongruity was felt, doubtless, by another Friend, of even more serious mind than she, who once said to her reprovingly:

"The verses are harmless, and I perceive they are intended to be diverting; but they do not divert me, Gertrude, and I do not think they really divert thee. Be honest with thyself; if thee read them and did not know thy cousin Greenleaf wrote them, would thee not consider them extremely silly? Thee knows I mean no affront, and greatly admire thy cousin Greenleaf. Surely he is a great poet; but a great poet may sometimes write such silly stuff. And surely this time thy cousin has done it. Reflect and thee will agree with me."

She reflected—on the necessity of care in selecting an audience for a joke.—Youth's Companion.

What He Bought.

A Syracuse business man living in one of the suburbs decided to give up his spacious back yards to the raising of currants as a profitable side issue. So, wishing to absorb all the information he could acquire on the subject of the currant industry, he went down town one Saturday afternoon recently and returned with his arms full of books.

"Well, Teddy," inquired his enthusiastic spouse, as he dumped the volumes on the table, "did you succeed in getting what you wanted?"

"Sure, I did!" he replied, proudly pointing to the books. "I bought a whole year's edition of a standard work on current literature."—Exchange.

Hot Weather Drink.

Philip Hale, one of Boston's latter-day philosophers, recommends barley water as a more sensible drink for hot weather than "ice-cold" blends of waters, sirups, acids, gulped at the marble fountains. Mr. Hale's recipe for his favorite tipple is as follows:

"For three pints of water you will require a teacupful and a half of well washed pearl barley, four lumps of sugar and the thin rind and juice of one lemon. Pour boiling water over it, cover with a saucer and let it stand till cold; then strain again and again till clear, and pour into a jug."

A buttermilk fan adds:

"Then set the jug in a cool place and forget it."

Wanted Minute Evidence.

Orfia, the celebrated doctor, being examined as an "expert" on a capital trial, was asked by the president whether he could tell what quantity of arsenic was requisite to kill a fly. The doctor replied:—

"Certainly, M. le President. But I must know beforehand the age of the fly, its sex, its temperament, its condition and habit of body, whether married or single, widow or spinster, widower or bachelor. When satisfied on these points I can answer your question."

Why do not those who wish to e councilmen let the fact be nown? Are they ashamed of eir aspirations or is it that they ish to sneak in on a day's notice?

The refusal of a right-of-way r a telephone line MAY prove a oomerang that will do us much arm. A railroad is to be built by e same parties who requested e telephone right-of-way. Will the treatment they receiv- d in the first matter tend to kin- e their love for Clanton? We ar not.

This being a democratic year—r none are so foolish as to even ope for the election of Mr. Taft, emocrats around these diggings hould become alert. There are any good things in store for em when Mr. Wilson goes into ffice—as surely he will. Just think of the many lucrative ppointments that will come this ay when democracy sits enthron- d in the White House! Isn't it enough to make you ac- ve, energetic, responsive?

Chilton, tho' she needs compaign oney herself, should not be nig- ardly in contributing to the na- ional campaign fund. Wilson in e White House will be worth uch to us. Then we ought to ive liberally anyway, its our du- y to the party. The Press will gladly receive nd forward to Committeeman elks any amount contributed for nis worthy cause. Who will be irst?

Mr. Roosevelt defines his atti- ude and the attitude of his new arty toward the negro in a letter o Julian Harris of Atlanta, Ga. Boiled down, the mass of ver- iage amounts simply to this: Mr. oosevelt is for the negro in the orth and he doesn't care a rap bout the negro in the South. He is for the negro where the he negro can vote, and he is gainst the negro where the negro s practically debarred from voting. He is for the negro with genu- ne enthusiasm in the states where he negro can help him. He is gainst the negro in those states here it is the negro who needs he help. He is an old-time war republican n Indiana and Illinois and he is a Lily-White republican in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. He wants negro delegates in the orthcoming hand-picked conven- ion from the Northern states. He oesn't want negro delegates from he Southern states. In justification of this two-faced ttitude, he points to and laments what he terms the failure of the epublicans for forty-five years to uild up a party in the South on egro votes alone. There we have it—the whole oosevelt ian theory of political orals. Principle, the responsi- ilities left by the war are nothing. he republicans are not strong in he South. Therefore they are rong! In this, as in every other issue resented, Roosevelt has trimmed is sails to catch every favoring reeze. He has decided it by the rand principle of political expe- iency, as he sees fit. The board of Registrars in and for Chilton County, Alabama will meet at the court house in Clanton, Alabama, on August 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17, 1912, for the purpose of purging the registration lists. All parties interested will take notice accordingly.

Board of Registrars, Chilton Co.

respond. No regard is paid to the fact that on its own lines in the state of Georgia, this company is allowed by statute much higher rates than it charges in Alabama. No allowance is made for the fact that the average of all rates voluntarily charged by this company in this state are lower than the average of all statutory rates on all roads in the state of Georgia. But the whole case is attempted to be supported by a comparison with two or three short lines, where the density of traffic is nearly twice as great as it is on the Louisville and Nashville lines in this state, and where operating conditions are bet ter.

Neither the Atlanta and West Point railroad nor the Western and Atlantic railroad operate any branch lines. They operate through lines, or rather sections of through lines, which have an immense volume of through business of a highly profitable character. It is possible to operate them both far more economically than it is possible to operate the Louisville and Nashville lines in Alabama, and the average returns per mile, both gross and net, are far greater. This is demonstrated by the following official statement:

STATEMENT 1909.

L. & N. and S. & N. A., gross earnings per mile of line, $9,249.84; net earnings per mile of line, $2,731.12.

A. & W. P. gross earnings per mile of line $10,376.57; net earnings per mile of line, $2,213.80.

W. & A. gross earnings per mile of line $20,403.46; net earnings per mile of line $5,113.12.

STATEMENT 1910.

L. & N. and S. & N. A., gross earnings per mile of line $10,345.24; net earnings per mile of line $3,116.89.

A. & W. P. gross earnings per mile of line, $11,723.21; net earnings per mile of line $3,846.27.

W. & A. gross earnings per mile of line, $20,671.91; net earnings per mile of line, $7,223.46.

STATEMENT 1911.

L. & N. and S. & N. A. gross earnings per mile of line, $10,728.89; net earnings per mile of line, $2,825.71.

A. & W. P. gross earnings per mile of line $12,992.91; net earnings per mile of line $4,034.30.

W. & A. gross earnings per mile of line, $21,881.77; net earnings per mile of line, $7,057.41.

From this it will be seen that the Western and Atlantic returns, both gross and net, are at least double that of this company, while the Atlanta and West Point are materially higher. Moreover the cost of construction is much greater per mile of line for this company than either of the companies named especially the Atlanta and West Point.

BRANCH LINES.

The Louisville and Nashville railroad in Alabama is not composed of one through line; its rates are not confined to its through lines, in which its traffic is dense. It has pursued the policy of giving precisely the same rates on its branch lines, where revenue is light, as on its main lines, where revenue is dense, and the statutes in controversy have done the same. In 1884, it began its policy of building branch lines for the purpose of improving its business and doing its share in the general development. It built the Birmingham Mineral railroad at an aggregate cost to this time of over four million dollars; it purchased, reconstructed and completed the Alabama Mineral railroad at a cost of upwards of three million dollars; it purchased the B. S. & N O; and rebuilt and extended it from Selma to Myrtlewood at a heavy cost; it rebuilt and extended the Southern Alabama from Selma to Flomaton; it built the Alabama and Florida from Georgiana through the Wiregrass; it purchased and rebuilt the Bay Minette and Fort Morgan; it has recently constructed the Tuscaloosa Mineral and will soon have it ready for operation. It is making other extensions.

AMOUNT OF CAPITAL INVESTED

In order to enable it to handle its traffic it has already completed 4 miles of second track and has let contracts calling for additional expenditures for this purpose of upward of $5,500,000. The cost of reconstruction and equipment of the South and North Alabama railroad would exceed $100,000 per mile. Its total expenses since 1884 for extensions branch lines and second track in this state have cost exceeding $30,000,000, and, together with those now authorized will reach a total of approximately $40,000,000—this in addition to its main line investments. Its total investment in Alabama, including the South and North Alabama railroad, could not be reproduced at this time for $60,000,000. Many of these branch lines have been unprofitable from the beginning; several of them have not earned operating expenses; none of them have earned from all business interest upon the bonded debt, in addition to operating expenses. The Southern Alabama, the Alabama and Florida, the Bay Minette and Fort Morgan, as late as 1911, show an actual loss in operation from all business. The Alabama Mineral shows a profit of about one-half of 1 per cent. The South and North Alabama railroad from 1872 until 1907 showed a deficit in operating expenses and interest on its bonds of over $5,000,000. Under all these curcumstances it is clear to any fairly disposed person that conditions on the Louisville and Nashville system in Alabama cannot justly be compared with the Atlanta and West Point and Western and Atlantic lines in the state of Georgia.

Complaint is made that the method of arriving at the cost of doing intrastate business in the suits lately tried is arbitrary and uncertain, and is determined upon theoretical lines. It is admitted that the ascertainment of the cost of doing intrastate business, as separated from the cost of doing all business, is uncertain and difficult; in fact it is impossible of ascertainment with accuracy. It can only be estimated; in the very nature of things, it can never be positively determined, but that it costs largely more to carry a dollar in intrastate business than in interstate business at the present rates is capable of certain, easy and definite ascertainment. The only question is in determining how much more.

RETURNS FROM ALL BUSINESS ON TAX VALUES.

But, waiving all question of the cost of doing intrastate business, waiving all question of the state's want of authority over the intrastate busi-

Morning Sickness

Many women suffer this misery. It makes its appearance so regularly that they learn to expect it and arrange their household work accordingly. Few women think of seeking medical help to get rid of it for good. If women only knew of the power and effectiveness of Dr. Simmons Squaw Vine Wine they would not be without it a moment longer than it would take to get it from the drug store. It is a splendid remedy for all nausea or sickness of the stomach. The first dose settles the stomach and makes the patient feel better. Additional doses act on the female generative system, strengthening weakened organs, regulating the habits, restoring tone and strength in every part of the body. It is essentially a woman's remedy prepared expressly to meet the need of women who suffer from the ailments common to their sex.

This has all been placed since April 1st, and I have written several more these, whose names do not appear above, as their applications and examinations are now under consideration by the Com . You will remember I advertised this Policy some time ago, and I wish now to repeat the attractive feature in these Policies again. First the cost is as cheap, and a little ch eaper, than many other le Old Line Companies. Second you get every fifth year a very attractive dividend. Third, these Policies have a disability clause: which guarantees if you become totally disabled from injury or e of any kind, you will never have to pay any longer, but your Policy will mature, as though you were paying the premiums yourself in cash, and you would receive the same benefits. This clause the face of the policy. There are other good features in this fine policy too nnmerous to mention, but if you will call at my office I will take pleasure in showing them to you. Again, when you buy Policy you are patronizing a home man who will appreciate your business, and whose office is open and welcome for your use at any time. You will also be patronizing a home Company, the Old nteer State Life Insurance Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the oldest Southern Life Insurance Companies, which sounds good to us, and in patronizing a home man and a Southern Com- , you are keeping the money at home, where it is made and where it belongs. Now a word to the skeptical along this line, I feel that it is my duty to take life insurance for the protection of my family, and ing others to do the same, is one of the many ways to secure them. Today is here, yesterday is gone, and tomorrow may never come. I am at your service, and my whole soul is in the work, and patronage will, I assure you, be greatly appreciated. You should investigate my Accident and Health Policy, my Fire and Tornado Policy, my combination Automobile Policy, and Bond Making.

Commissioners Court was in session the first three working days of the week attending to routine business and passing accounts against the county. It was interesting to note that quite a number of gentlemen who were clamoring a few weeks ago for a return to the "old ante-bellum" road system were besieging the Court to donate county money for their particular roads. Strange, isn't it? But of that and the other work of the Court more will be said next week.

Miss Fannie Mae Haynes of Sandy Ridge, who has been on an extended visit to Senator and Mrs. T. A. Curry, left Monday morning for her home, much to the regret of her many friends here. Miss Haynes is a winsome beauty of a decidedly blonde type and that she is extremely popular was attested by the numerous entertainments arranged in her honor while here. More than one poor heart is fluttering in agony because of her departure.

Southern.

Startling disclosures followed a rigid investigation into the cause and circumstances of the explosion of an infernal machine in the High Point, N. C., office of the Southern Express company, from which Manager W. M. Busbee is in a critical condition, and the cashier is suffering from serious burns. From revelations made by a society girl the chief of police admits that he is searching for a young Thomasville business man. Until an arrest is made, however, officials decline to reveal names, though it is stated it had been learned the machine was intended for a society girl.

A disastrous fire broke out in Culpepper, a Virginia town of 3,000 inhabitants. A telephone message from a neighboring town said that all the wires were down to Culpepper, and that the latest report from there stated that the fire was sweeping through the entire business section of the town. The latest message from Culpepper came from a railroad operator, who said that the fire was driving him from his key. He stated that the flames were then under control, but that practically the entire business district had been wiped out.

The first legal electrocution in South Carolina took place at the state penitentiary in Columbia, where William Reed, a negro, convicted of a felony, paid the penalty of his crime. The bill providing for the installation of an electric chair was passed at the last session of the legislature after a hard fight and received the signature of Governor Blease. The chair used for the execution is of the same make as the one in which Henry Clay Beattie, the Virginia wife slayer, was executed.

The battleship Nebraska has arrived at Rockport, Mass., after having been damaged slightly by running on an uncharted shoal near Point Judith. The Nebraska will go to Boston to dry dock for a thorough examination. The battleship went on the shoal on even keel, and scraped over several rocks.

The Panama canal bill, when it passed the senate, contained provisions which amend the Sherman anti-trust law and the law creating the interstate commerce commission, and is beyond all odds the most important piece of legislation which has passed either house this session. British ship owners, however, are indignant at the senate's action.

The national palace of Haiti, at Port-au-Prince, was blown up by a powder explosion and burned to the ground. The president of the republic, Gen. Cincinnatus Leconte, was killed. Members of his family, who were awakened by the terrific shock, found themselves almost surrounded by flames, but managed to make their way to safety.

Bernard C. Murray, son of former fire commissioner of Hartford, Conn., has confessed to having set fire to thirty hotels and house buildings in Connecticut and western Massachusetss during the past four months. While no lives were lost, in many fires there were hundreds of persons, a majority of them hotel guests, whose lives were imperiled, and the total property loss is estimated to be over $250,000. At the time of the alleged confession Murray was serving a sentence of thirty days on a charge of larceny.

Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey, in the presence of several thousand friends and admirers from many states, accepted the Democratic nomination for president of the United States. The speech of notification was made by Senator-elect Ollie James of Kentucky. Governor Marshall of Indiana, the Democratic nominee for vice president, was present.

Ira Haworth, known as the "grandfather of the Republican party in Illinois, and a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, died at a Kansas City, Mo., hospital, a charity patient. He was one of the six men who attended the first Republican meeting in Illinois in 1856 and later was one of the delegates tho voted for the nomination of Lincoln for president.

In the Missouri primary election five state tickets—Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, Socialist and Socialist Labor—were in the field. Five Democrats and three Republicans were candidates for governor.

Rufus L. Perry, a negro lawyer of Brooklyn, has embraced the Jewish religion.

The failure of the sardine schools to visit the coast of Maine in their accustomed number this year has resulted in a shortage of the canning supply which threatens to send up the price of the fish for the year 1913. Many are out of employment.

Julius Rosenfeld of Chicago, Ill., has made birthday gifts amounting to $687,500. Charity and education received the entire sum. Mr. Rosenwald, who is a leading merchant, divided the total into parts. Half a million dollars was split evenly by him between the University of Chicago and the Associated Jewish Charities. Among the other contributions, one was unique, $50,000 to endow a country club "which will furnish a comfortable resort for week-ends and philanthropic and social work."

The interruption of telegraphic communication makes it very difficult to obtain in Constantinople, Turkey, accurate details of the disastrous seismis disturbances which occurred on both sides of the Dardanelles. No accurate figures of the number of victims can be tabulated, though some estimates places the death list at 1,000 and the injured from 5,000 to 6,000. Everywhere in the stricken zone there is terrible want and distress. Appeals for doctors and help are constantly being received at Constantinople.

Mrs. Kate Ferrell, widow of John Ferrell, a rescue worker of the United States bureau of mines, who lost his life several months ago in an attempt to save others, at the Spring Valley, Pa., mine disaster, has been forwarded a cheque for $1,080 by the government.

Several years ago in Petersburg, Ind., a tramp appeared at the kitchen in which Maggie Drain was working and asked for something to eat. The family in which she was employed as a servant protested, but she gave the man his breakfast, and an hour later he returned with a paper which he handed to her, charging her to keep it. It proved to be a document giving to the girl the property of Marshall McMurran at his death. The will has been probated, and Miss Drain will get $40,000.

The Turkish gendarmes in the garrison at Okhrida, Albania, mutinied, and their commander, General Djemalrey, declared war in the name of the Young Turks against the present government. The commandant gave notice that he would lead an army against Constantinople, and issued a proclamation calling upon all loyal Young Turks to join his standard. The rebels will attempt to force the abdication of the present sultan, who took the throne when the Young Turks rose up against Abdul Hamid's regime.

The committee of nine apointed by the New York City board of aldermen to investigate the alleged alliance between the police and lawbreakers began takiig steps to make a sweeping probe. Washington.

The United States government is to become a modern competitor of the Pied Piper of Hamlin as an exterminator of rats. But the magic of the Pied Piper flute is to be displaced by the most improved, modern, double-action, steel-jawed rat trap that the American inventive genius can furnish. Through Surgeon General Blue of the public health and marine hospital service, the government has asked for demonstrations of rat traps. The government wants traps to exterminate rodents which carry bubonic plague.

More than a half-million dollars of old paper money washed and ironed to the crispness of new in the Federal government's currency laundry will be placed in circulation. This lot will represent Uncle Sam's first job as a laundryman. For weeks the treasury department has ben cleaning and reviving dirty old notes by the washing machine perfected in the bureau of engraving and printing. Secretary MacVeagh stamped the venture a success and the laundry will be run in full swing.

More than $8,000 damage was done to crops in the South in July by the army worms, according to unofficial estimates of the department of agriculture. Whether the season's second brood of the insects, appearing in South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia and other states, will increase this loss is of much concern to government experts. All the means at the department's disposal are being used to meet the emergency. There are army worms at some places half a foot deep on railroad tracks.

By a vote of 44 to 11, the senate refused to strike from the Panama canal bill the provision exempting American ships from payment of tolls for passage through the Panama canal. The defeat of the Burton amendment to strike out the discrimination in favor of American ships was the senate's defiant answer to the protest of the British government against the legislation. It was this clause of the bill which led Great Britain to send a formal protest to the state department.

A constitutional amendment by Representative LaFollette of Washington for the election of the president and vice president by direct votes of the people is provided in a resolution introduced in the house. It provides that candidates for these offices must be chosen in primary elections and that the successful candidates shall have a majority of all the votes cast. If this fails on a first election a second election is to be held on the last Thursday of each November thereafter. The resolution also says hereafter that the last Wednesday in each September

GAS EXPLOSION AT COREY

Twenty-Seven Men Injured, Some Seriously, But None Fatally—Was Spectacular Scene.

Birmingham.—An explosion of gas from one of the big mains at the by-product plant of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company at Corey resulted in the injury of 27 men, some seriously, but none fatally. The force of the explosion was heard for a mile around, and the burning gas flashed high into the air.

The exact cause of the explosion is unknown, but it is supposed to have resulted from a pocket of gas which had accumulated in the pipe. Foreman Tchudy was unable to account for the ignition of the gas upon its escape, though one of the theories advanced was that the hot gas under high pressure may have been ignited by friction when it struck the cold air.

The explosion was very spectacular, and the flames shot more than 100 feet in the air.

Selma.—At a meeting of the members of Camp Jones, United Confederate veterans, October 16 and 17 were selected as the days upon which would be held the annual reunion of the Confederate veterans of Alabama. The members of the local camp assisted by the members of the local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will at once begin preparations of making the approaching reunion one of the most delightful in the history of the state organization. It is expected that nearly 2,000 veterans will attend the gathering this year and their stay in Selma will be made as pleasant and delightful as possible.

Birmingham.—That Governor O'Neal has no right to deny the fairs of the state the appropriation made them by the legislature and that in so doing he will be overstepping the bounds of his authority is the statement of Representative Burton, of LaFayette, Chambers county, while here. "The bill passed by the legislature appropriating $20,000 to the fairs of the state," said Representative Burton, "was the only one passed at that session which did not have some string tied to it, but it was passed giving, undeniably and unrestrictedly $20,000 per year to the fairs of the state and they should have it."

Anniston.—The committee appointed for the purpose have prepared and presented to President O. L. Stewart a program for the convention of the Pythians of the First district, which will be held in Oxford August 21. The convention, which will be the eleventh semi-annual one, promises to be largely attended. All the lodges in the district will be represented.

Greenville. — The Butler county borrd of commissioners met at the court house and opened bids for the building of the Greenville and Forest Home Road. The road is to be a model state highway. The contract was let to a contractor of Montgomery. Work will be begun within 30 days.

BIG EARTHQUAKE HUNDREDS DEAD

MANY VILLAGES ON SEA OF MARMORA ARE WIPED OUT.

FIRE FOLLOWS THE SHOCK

Warships Go To Rescue, But Violent Sea Prevents Landing—Many Injured.

Constantinople.—Reports here indicate that the great earthquake which shook a large part of Turkey resulted in much heavier loss of life than at first stated. The newspapers estimate the number of victim at 1,000 killed, while the injured are said to number from 5,000 to 6,000.

Constantinople, Turkey. — Earthquake shocks that smote villages on the Sea of Marmora killed or wounded many of the inhabitants. Many of the quake victims who were not killed outright have been brought here for treatment.

Details of the earthquake, which are coming in slowly owing to interruption of wires, indicate that the disturbance was widespread. Several hundred persons have been killed, thousands are homeless and outbreaks of fire have occurred in many towns and villages.

The entire district between Constantinople and Adrianople felt the shock severely. Fugitives from Myriophito report 300 killed and 600 injured. The town still was burning when they left. Ganos Hora has been wiped out, eight persons being killed and 30 wounded. The wrecked buildings took fire and most of them were destroyed. Shar-Koi was completely destroyed and two nearby villages were engulfed. Adranople suffered little damage, but Thorlu was partly destroyed by the quake and fire.

The center of the disturbances appears to have been in the region of the Dardanelles. Eye witnesses from that section give harrowing accounts of the havoc wrought. The majority of the houses in Gallipoli are in ruins and the people are camping in the fields. Tchanak-Kalessi are in equally as bad a plight, but the loss of life in these towns is small, although many were injured.

Warships anchored in the Dardanelles felt the sock severely. It was first attributed to Italian torpedo boats. The captain of the American steamer Virginia reports that the lighthouse at Ganos Hora in the sea of Marmora has disappeared, and that the villages in the surrounding country are in flames. He was unable to anchor and render assistance owing to the violent movement of the sea.

The inhabitants of several villages are homeless and without food. A special steamer has been chartered and a torpedo boat has been ordered to go to their relief.

The town of Tchanak-Kalessi, which has about 10,000 inhabitants, is on the Asia Minor side of the Dardanelles, is the most affected.

Study Beef Shortage.

Chicago.—Agents of the department of commerce and labor have begun a study of conditions in the Chicago cattle market with a view of solving the impending problem in the shortage of beef cattle. The principal issue facing the investigation is how the law of supply and demand works in the cattle market. The agents will gather information from current receipts to determine whether the record price of $10.25 per 100 pounds for beef on the hoof recently paid at the stock yards warrants an inquisition or is justified by the receipts.

CROP REPORTS ARE VERY ENCOURAGING

Improvement in Iron and Steel With Large Orders.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade and crop reports, barring corn, are even more encouraging than heretofore, improvement in trade has become more widespread, profits and demand for iron and steel are growing, collections are less difficult to make, money is firmer and finally, feeling throughout the surplus grain crop producing regions is better than it has been for several years.

Jobbers of dry goods, thanks to the presence of out-of-town buyers, have done an increased business. Trade in staple dress goods in various lines of cotton goods are being held at value by mill agents and there seems to have been a rather large demand for bleached goods. In short, buyers appear to be actuated by fears of an understocked market.

In iron and steel further improvement is manifested. Mill operations are active, the railways have ordered about 200,000 tons of rails for next year's delivery and the structural steel trade faces exceptionally large orders.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending August 8 were 221, against 224 last week, 208 in the like week of 1911, 231 in 1910, 219 in 1909 and 249 in 1908. Business failures in Canada for the week, 22 in number, contrast with 25 last week and 40 in the corresponding week last year.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending August 8 aggregate 2,740,125 bushels, against 2,494,657 last week and 2,560,967 this week last year. For the six weeks ending August 8 exports are 14,765,141 bushels, against 13,221,342 in the corresponding period last year.

Corn exports for the week are 92,395 bushels, against 77,842 last week, and 635,781 in 1911. For the six weeks ending August 8 corn exports are 523,544 bushels, against 3,717,089 last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"The expansion in iron and steel continues with activity, especially marked in finished lines and with additional prices.

Mills are crowded with orders, while prominent rail manufacturers are booked up to next February. All equipment companies are busy while steel foundries are working at a higher rate than in many months. Greater activity apears in pig iron and steady though moderate price advances are noted. Considerable inquiries are out for foundry iron for shipment in the first quarter of 1913.

Trading in the dry goods markets shows steady expansion, numerous buyers being present. There is a marked absence of speculation, the enhanced values of cotton goods being entirely due to normal buying and the increased cost of production. Export trade is quiet, but shipments of cotton for the fiscal year just closed exceed those of the previous 12 months by 170,000,000 yards, although only 13,000,000 yards of this amount were due to the added trade, in addition to large customers.

In woolens and worsteds the staple dress goods trade is active at first hands and jobbers report a better business than for some time. Spring lines have been opened and advances are noted, ranging from 7 to 9 per cent.

Footwear manufacturers are busily engaged preparing shipments for August and September delivery. Mail orders are received in liberal volume Aggregate business in shoe leather is in good volume, especially in bottom stock. Supplies are limited in a tannages of sole and union backs are very firm in price.

That One Thing Lacking.

Lady Augusta Gregory, the able and ardent apostle of the modern Irish movement, is fond of telling the following real Irish story:

"It was the wedding day of Pat and Bridget, and they were having a church wedding. It was a grand affair. Pat was dressed with patent leather shoes, white vest and flaming tie. Bridget shone attractively in many colors. The ceremony was over, and the happy pair walked down the aisle, out into the street, where a great crowd greeted them with delight.

"Once seated within the cab, Bridget leaned over to Pat and said, in a loud whisper, 'Och, Pat, if we could only have stood on the sidewalk and watched ourselves pass, wouldn't it have been hivin'?"

Writing under this title in Harper's Weekly, Edward Bayard Moss describes our athletic triumph at Stockholm in the Olympic games. "Some idea of the caliber of the athletes and the competition can be gained from the fact that thirteen new Olympic and nine world's records were established during the games. The victory of Arnold Jackson of Oxford in the 1,500-meter run was the only feature that redeemed England's poor display."

me one said in this coun- anti-democrats or some- populists, and later both re- and populists sailed un- emblems; but since Teddy Taft was a robber and has great party of protection rty which has for so long high tariff to us—what are they going to do? Lately the Union-Banner has had its columns filled with letters telling of the great good what was to come to this county by the election of Taft. Why all at once this awful calm? Does the republican flag float at the masthead of the Union-Banner?

But may be they intend to let the boys vote for either Roosevelt or Taft in a vain endeavor to save the county ticket—not that they care so much for high tariff as we have heard, but that they may attempt to elect a few men to office who, when they were nominated, proclaimed that they were republicans; are they still republicans? May-be so, may-be not.

Democrat.

STILL AT ARMAGEDDON

Mr. Roosevelt is still at Armageddon. He is still battling for the Lord—that is, for a third term. And the spirit of his hysterical followers finds expression in such songs as this:

Follow, follow,
We will follow Roosevelt;
Anywhere, everywhere,
We will follow on.

Follow, follow,
We will follow Roosevelt;
Anywhere he leads us,
We will follow him.

This is one of the most illuminating confessions that have come out of the third-term convention. The delegates are willing to "follow Roosevelt anywhere, everywhere." Their attitude toward him is the attitude of the Russian peasant toward the "Little Father." "Anywhere he leads us, we will follow him." It would be silly if it were not so pathetic.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech yesterday nominating himself for President, was in harmony with the hymn of the convention. He literally led the delegates anywhere and everywhere. A politcal party intrusted with government which undertook to translate the Roosevelt speech into legislation would soon end in an insane asylum. It could be held in control only by a straightjacket.

In justice to Mr. Roosevelt's intelligence, it should be said that this speech was not intended as a programme of government. It was intended as a cunning, demagogic bid for votes. If Mr. Roosevelt were President again he would not undertake to carry out this speech in the form of legislation or administration. He would undertake only enough of it to keep the country seething with agitation and his own name on the front page of the newspapers every morning.

Mr. Roosevelt was President for seven years and six months, and we know from his record what he would do if he were President again. He would seize as much power as possible into his own hands. He would make working alliances with all the corrupt bosses whom he is now denouncing. He would carry on secret relations with corporations whose influence could benefit him politically. He would build a powerful political machine to perpetuate his control of the party. He would denounce everybody who opposed him as a crook and a pirate, and he would have a "perfectly corking time." But he would settle nothing.

We take this speech, therefore, as a measure of the limits that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to go in his quest of votes. He has gathered up everything, vegetable, animal and mineral, and tried to make a political issue out of it. Wherever there was a vote to be had Mr. Roosevelt has driven for it with the unerring precision of a pike dashing for a perch. No form of popular discontent, whether with government or with sandy soil or with housework, has escaped him. And the burden of his argument is I—I—I—I. I alone am honest. I alone am sincere. I alone am wise. I alone am efficient. I alone can do things. I alone am fit to govern.

No census of fools has ever been taken in this country, but thanks to Mr. Roosevelt's personally conducted third-term party, we are in a fair way to have them all counted.—New York World.

CITY TICKET ANNOUNCED

The City Council met in extraordinary session last Saturday night and ordered an election for City officers to be held on the third Monday (16th) of September—the day set by law for all municipal elections.

Since the order of the Council, the following ticket has been launched. We are informed that all the gentlemen named have agreed, in case of election to accept the offices to which they are elected and to give some time and attention to city affairs. The ticket follows:

For Mayor—J. E. Gowan.

For Aldermen—E. M. Pinckard, J. C. Jones, M. L. White, J. E. Robinson; Sr., P. I. Hopkins.

It has been rumored on the streets that in case the above ticket is clected certain other city officials will be removed and some promoted.

Whether this is true or not, could not be ascertained. The Press man did not interview a single candidate on the proposition, but he understands that all concerned have stated that no official who has discharged his duty properly would be removed to make place for another.

WILSON AND MARSHALL CLUB

HON. LEON M'CORD TO ADDRESS ASSEMBLY.

According to arrangements by those having the matter in charge, a call for the organization of a "Wilson & Marshall" club has been promulgated for next Friday night at the Court House. A number of signatures have been secured, but not one-tenth of the democrats of the city have been approached by those who have the lists in hand.

Whether you have been requested to sign your name or not, you are earnestly requested to be present and assist in the organization. Do not let the little matter of not having been asked to sign a paper deter you from coming out and helping to put Wilson and Marshall across.

This is a democratic year and every one is expected to do his full duty without having a formal request to do so.

By all means be present at the organization of the Club. Hon. Leon McCord of Montgomery has been invited to be present and has accepted the invitation. He is a speaker of rare ability and will more than repay you for your presence at the meeting. Don't forget the time and place.

RIDERVILLE

Work has begun in earnest on the new railroad of the E. E. Jackson Lumber Co. to their timber, several miles away. They hope to have it completed by Jan. 1st.

Mrs. W. T. Peeples is at home again, after a pleasant visit to relatives in Selma.

Mrs. C. D. Norris, with her little daughter Margaret, have gone to Coden to spend the remainder of the heated term. Mr. Norris will join them later, and spend his vacation there.

Mr. J. B. Rider, Vice President E. E. Jackson Lumber Co., and General Manager of the plant at this place, left this week for Baltimore, New York and other Eastern points. He expects to make the trip in his automobile. Mr. Fulmer is driving the car; they will be gone several weeks.

Mrs. C. M. Turner has as her guest this week, Mrs. Johnson, of Ensley Alabama.

Misses Xyr and Elaine Reynolds are on a visit to their sister, Mrs. Moore of Centreville, Ala.

Mrs. R. C. Reynolds sustained a very serious injury Friday evening while driving to church, in company with her mother and little sister; her horse became frightened at a negro riding a bicycle, ran away, throwing Mrs. Reynolds out, breaking her limb just above the knee. The others were hurt, but not seriously, however.

INFORMATION INCORRECT

By some error, for which the editor cannot account, the Press announced some weeks since that Miss Sartor had been selected to head the music department of Clanton Academy. The Editor thought his information authentic and so reported it; this, however, proved not to be the case and the announcement has perhaps done Miss Sartor an injustice, for which the Press is deeply regretful. As a matter of fact the music teacher has not yet been decided upon but the selection of an instructress will be undertaken in the near future. Upon whomsoever the selection may fall there is no doubt the board will do what it considers its full duty to the school and its patrons.

PROF. PICKENS

Last week just after the Press had been printed and delivered to its subscribers there entered the office a handsome, smooth faced young gentleman who introduced himself to the editor as Prof. J. J. Pickens, the new principal of Clanton Academy. He extended his hand in a hearty hand grasp which showed him to be a warm, generous hearted gentleman; his conversation and manner were such that it took but a moment to decide that was a gentleman of high moral character and noble impulses.

Since that first visit, Prof. Pickens has made the Press offices several visits and on each occasion we have learned to like him more and more. That he will make Clanton Academy a fine principal, the town a most desirable citizen and the county an educator of whom it may well be proud is the verdict of the Press. Clanton extends to the new principal of her school a most hearty welcome.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Maitland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping. Fate brings all the actors together. Newbold returns from hunting game and sees a man near the hut. It is James Armstrong, who has at last located the missing girl, and he enters the cabin. Armstrong pleads his love for Enid, but she reminds him of his affection for Newbold's wife. He grows insulting and Enid orders him from her presence. Newbold returns opportunely.

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued.)

Armstrong confronted Newbold therefore, lustful of battles; he yearned to leap upon him, his fingers itched to grasp him, then trembled slightly as he rubbed them nervously against his thumbs; his face protruded a little, his eyes narrowed.

"My name is Armstrong," he said, determined to precipitate the issue without further delay and flinging the words at the other in a tone of hectoring defiance which, however strange to say, did not seem to effect Newbold in any perceptible degree.

The name was an illumination to him, though not at all in the way the speaker had fancied; the recollection of it was the one fact concerning her that rankled in the solitary's mind. He had often wanted to ask Enid Maitland what she had meant by that chance allusion to Armstrong which she had made in the beginning of their acquaintance, but he had refrained. At first he had no right to question her; there could be no natural end to their affections; and latterly when their hearts had been disclosed to each other in the wild, tempestuous, passionate scenes of the last two or three days, he had had things of greater moment to engage his attention, subjects of more importance to discuss with her.

He had for the time being forgotten Armstrong and he had not before known what jealousy was until he had entered that room. To have seen her with any man would have given him acute pain, perhaps just because he had been so long withdrawn from human society, but to see her with this man who flashed instantly into his recollection upon the utterance of his name was an added exasperation.

Newbold turned to the woman to whom indeed he had addressed his question in the first place, and there was something in his movement which bespoke a galling almost contemptuous obliviousness to the presence of the other man which was indeed hard for him to bear.

Hate begets hate. He was quite conscious of Armstrong's antagonism, which was entirely undisguised and open and which was growing greater with every passing moment. The score against Newbold was running up in the mind of his visitor.

"Ah," coolly said the owner of the cabin to the first of his two guests, "I do remember you did mention that name the first day you spent here. Is he a—a friend of yours?"

"Not now," answered Enid Maitland.

She too was in a strange state of perturbation on account of the dilemma in which she found herself involved. She was determined not to betray the unconscious confidence of the dead. She hoped fervently that Newbold would not recognize Armstrong as the man of the locket, but if he did she was resolute that he should not also be recognized as the man of the letters, at least not by her. Newbold was ignorant of the existence of those letters and she did not intend that he should be enlightened so far as she could prevent it. But she was keen enough to see that the first recognition would be inevitable; she even admitted the fact that Armstrong would probably precipitate it himself. Well, no human soul, not even their writer, knew that she had destroyed them, she had determined to do so at the first convenient opportunity. Before that, however, she intended to show them not to Newbold but to Armstrong, to disclose his perfidy, to convict him of the falsehood he had told her and to justify herself even in his eyes for the action she had taken.

Mingled with all these quick reflections was a deadly fear. She was quick to perceive the hatred Armstrong bore on the one hand because of the old love affair, the long cherished grudge breaking into sudden life; on the other she realized that her own failure to come to Armstrong's hands and her love for Newbold, which she neither could nor had any desire to conceal, and the cumulation of these passionate antagonisms not in deed. Nothing could wrest that secret from her. She had been infected by Newbold's quixotic ideas, the contagion of his perversion of common sense had fastened itself upon her. She would not have been human either if she had not experienced a thrill of pride and joy at the possibility that in some way, of which she yet swore she would not be the instrument blind or otherwise, the facts might be disclosed which would enable Newbold to claim her openly and honorably, without hesitation before or remorse after, as his wife. This fascinating flash of expectant, hopeful feeling she thought unworthy of her and strove to fight it down, but with manifest impossibility.

It has taken time to set these things down; to speak or to write is a slow process, and the ratio between outward expressions and inward is as great as that between light and sound. Questions and answers between these three followed as swiftly as thrust and parry between accomplished swordsmen, and would only make him the more desperate.

Whether Newbold found out Armstrong's connection with his past love, there was sufficient provocation in the present to evoke all the oppugnation and resentment of his nature. Enid felt as she might if the puncheons of the floor had been sticks of dynamite with active detonations in every heel that pressed them; as if the slightest movement on the part of any one would bring about an explosion.

The tensity of the situation was bewildering to her. It had come upon her with such startling force; the unexpected arrival of Armstrong, of all the men on earth the one who ought not to be there, and then the equally startling arrival of Newbold, of whom perhaps the same might have been said. If Newbold had only gone on, if he had not come back, if she had been rescued by her uncle or old Kirkby—But "ifs" were idle, she had to face the present situation to which she was utterly unequal.

She had entirely repudiated Armstrong, that was one sure point; she knew how guilty he had been toward Newbold's wife, that was another; she realized how he had deceived her, that was the third. These eliminated the man from her affections, but it is one thing to thrust a man out of your heart and another to thrust him out of your life; he was still there. And by no means the sport of blind fate Armstrong intended to have something to say as to the course of events, to use his own powers to determine the issue.

Of but one thing beside her hatred for Armstrong was Enid Maitland absolutely certain; she would never disclose to the man she loved the fact that the woman, the memory of whose supposed passion he cherished, had been unfaithful to him in heart if yet between each demand and reply they had time to entertain these swift thoughts—as the drowning compass life experiences in seconds!

"I may not be her friend," said Armstrong steadily, "but she left me in these mountains a month ago with more than a half way promise to marry me, and I have sought her through the snows to claim the fulfillment."

"You never told me that," exclaimed Newbold sternly and again addressing the woman rather than the man.

"There was nothing to tell," she answered quickly. "I was a young girl, heart free; I liked this man, perhaps because he was so different from those to whom I had been accustomed, and when he pressed his suit upon me, I told him the truth. I did not love him, I did not know whether I might grow to care for him or not; if I did, I should marry him and if I did not no power on earth could make me. And now—I hate him!" She flung the words at him savagely.

Armstrong was beside himself with fury at her words, and Newbold's cool indifference to him personally was unendurable. In battle such as he waged he had the mistaken idea that anything was fair. He could not really tell whether it was love of woman or hate of man that was most dominant; he saw at once the state of affairs between the two. He could hurt the man and the woman with one statement; what might be its ulterior effect he did not stop to consider, perhaps if he had he would not then have cared greatly. He realized anyway that since Newbold's arrival his chance with Enid was gone; perhaps whether Newbold were alive or dead it was gone forever; although Armstrong did not think that, he was not capable of thinking very far into the future in his then condition, the present bulked too large for that.

"I did not think after that kiss in the road that you would go back on me this way, Enid," he said quickly.

"The kiss in the road," cried Newbold staring again at the woman.

"You coward," repeated she, with one swift envenomed glance at the other man, and then she turned to her lover. She laid her hand upon his arm, she lifted her face up to him. "As God is my judge," she cried, her voice rising with the tragic intensity of the moment and thrilling with indignant protest, "he took it from me like the thief and the coward he was and he tells it now like the liar he is. We were riding side by side, I was utterly unsuspicious, I thought him a gentleman, he caught me and kissed me before I knew it. I drove him from me. That's all."

"I believe you," said Newbold gently, and then for the first time, he addressed himself to Armstrong. "You came doubtless to rescue Miss Maitland, and in so far your purpose was admirable and you deserve thanks and respect, but no further. This is my cabin, your words and your conduct render you unwelcome here. Miss Maitland is under my protection; if you will come outside I will be glad to talk with you further."

"Under your protection?" sneered Armstrong beside himself, "After a month with you alone I take it she needs no further protection."

Newbold did not leap upon the man for that mordant insult to the woman; his approach was slow, relentless, terrible. Eight or ten feet separated them. Armstrong met him half way, his impetuosity was greater, he sprang forward, turned about, faced the full light from the narrow window.

"Well," he cried, "have you got anything to say or do about it?"

But Newbold had stopped, appalled. He stood staring as if petrified; recognition, recollection rushed over him. Now and at last he knew the man. The face that confronted him was the same face that had stared out at him from the locket he had taken from the bruised breast of his dead wife, which had been a mystery to him for all these years.

"Well," tauntingly asked Armstrong again, "what are you waiting for, are you afraid?"

From Newbold's belt depended a holster and a heavy revolver. As Armstrong made to attack him he flashed it out with astonishing quickness and presented it. The newcomer was unarmed—his Winchester leaned against the wall by his fur coat and he had no pistol.

"If you move a step forward or backward," said Newbold with deadly calm, "I will kill you without mercy."

"So you'd take advantage of a weaponless man, would you?" sneered Armstrong.

"Oh, for God's sake," cried the woman, "don't kill him."

"You both misjudge me," was the answer. "I shall take no advantage of this man. I would disdain to do so if it were necessary, but before the last resort I must have speech with him, and this is the only way in which I can keep him quiet for a moment, if as I suspect, his hate measures with mine."

"You have the advantage," protested Armstrong. "Say your say and get it over with. I've waited all these years for a chance to kill you and my patience is exhausted."

Still keeping the other covered, Newbold stepped over to the table pulled out the drawer and drew from it the locket. Enid remembered she had hastily thrust it there when he had handed it to her, and there it had lain unnoted and forgotten. It was quite evident to her what was toward now. Newhold had recognized the other man, explanations were inevitable. With his left hand Newbold sought the catch of the locket and pressed the spring. In two steps he faced Armstrong with the open locket thrust toward him."

"Your picture?" he asked.

"Mine!"

"Do you know the locket?"

"I gave it to a woman named Louise Rosser five or six years ago."

"My wife."

"Yes, she was crazy in love with me, but—"

With diabolic malice Armstrong left the sentence uncompleted. The inference he meant should be drawn from his reticence was obvious.

"I took it from her dead body," gritted out Newbold.

"She was beside herself with love for me; an old affair, you know," said Armstrong more explicitly, thinking to use a spear with a double barb to pierce the woman's and the man's heart alike. That he defamed the dead was of no moment then. "She wanted to leave you," he ran on glibly. "She wanted me to take her back and—"

"Untrue," burst forth from Enid Maitland's lips. "A slanderous, dastardly, cowardly untruth."

Sank His Fingers Around the Other's Throat.

But the man paid no attention to her in their excitement; perhaps they did not even hear her. Newbold thrust his pistol violently forward.

"Would you murder me as you murdered the woman?" gibed Armstrong in bitter taunt.

Then Enid Maitland found it in her heart to urge Newbold to kill him where he stood, but she had no time if she could have carried out her design, for Newbold flung the weapon from him and the next moment the two men leaped upon each other, straining, struggling, daring, battling like savage beasts, each seeking to clasp his fingers around the throat of the other and then twist and crush until life was gone.

Saying nothing, fighting in a grim silence that was terrible, they reeled crashing about the little room. No two men on earth could have been better matched, yet Newbold had a slight advantage in height and strength, as he had also the advantage in simple life and splendid condition. Armstrong's hate and fierce temper counterbalanced these at first, and with arms locked and legs twined, with teeth clenched and eyes blinded and pulses throbbing and hearts beating, they strove together.

The girl shrank back against the wall and stared frightened. She feared for her lover, she feared for herself. Strange primitive feelings throbbed in her veins. It was an old situation, when two male animals fought for supremacy and the ownership of a female, whose destiny was entirely removed from her own hands.

Armstrong had shown himself in his true colors at last. She would have nothing to hope from him if he was the victor; and she even wondered in terror what might happen to her if the man she loved triumphed after the passions aroused in such a battle? She grew sick and giddy, her bosom rose and fell, her breath came fast as she followed the panting, struggling, clinging grinding, figures about the room.

At first there had been no advantage to either, but now after five minutes—or was it hours?—of fierce fighting, the strength and superior condition of her lover began to tell. He was forcing the other backward. Slowly, inch by inch, foot by foot, step by step, he mastered him. The two interwining figures were broadside to her now, she could see their faces inflamed by the lust of the battle, engorged, blood red with hate and fury, but there was a look of exultation on one and the shadow of approaching disaster on the other. But the consciousness that he was being mastered ever so little only increased Armstrong's determination and he fought back with the frenzy, the strength of a maddened gorilla, and again for a space the issue was in doubt. But not for long.

The table, a heavy cumbersome, four-legged affair, solid almost as a rock, stood in the way. Newbold at last backed Armstrong up against it and by superhuman effort bent him over it, held him with one arm and using the table as a support, wrenched his left hand free, and sunk his fingers around the other's throat. It was all up with Armstrong. It was only a question of time now.

"Now," Newbold guttered out hoarsely, "you slandered the dead woman I married, and you insulted the living one I love. Take back what you said before you die."

"I forgive him," cried Enid Maitland. "Oh, for God's sake don't kill him before my eyes."

Armstrong was past speech. The inveteracy of his hatred could be seen, even in his fast glazing eyes, the indomitableness of his purpose yet spoke in the negative shake of his head. He could die, but he would die in his hate and in his purpose.

Enid ran to the two, she grappled Newbold's arm with both her own and strove with all her might to tear it away from the other's throat. Her lover paid no more attention to her than if a summer breeze had touched him. Armstrong grew black in the face, his limbs relaxed, another second or two it would have been over with him.

Once more the door was thrown open; through it two snow-covered men entered. One swift glance told them all. One of them at least had expected it. On the one side Kirkby, on the other Maitland, tore Newbold away from his prey just in time to save Armstrong's life. Indeed the latter was so far gone that he fell from the table to the floor unconscious, choking, almost dying. It was Enid Maitland who received his head in her arms and helped bring him back to life while the panting Newbold stood staring dully at the woman he loved and the man he hated on the floor at his feet.

Latest German Fad.

Germany's latest fad seems to be the "Undosabad," destroyed by a Berlin engineer, and claimed to be the first transportable covered swimming bath which affords a practical substitute for the usual expensive buildings. The swimming basin is inexpensive and may be easily transported to any convenient location. The water supply may be obtained from a lake, river, springs, or from the town water works, as the use of the filtra minimizes the amount of fresh water necessary and so reduces the number of germs that the water is purer than when freshly introduced. The bath is sheltered by a canvas roof and furnished with a motor so that the air and water can be warmed and the temperature regulated. The motor's surplus power can also be utilized in generating waves of three feet or less in height, thus destroying all germs that remain, and add to the attraction by simulating the ocean.

Wise Doctor Gives Postum to Convalescents.

A wise doctor tries to give nature its best chance by saving the little strength of the already exhausted patient, and building up wasted energy with simple but powerful nourishment.

"Five years ago," writes a doctor "I commenced to use Postum in my own family instead of coffee." (It's a well-known fact that tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) "I was so well pleased with the results that I had two grocers place it in stock, guaranteeing its sale.

"I then commenced to recommend it to my patients in place of coffee, as a nutritious beverage. The consequence is, every store in town is now selling it, as it has become a household necessity in many homes.

"I'm sure I prescribe Postum as often as any one remedy in the Materia Medica—in almost every case of indigestion and nervousness I treat, and with the best results.

CROP SITUATION IMPROVES

Export Trade Reported Slow—Business Would Be More Active Were Supplies Better.

New York.—Bradstreet's review of trade says:

Trade, crop and industrial developments are of a gratifying character and movements in general are forward. The cereal crop situation is even brighter than heretofore. Fodder crops are larger than were anticipated a while ago. Corn, though still backward, has made progress save in parts of the northwest, but the plant will require warm weather and a late arrival of frost to carry it to maturity.

Incidentally the iron and steel trade continues to surge forward at a more profitable rate. In some of the more prosperous farming regions there is a renewed movement to pay off outstanding obligations and while collections in parts of the south remain slow there is evidence of improvement in payments.

Orders for dry goods are numerous at western, southwestern and northwestern centers, but in the east some branches denote less activity than heretofore. Men's wear and dress goods are still active and prices are firmer.

Business failures in the United States for the week ending August 15, were 221 against 221 last week, 215 in the like week of 1911, 222 in 1910, 183 in 1909 and 236 in 1908. Business failures in Canada number 36, which contrasts with 22 for the last week and 28 in the like week of 1911.

Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending August 15, aggregate 4,273,948 bushels against 2,740,125 last week and 3,507,365 this week last year. For the seven weeks ending August 15 exports were 19,039,089 bushels against 16,728,705 in the corresponding period last year.

Corn exports for the week are 121,621 bushels against 92,395 last week and 298,531 in 1911. For the seven weeks ending August 15, corn exports are 635,171 bushels against 4,016,120 last year.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The industrial and trade situation fully maintains its recent improvement and a further advance in activity is noted in the reports from the leading centers.

Everything points to a containuance of the present activity in iron and steel.

Future business is not readily accepted unless higher prices are offered. Basic iron is strong at $14 valley while Bessemer rules at $14.50 and $14.75, valley. Crude steel is becoming scarcer and merchant pig iron furnaces have practically contracted all of the output of the third quarter. Bessemer billets are firm at $23, Pittsburg, and open hearth at $23.50, Pittsburg. Demand for merchant steel bars, plates and shapes continue to tax capacity, while tin plate and sheets are very active with prospect of an advance in quotations.

Well maintained activity is still the leading features in dry goods. Some hesitation was caused in the cotton goods division by the substantial decline in raw cotton, but the only effect noted was a slight softening in print cloths.

A few sales were reported for China shipment, but export trade, as a whole is slow. Cotton yarns are quiet and practically unchanged but worsted yarns are in good demand and firm.

Demand for footwear shows further improvement. All kinds of leather continue in good demand without any very large transactions, tanners still refusing to contract ahead in any large quantity at present quotations, Trading in upper leathers is steady but no special activity is shown. Business is in steady volume and would be still more active were supplies not so closely cleaned up.

Are the Original Hiram J. Tells of His Attendance at a Country "Function."

"Having nothing else to do," remarked the old codger, "I attended a function while I was over at Torpidville the other day. The affair was held in a dispirited grove at the end of a road in which every time a horse popped down his foot the dust shot up in the air like a skyrocket. A band was playing without the slightest remorse. A statesman, with a neck as wrinkled as a pickle, droned forth redundant nonentities without end. A sad and rickety merry-go-wabble wound 'round and 'round to the sound of its own plaintive peedle-deedle. In tipsy pavilion a hoarse person was endeavoring to sell, in brazen defiance to the pure food and drug act, what looked alarmingly like horned toads fried in axle-grease. A gentleman in a striped tent nearby hoarsely stated that he preferred to eat snakes at ten cents per serpent. There was the usual balloon which seemed perfectly willing to do anything but get up. Scattered around through the festal scene were a few old soldiers, grumbling; a smattering of farmers, also grumbling; sundry honest voters, likewise grumbling; and various other folks, nothing about whom is worth mentioning except that they, too, were grumbling. It may have been a reunion, a fair, a rally, a picnic, or what-not; but whatever they chanced to call it, 'twas an excellent example of one of our most cherished institutions."—Kansas City Star.

ONE EXPLANATION.

The Serious Man—He has six daughters, but he won't let any of them get married.

The Joker—Maybe he doesn't want to break the set.

The Other Way 'Round.

A good little story, long current in England, is now just gaining American circulation. It has for leading characters Rudyard Kipling and Dorothy Drew, Mr. Gladstone's little grandchild. Kipling was visiting Hawarden and, being fond of children, devoted himself to little Miss Dorothy until her anxious mother expressed the hope that the child had not been wearying the great author.

"Oh, no, mamma," spoke up Dorothy, before any one else had a chance to say anything, "but you have no idea how Mr. Kipling has been wearying me!"

Instinctive.

"So you took your wife to the baseball game?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton.

"Did she enjoy it?"

"Only part of it. She thought they wasted a great deal of time running around the lot, but she thought the arguments with the umpire were quite interesting."—Washington Star.

Kind Man.

A local philanthropist ordered a fan for himself, a nice electric buzzer. He also took the key out of the door so that some of the air could go through the keyhole into the adjoining room, where there are eight perspiring clerks.

A great majority of summer ills are due to Malaria in suppressed form. Lassitude and headaches are but two symptoms. OXIDINE eradicates the Malaria germ and tones up the entire system.

Reservations.

She—Let me be the first aid to the injured.

He—If you're sure it won't be lemonade.—Baltimore American.

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

Its Rank.

"Do you think telephone operation can be classed as a profession?"

"Well, it certainly is a calling."

For SUMMER HEADACHES
Hicks' CAPUDINE is the best remedy—no matter what causes them—whether from the heat, sitting in draughts, feverish condition, etc. 10c., 25c. and 50c. per bottle at medicine stores.

There are lots of funny things to be seen in this world, and among them is a fat woman sitting on a little piano stool.

Some men are dumb because their wives never give them a chance to talk.

A girl never boosts a new love affair by boasting of an old one.

Got His Answer.

When Oscar Wilde came to the United States to lecture on aesthetics in his highly aesthetic velvet costumes—and incidentally to prepare the public mind for the proper appreciation of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience," in which the aesthetic movement was held up to ridicule—he used to complain that America was very uninteresting since it had "no antiquities and no curiosities." But he ventured on this disparagement once too often, for in the course of his travels he uttered it to the American Girl, and she replied with the demure depravity of candid innocence that this was not quite a fair reproach, since "we shall have the antiquities in time, and we are already importing the curiosities."

Child's Fear of the Dark.

If mothers notice that the brains of their little ones conjure up uncanny sights and thoughts from the shadows of a room more or less dark, let the light burn brightly. To force a child to become accustomed to the darkness is a grave error, if its nervous system is so organized that this forcing is productive of a fright.

The nervous system of a child is a very susceptible organization and the deleterious impressions made upon it will often make their influence felt throughout its whole after life. If the child asks for a light under such circumstances do not refuse it.

AFTER THE DOCTOR FAILED.
Even the most stubborn cases of malaria yield to Elixir Babek.
"In the summer of 1896, I contracted the disease known as Malaria. After a year's fruitless treatment by a prominent Washington physician, I was entirely cured by your Elixir Babek."—Brasie O'Hagan, Troop E, 6th U. S. Cav.
It is equally good for bilious disorders. Elixir Babek, 50 cents, all druggists, or Klocszewski & Co., Washington, D. C.

Autocratic Assertions.

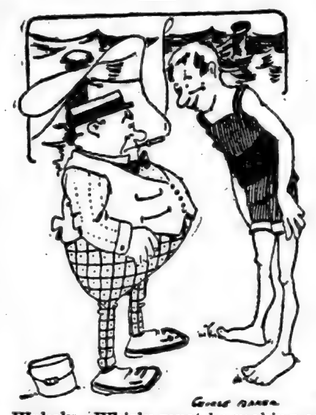
"Are you a servant of the people?" asked the constituent.

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "Only it should be observed that a really first-class servant may come pretty nearly being a boss."

Ideals.

"What is your idea of a perfect husband?"

"One with about a million, who would lose no time in making me a merry widow."



As a summer tonic there is no medicine that quite compares with OXIDINE. It not only builds up the system, but taken regularly, prevents Malaria. Regular or Tasteless formula at Druggists.

In a woman's eye the most attractive thing about a man is her ability to attract him.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

It's easier to catch a husband than to uncatch him.

ALMOST INCREDIBLE.

Wakely—Whirly must be making an awful lot of money.

Wisely—I should say he is. I actually believe he is making more than his wife can spend.

Mother's Lingual Attainment.

The mother of a little boy in Kansas City, Kan., recites negro dialect stories charmingly. Her small son is quite proud of her accomplishment and frequently boasts of it. One day recently, when some of his playmates were vaunting the achievements of their several mothers, the little boy braggingly remarked:

"My mother is smarter than any of yours; she can talk two languages."

"What are they?" demanded his companions.

"White and colored."

Moving Pictures Popular.

In a recent number of the Daily Consular Reports are collected memoranda from cities and towns in various distant parts of the world showing the universal quality of the popular interest which the moving pictures excite. England, Japan, Turkey, Mexico, India, Australia and the islands of the sea all have the same story to tell; wherever the cinematograph goes it finds an instant and sustained welcome.

His Reason.

He—Dearest—During the first dance I have with you be sure and say something to me.

She—Why?

He—Because you're so light, if you don't speak I will not know I have you in my arms.—Princeton Tiger.

Exceptions.

Pater Familias—History repeats itself.

Smart Child—Not when it's my lesson.

A woman can't feed a man so much taffy that it will spoil his appetite for it.

It's usually the fool who rocks the boat that lives to tell the tale.

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Tells How She Keeps Her Health — Happiness For Those Who Take Her Advice.

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for woman's ills known.

The large use of money by a few rich men or by corporations is the curse of our politics."

Mr. Ross Mullins has purchased a lot in the Gowan Addition to Clanton and is now having erected a handsome cottage home.

While you are thinking it over remember that those same Alabama negro delegates are the same delegates who always attend state and district conventions. will the white men who attend republican state and district conventions, and who, consequently, sit in convention with these negro delegates, stand for these words of Roosevelt? Will they? We shall see.

Remember also if you please that this same Roosevelt who has repudiated the Alabama negro delegates is the same Roosevelt who, several years ago, invited Booker T. Washington to dine with him. Didn't look much like an Alabama negro was unfit and unworthy then, did it?

Then remember once again it was this same Roosevelt who, while president, consulted this same Alabama negro—Booker T. Washington—with reference to Alabama aspointments.

Remember there things if you please, sir!

Surely "politics" does make strange bed-fellows now don't it?

UNIQUE ENTERTAINNENT

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. S. S. Stanfield entertained in compliment to her sister, Miss Sallie Townsend of Eclectic, who is in Clanton on a visit. Quite a number of the younger set enjoyed Mrs. Stanfield's hospitality. During the afternoon a number of games were indulged in by those present and every minute was thoroughly enjoyed.

Refreshments were served at the close of the games which, also were greatly enjoyed.

WORK OR GET OUT

SO SAYS CHIEF OF POLICE HAYES.

Chief Hayes requests the Press to announce that on and after Monday next those who have no employment and no visible means of support, both white and black, will be arrested as vagrants.

This announcement was caused by the fact that those who are in charge of the construction work on the Coosa river sought in vain to employ the unemployed of Clanton. In almost every instance they were met with the remark that work was not wanted and the Chief decided that if such persons would not work when employment at good wages was offered them, he would see to it that they no longer block the streets of the town and throng the passage way at the depot. It is just such people who cause most of the disturbances in a town and who commit the crimes which keep the courts busy.

If the Chief succeeds in ridding Clanton of its loafing element he will have conferred a blessing upon the town for which each citizen should tender him profound thanks.

CLANTON ACADEMY

FACULTY TO BE COMPLETED IMMEDIATELY.

The decision of Mrs. McMorries to continue her private school rather than to accept the primary department of Clanton Academy, puts somewhat of a change on school affairs here. The Board thought Monday and Tuesday that all things were ready and that the faculty selected would surely accept, but the final declination of Mrs. McMorries puts things back where they were two weeks ago. Chairman Mullins of the Board was out of town Wednesday, so that no positive information could be secured from him; however, Prof. Pickens was busy on his job and the likelihood is that a primary teacher will be selected sometime today.

Anyway the Academy will open on schedule time with a full corps of teachers, every one of whom will be an expert in the particular branches taught.

You will remember I advertised this Policy some time ago, and I wish now to repeat the attractive feature in these Policies again. First the cost is as cheap, and a little cheaper, than many other reliable Old Line Companies. Second you get every fifth year a very attractive dividend. Third, these Policies have a disability clause: which guarantees if you become totally disabled from injury or disease of any kind, you will never have to pay any longer, but your Policy will mature, as though you were paying the premiums yourself in cash, and you would receive the same benefits. This clause is in the face of the policy. There are other good features in this fine policy too nnmerous to mention, but if you will call at my office I will take pleasure in showing them to you. Again, when you buy this Policy you are patronizing a home man who will appreciate your business, and whose office is open and welcome for your use at any time. You will also be patronizing a home Company, the Old Volunteer State Life Insurance Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the oldest Southern Life Insurance Companies, which sounds good to us, and in patronizing a home man and a Southern Company, you are keeping the money at home, where it is made and where it belongs. Now a word to the skeptical along this line, I feel that it is my duty to take life insurance for the protection of my family, and inducing others to do the same, is one of the many ways to secure them. Today is here, yesterday is gone, and tomorrow may never come. I am at your service, and my whole soul is in the work, and your patronage will, I assure you, be greatly appreciated. You should investigate my Accident and Health Policy, my Fire and Tornado Policy, my combination Automobile Policy, and Bond Making.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

A thirty-minute demonstration for United States Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey was the feature of the final session of the state Democratic convention of Texas. The demonstration arose over the adoption of a resolution commending Bailey for his course in congress. Gov. O. B. Colquitt was renominated and his platform adopted. Prominent in the platform is a declaration for closing the saloons at 9:30 o'clock every weekday night.

Nineteen negro miners were instantly killed by an explosion at the Abernant (Ala.) Coal company's mine. Seventeen bodies have been taken out. Forty white men and eighteen negroes were in the mine when the explosion occurred got out alive. State Mine Inspector Nesbitt is on the scene, but is unable to give the exact cause of the explosion, but thinks a windy shot was fired in the pressure of gas and dust.

Holding up officials in the court house at pistol points, a mob of about forty men took T. E. Cotton, alias T. Z. McElhenny, a 16-year-old negro, and lynched him just beyond the city limits. The negro was accused of killing young Cedron Land, a white boy, near town, two months ago. Land was found in a field, his face riddled with bird shot. He had had trouble with the negro, whose arrest soon followed, and it is said Cotton partially confessed.

General.

In the four days' battle between insurgents under Generals Mena and Zelidon and government troops commanded by Gen. Emilio Chamorro for the possession of Managua, ended in a victory for the defenders. The hospitals are filled with the wounded. Many citizens who were injured by the bursting missiles have died in the improvised infirmaries. The situation at the capital has been horrible, and the arrival of the American marines has been a source of great relief and confidence. The government troops did not pursue the retreating rebels.

Clarence S. Darrow, the noted Chicagol lawyer, was found not guilty of the charge of bribing a juror in the McNamara case at Los Angeles, Cal. The jury was out just 34 minutes.

Terrible reports have gained circulation in Cettinje, Montenegro, of another masacre of Christians by Mohammedans in Albania, Montenegro. A band of Mohammedan arnauts, supported by Turkish troops, attacked a section of the Christian population in the Berana district of Albania. A fierce fight ensued and women and children are reported to have been murdered by wholesale.

How to transport the immense small grain crop now being gathered in South Dakota is the problem that railway freight men are trying to solve.

The United States submarine "G-4," the first of its type to be built in this country, has been launched at the Cramp shipyard. Her armament consists of four torpedo tubes and eight 18-inch torpedoes.

The bombardment of the Nicaraguan capital by the revolutionary forces under the command of Generals Mena and Zeledon continues. Some of the shells from the rebel guns struck inside the city in the vicinity of the United States legation and the president's residence. Several attempts by the rebels to capture the city have been repulsed by the government troops.

The resolute determination of the citizens of New York City to rid their police force of its system of graft and blackmail was given forcible expression at a mass meeting at Cooper Union, when they appointed a vigilance committee of prominent men and women to see that public officers now engaged in exposing "the treasonable alliance of the police with organized crime" do their full duty. The mass meeting, which typified the public indignation aroused by the revelations of police corruption growing out of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was attended by a crowd that overflowed the hall.

Earl Pritchard, aged 19, of Bedford, Ind. jumped out of the window of a Monon train at Chalmers and was killed. The train was running sixty miles an hour. Pritchard, it is believed, became suddenly insane.

Four persons are dead as a result of a cyclone that struck Neola, Iowa. All wires are down.

Congressman Henry A. Barnhart is confined to his home as the result of being run over by his own automobile in Rochester, Ind. When he cranked his machine it plunged forward so quickly that it was impossible to get out of the way.

For a few hours a Mexican Joan of Arc was the dictator of Juarez. With ten rebel soldiers marching at the heels of her horse she rode up to the polic estation and disarmed the provisional chief of police and six of his men. The rebels rode away mounted on the policemen's horses. The woman fearlessly entered stores and demanded and received provisions, and then shortly before daylight rode out of town with her admiring followers. She is the wife of Col. Lazero Alanis, rebel commander, operating around Palomas.

Not daring to awaken her husband for fear that he might be shot and killed, Mrs. Walter F. Klemm, wife of a Philadhlpehia banker, with a summer home at Chelsea, N. J., lay awake and watched a burglar steal jewelry valued at more than $6,000 from a dressing table in her bedroom. She had awakened to see the burglar, disguised with a white silk handkerchief drawn over his face, removing the contents of her jewel case. The intruder was holding a revolver in his hand.

"I'm going gunning," Michael Laporter told a Chicago porter in a barber shop, and within five minutes he had killed Luiki LaGrasso, seriously wounded Michael Granato and shot off the right arm of Mrs. Guiseppina Gallina, who was carrying a baby on her left arm. Laporte used a shotgun. Police pursued Laporte for several blocks and caught him after he had fired once at them. The friends of Laporte's victims gathered and threatened to attack him. They were dispersed by the police.

Two men known to be dead and property damaged to the extent of many thousands of dollars as the result of a terrific rain and electrical storm which struck Niles, Mich., and raged continuously for twenty-four hours. Hundreds of men, wrecking crews, section hands and railroad officials, are attempting to repair the Michigan Central tracks, put out of commission for a distance of 1,000 feet.

Rebels raided a hacienda belonging to Frank A. Dickinson at San Luis Potosi, Mexico. A number of employees on the property were beaten, and the manager fled.

New York police are searching for a crook whom they say is one of the most brutal in all history. The burglar in one case picked up an innocent infant and dashed it against the wall to torture the mother into revealing the hiding place of her money.

Tige, the dog that saved several lives in a hotel fire at Columbus, Ohio, three years ago, is dead. Tige leaves an estate, having had a bank account since his exploit of rousing Leslie Hatton's hotel guests when fire broke out. He got 10 cents for every rat he killed besides a regular allowance provided by his master and other admirers. Checks paid for the dog's board, Hatton says, and there is a balance of $800 to Tige's account

Records showing that within the last eight months Police Liteutenant Charles Becker, charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal and accused of gambling graft, has made bank deposits of $58,845 in his own name or that of his wife, were placed in the hands of the public prosecutor.

Washington.

President Taft sent a number of diplomatic and consular nominations to the senate. A majority are promotions, but there are many new appointments, all based on examinations.

The senate passed the army appropriation bill carrying $94,000,000, a bill replacing that originally passed which was vetoed by President Taft. The new bill did not carry the provision of the original which would have legislated out of official life Gen. Leonard Wood, the chief of staff of the army. An unsuccessful attempt was made by Senator Bacon to amend the appropriations so that not a dollar could be used to support the army if sent into foreign territory.

By the narrow margin of five votes the house passed the wool tariff revision bill over President Taft's veto. The vote, 174 to 80, was made possible only by the defection of twenty-one Republicans who voted with the Democrats. The announcement of Democratic success created a wild scene in the house, and, amid great confusion, the Republican leaders protested that Speaker Clark must count as voting ten members who answered "present" to their names, a ruling which would have defeated the measure.

Universal parcels post system in the United States is assured by the action of the senate in formally ratifying its action in adopting the Bourne plan, based on a zone system which provides for a maximum charge of $1.32 for transporting an eleven-pound package over eighteen hundred miles. The Bourne provision is a fair, workable, economically sound, long-desired scheme for a general parcels post. This ends a long fight in which the express companies of the country have exerted their utmost effort to prevent the adoption of a parcels post system

As an object lesson to congress to demonstrate his belief in the advantages of the budget system for making estimates and appropriations for the Federal government, President Taft will send next year's estimates to congress in budget form to accompany the regular book of estimates which the secretary of the treasury is required by law to submit. The proposed American budget will be designed to present to congress and the people a detailed understandable program of business for the ensuing year. The cabinet is instructed to prepare estimates of both plans.

SPECIAL MESSAGE ON CANAL BILL

WOULD ALLOW FOREIGN NATIONS TO TEST LEGALITY OF PROVISION.

PRESIDENT'S SUGGESTIONS

Taft Anxious to Sign Bill, But Wants to Assure Other Nations of American Fairness.

Washington.—President Taft closed a day of conferences on the Panama canal bill with a special message to Congress, suggesting the passage of legislation which would permit American ships to travel the canal toll free and which also would allow foreign nations to test the legality of this provision by suits in the United States courts.

The President discussed the message with senators and members of the House and its wording finally was decided upon at a meeting of the cabinet.

It was the belief that a determined effort will be made to meet the President's wishes, although some leaders, particularly those in the House, were inclined to believe the message meant no further action in regard to the canal at this session.

The President explained he was anxious to sign the bill but wished to assure other governments of the spirit of fairness on the part of the United States.

The President was told that an act of Congress would have the effect of abrogating any treaty previously agreed to and the decision of the supreme court over the Chinese exclusion act was given as authority for the statement. His suggestion to Congress for additional legislation is designed to prevent any such construction as that of the supreme court in the Chinese case. It reads as follows:

"That nothing contained in the act entitled, 'An act to provide for the opening, maintenance, protection and operation of the Panama canal, and the sanitation and government of the canal zone,' shall be deemed to repeal any provision of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, or to affect the judicial construction thereon, or in any wise to impair any rights or provisions which have been or may be acquired by any foreign nation under the treaties of the United States relative to tolls or other charges for the passage of vessels through the Panama canal and that when any alien whether natural person, partnership, company or corporation, considers that the charging of tolls or the enforcement of any other regulation under and pursuant to the provisions of this act violates in any way any such treaty rights or provisions, such alien shall have the right to bring action against the United States for a redress of the injury which he considers himself to have suffered and the district courts of the United States are hereby given jurisdiction to hear and determine such cases and to decree the appropriate relief, and from the decision of such district courts there shall be an appeal by either party to the action to the supreme court of the United States."

"This language," continued the message, "negatives absolutely any desire on the part of Congress to repeal the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, or to violate its provisions by this legislation, and leaves open to any person who deems himself aggrieved by the provisions of the act, an opportunity to appeal to our courts."

SUN YAT SEN ASSASSINATED.

Rumors Say First Provisional President of China Has Met With Foul Play.

San Francisco.—Rumors that Dr. Sun Yat Sen, first provisional president of China, has been assassinated in Peking by the soldiers of President Yuan Shi Kai, caused great excitement in Chinatown. The rumors could be traced to no authentic source, but varying reports of alleged assassination were posted on bulletin boards throughout the Chinese quarters.

At the offices of the Chinese consul general and the two Chinese daily newspapers no news of an attack upon Dr. Sun had been received and the report of his death was given little credence.

According to the rumors placarded in Chinatown, Dr. Sun had left Shanghai for Peking to undertake to save the republic from a threatened renewal of hostilities, as the result of the execution of Generals Ching Chen Wu and Aeng Wei.

Holdup Men Obtain $1,190.

Lexington, Ky.—Joseph Candioto, agent for a cash register and a typewriter company here, was assaulted and robbed of $1,190 in diamonds and cash by two men, as he was preparing to leave his office. He was found several hours later by a newspaper reporter who was attracted by groans coming from the office. Candioto said the men had concealed themselves behind furniture in the office, and when he turned out the light, they set upon him and beat him into insensibility.

WILLING HE SHOULD GO FAR

One Man to Have Kid Transferred, but He May Have Had a Grouch.

"What do you think of this scheme of having the countries exchange children?" asked the Sewickley man.

"I don't think anything about it," said the Wilkinsburg man. "What is the idea?"

"An English family, for instance, exchanges children for a couple of years with a German family. References are first exchanged, and all sorts of things."

"I see."

"Thus both sets of children get a chance to learn another language and get acquainted with another country. It's quite a scheme."

"It's an elegant scheme," declared the Wilkinsburg man. "My neighbors have a kid that I would like to see exchanged with some family in Siberia."

BAD CASE OF HEMORRHOIDS

Okalona, Ark.—"I had a bad case of itching and burning piles, and tried many remedies without relief. I could not sleep nor rest at night. The affected parts were irritated, also inflamed, and my family physician said I would have to undergo an operation.

"I bathed good with Cuticura Soap in pure water about fifteen minutes, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment. I did this four times a day for two weeks, then three times a day for another week, and in the space of three weeks I was cured sound and well. One box of Cuticura Ointment with Cuticura Soap cured my case of piles of six years' standing. When I commenced to use the Cuticura Soap and the Cuticura Ointment, I only weighed one hundred and twenty-eight pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and eighty-eight pounds." (Signed) Floyd Welch, Dec. 11, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Took Slot Machine at Its Word.

A Kansas City woman recently took her two small daughters to make their first visit to her husband's people, living in a small Kansas town. Naturally she was anxious to make as favorable an impression as possible. So the two little people, on going on an errand to the depot, were cautioned to be on their very best behavior. To the mother's surprise, they returned vigorously chewing gum. As they had no money, she asked them where they got it.

"Oh," exclaimed the older one, "it said on the slot machine, 'Ask the agent for pennies,' so we did.

Case of Mistaken Identity.

President Taft was out for his afternoon walk in Washington one day when a flaxen-haired little girl ran out in front of him, held up her finger, and exclaimed, in a shrill voice:

"I know who you are!"

The president, thinking it not at all unusual that she should possess this information, but willing to gratify her, asked:

"Well, who am I?"

"Aw," she said teasingly, "you're Humpty Dumpty."—Popular Magazine.

2. Are you married or unmarried?
3. If married, give the name and residence of your wife if living, number of children, age and sex and postoffice address.
4. Personal statement by convict of history of his defense and grounds of clemency. This must be written out by the convict in his own language and without assistance. If unable to write it must be written by the warden as dictated by convict.
5. Give name of trial judge and solicitor and name of attorney who represented you in the trial.
6. State whether you have ever been convicted of any other offense, name of offense and sentence.
7. If you have employed an attorney to represent you in procuring a pardon or parole, give his name and postoffice address and what fee you have agreed to pay said attorney.
8. What was your occupation before your conviction?
9. Are you a member of any church? If so, what church?
10. Have you been in the habit of using intoxicating liquors and to what extent?
11. State what property you owned, and whether you now have any property or means of support if released.

Talladega.—From statistics furnished Governor O'Neal by Sheriff Gornett, it is seen the murders in Talladega county this year have already trebled those of last year, when there were two. Already this year seven have been committed, two in the city of Talladega. Of the seven murders one victim was a white man. White men figured in two others.

Birmingham.—The First Field Artillery battallion, Alabama National Guard, composed of Battery D, of Birmingham, and Battery B, Montgomery, will go into camp at Mobile September 10, to remain there until September 19. About 250 men will participate in the maneuvers.

Selma.—Selma has received the first new bale of cotton of the season. It was raised by S. F. Houston on his plantation just east of Selma.

Gadsden.—The capital stock of the Southern Manufacturing Company will be increased from $15,000 to $75,000.

Demopolis.—The premium list of the Black Soil Fair association is out. A big racing card is announced and the fair and list offers premiums that will attract a magnificent exhibit.

Greensboro.—The census recently completed in Hale county shows 10,252 children of the school age—1,816 white children and 8,436 colored.

Gadsden.—Attalla may yet lose the plant of the Peacock Iron works. A strong bid is being made for the Selma concern by Sheffield. Unless about $3,000 more in stock is subscribed for in Attalla and Gadsden the promoters may go elsewhere.

Montgomery.—There will be a new bank at Section, Jackson county, if A. E. Walker, superintendent of the state banking department, approved the petition filed by attorneys for the new institution. The paid-in capital stock is $10,000. Most of the stockholders live in Section.

Decatur.—Robert Cunningham and Albert Curner, both colored, were killed instantly in the yards of the Louisville and Nashville railroad near their shops in New Decatur by an engine running over them. Their bodies were badly mutilated.

Goodwater.—George Cammell, who resides just across in Tallapoosa county from here, shot, but not fatally Jim Tankersley, of the same neighborhood. The trouble arose over a dog.

Bay Minette.—A carload of barrel heads has been received by the Bay Minette Turpentine Company, whose still is on Magnolia street. The receipt of so large a number indicates the capacity of the still.

Stevenson.—The annual convention of the Jackson County Sunday school association in session at Stevenson for two days, proved to be the strongest and most representative Sunday school gathering ever held in the county.

ARE MERE MONEY VENTURES

State Executive Says Financial Gain Is Dominant Note—Farmers Little Helped.

Montgomery.—Agricultural fairs in this State have come to be little more than commercial enterprises, promoted for financial gain to those in immediate charge and to increase the trade of merchants who back them with subscriptions.

Governor O'Neal made this charge in discussing criticisms heaped upon him by some for not releasing the $20,000 appropriation, made to go for premiums at county fairs. He made it clear that, in his opinion, the real purpose of agricultural fairs has been blotted out by those who are seeking commercial and financial advantage.

The Governor's refusal to approve applications seeking portions of the fund for use in fall fairs is not all, for he declares he will make efforts to have the next Legislature withdraw the appropriation in toto. He will recede from this position, he says, only after there is a similar fund made up from an outside source to cover the appropriation.

Montgomery.—Albert Milan, a Tallapoosa county boy, has been sentenced to serve one year in the United States prison for forgery. He was arrested some time ago in his home county. Judge Thomas G. Jones, of the United States court, sentenced him.

Selma.—Quite a party of Selma business men and well known farmers of Dallas county will leave Selma on August 26 for a trip through the boll weevil section of the cotton belt in Mississippi and Louisiana. The business men and farmers will make the trip for the purpose of studying conditions in the section which they will visit.

Montgomery.—W. H. Taylor, Jr., son of Chief of Police Taylor, and W. C. Stephens are locked in the Montgomery county jail charged with murder in the first degree as the result of a shooting scrape which occurred at Washington park, a negro pleasure resort of this city, in which Arthur Turner, a negro, received wounds from which he died and William Holland, another negro, was seriously injured. The two white men are held in jail without bond.

Montgomery.—Dr. William H. Oates, state prison inspector, is in south Alabama on an inspection tour of the jails in that section of the state. Dr Oates went from Montgomery to Clark county, where he will first inspect the prison in that county, after which he will visit other county bastiles in that part of the state.

Geiger.—Russell county criminal court has been in session at Seale the past week, Judge H. T. Benton presiding. About 18 cases were heard, mostly for minor offenses, and a number of these demanded jury trial and were bound over. The charge of murder against Bat and Burrell Smith was nol prossed on account of lack of direct evidence.

Meridian.—Thomas Simon, alias Henry Smith, was arrested in Meridian on a charge of having murdered his wife in Prairieville, Ala., last June. Simon does not deny the shooting, but claims that it was purely accidental. He will make no fight against being taken back to Alabama for trial, and the Alabama authorities have been advised of his apprehension.

Mobile.—While turning out the lights in his father's store at Crichton, J. T. Stallworth, son of J. P. Stallworth, postmaster at Critchton was shot by an unidentified man who escaped. Arrival of neighbors prevented, it is believed, the robbery of the postoffice. The postoffice is in the store. Stallworth received a 38 calibre bullet through his shoulder, but will recover.

Carrollton.—The physicians have inaugurated a warm fight against the hookworm disease in the county and will have free dispensaries throughout the county for examination and treatment of this widespread disease. Dr. Carl A. Grote, representing the State Board of Health, will conduct the dispensaries, assisted by the physicians of the different localities where they will be held.

Gadsden.—The rod mill of the Southern Iron and Steel Company after being closed since July 15, went into operation, furnishing employment to a large force of workmen. Agents have been sent North for more men. The plant will be in full operation, employing 2,000 men by September 1. The demand for iron and steel is stronger than it has been for several years.

Gadsden.—Socialists of Etowah county are organizing. State Organizer W. M. Doyle went to Collinsville where a club was organized.

Selma.—The school census of Dallas County which has just been completed and compiled show a decided increase in the population of the county as well as it did in the city. There are 19,176 school children in Dallas. Of this number 2,746 are white and 16,430 negroes.

Mobile.—The Merchants Company of Citronelle, was made defendant in an involuntary bankruptcy proceedings filed by creditors in the United States district court. The corporation made admission of insolvency.

POPULAR SYMBOL OF VALUE

Young Man Evidently Was Lacking In His Appreciation of the Country's Statesmen.

There is plenty of food for cynical thoughts in the national capital, as is shown by the following incident which happened on a Washington street car:

A worldly young man, prone to criticise, was gazing at the advertisements which decorate the interior of the car. One advertised a new kind of collar for men. The dome of the capitol was represented encircled by one of the collars, and on the senate and house wings of the building were placards giving prices and sizes. The placard on the senate end of the capitol read, "Quarter size," and that on the other end said, "Two for a quarter."

The worldly cynical young man turned to his companion.

"That," he remarked, "just about expresses my opinion of some of these here congresmen."—Judge.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regarding the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says:

"I was afflicted with constipation and biliousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

'Eleven Rate Facts" Answered

Statement of Sydney J. Bowie in Reply to Recent Letter of W. D. Nesbitt

In the Birmingham Ledger of July 29th appears a long letter from Mr. W. D. Nesbitt, former Railroad Commissioner of Alabama, under appointment from Governor Comer, in which he sets out what he calls "Eleven Rate Facts," which he advises the shipper to paste in his hat, or keep conveniently on his desk, to refute the alleged wicked statements of those who might present the views of the railroad company.

He begins with a poetic quotation. I can paraphrase another distinguished writer by saying of Mr. Nesbitt's article that there are some important things in it, and there are some true things in it, but the important things are not true, and the true things are not important.

Even as Mr. Nesbitt begins, with poetical lines, he continues to the end with a liberal use of the poet's license in dealing with the facts. It is far from me to suggest, or imply, that Mr. Nesbitt has made any deliberate misrepresentations, but I do say that Mr. Nesbitt's treatment of this whole rate question has been superficial and one-sided. He has stated the question from the standpoint of a critic alone. I do not doubt that he has worked himself up to believe that the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company is a very bad corporation because it was not willing to accept dictation from him, and from his associates, in the last administration.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad company has felt that it had some rights in this controversy. It was furnishing the property that was to be used by the shippers and passengers, and it was bearing all the expense, and it believed it had the right to say something about what it should charge for the use of its property by its customers. It has never denied that the people, either through the state legislature or the federal congress had a right to require just and reasonable rates, but it has claimed the right to be heard in determining what those rates were, and it has denied and does deny the power of any legislature, or commission deriving its power from the legislature, to arbitrarily fix passenger or freight rates for it, without consultation with, or notice to it, and without even an opportunity to be heard on the subject in a court of justice.

It is impossible, for want of space, to deal in detail with all of Mr. Nesbitt's statements, in a single article, but the material statement contained in my article, to which Mr. Nesbitt's article purports, in part, to reply, was that the Ledger was in error in alluding to the Louisville & Nashville as charging the "old high freight rates in Alabama," while other roads "are satisfied to observe the rates fixed by the state."

The point intended to be shown in my article was that the "other roads" referred to were not satisfied with, nor were they, in fact, charging the rates required of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, but, on the contrary, the statutes referred to expressly discriminate in favor of the "other roads" and mention was made of certain specific instances of discrimination in the statute, which made the proposition plain. For example, on the articles mentioned in the "Eight Group Acts," except a limited number therein set out, the Southern Railway, the Atlantic Coast Line and the Seaboard Air Line were allowed to charge $1.25 for each $1.05 allowed to be charged by the Louisville & Nashville, while the Alabama Great Southern and the St. Louis & San Francisco and other roads were allowed to charge $1.20 for each $1.05 allowed to be charged by the Louisville & Nashville. The evidence in the cases lately tried showed that there was no basis in fact, or law, for this discrimination, and this was one of the grounds on which these statutes were declared unconstitutional.

Mr. Nesbitt does not deny this discrimination, but he undertakes to obscure, or minimize it, by showing that although the discrimination does exist as to some of the articles embraced in these acts, it does not exist as to all of them, and he mentions by name some of the articles on which he says there is no discrimination. A bank cashier could just as logically say that he ought not to be convicted of embezzlement, because, forsooth, he did not take all of the bank's money, having left some change in the cash drawer. Lord Clive, when on trial for robbing the Indian treasury, is reported as saying, "My Lords, when I consider the opportunities afforded me, I am astonished at my own moderation."

The discrimination apparent on the face of these acts cannot be defended or brushed aside by showing that they contained some exceptions. Mr. Nesbitt's statement of these exceptions is not accurate, as an analysis of the acts themselves will show, nor is it true, as he claims, that these exceptions constitute seventy-five per cent. of the total tonnage embraced in the acts. I am sure he is mistaken in his allusion to the testimony on this point—I know the exceptions affect less than one-fourth in number of the articles, and thus, as to more than three-fourths of the articles named in the act, there is a plain discrimination against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in favor of its competitors of from 15 to 45 per cent. I shall deal further with this subject in a separate article.

Mr. Nesbitt further speaks of the "burdensome freight rates," etc., "other than iron and coal," as if iron and coal constituted the only low freight rates on the Louisville & Nashville system.

I have asserted, on the authority of the undisputed testimony in the cases lately tried, that the Louisville & Nashville freight rates were on the whole materially lower than the rates charged by the Southern Railway and other competitors. To show that these low rates are not confined to iron and coal, I now submit a table showing the voluntary rates of the Southern Railway and L. & N. Railroad in Alabama as they existed January 1, 1907, and as they now exist, except as modified by the "Eight Group Acts," wherein on more than three-fourths of the articles a difference of 20 per cent. in favor of the Southern and against the Louisville & Nashville is created by statute. These rates apply to all-class articles. They govern the great body of merchandise and articles of general consumption, but do not apply to articles such as coal and iron ore, and others governed by what is known as commodity rates:

The rates for intermediate distances show relatively the same differences as are disclosed by the above table.

By the operation of the maximum Rate Acts, the Southern Railway is permitted to charge the higher rates shown in this table while the Louisville & Nashville is prohibited from charging more than the lower rates shown.—Acts of 1907, p. 80.

The sole exceptions to the above table of rates as applied to class goods are found in the Eight Group Acts, where, on a limited number of articles, the rates of the Louisville & Nashville and the Southern are the same, but where on the great majority of articles a heavy discrimination exists in favor of the Southern Railway and other competitors.

If the Louisville & Nashville freight rates are "burdensome," if they are "old" and "high," what must be thought of the legalization of the rates of the Southern Railway shown by the above table and the discrimination in its favor in the "Eight Group Acts?" Can sophistry defend or excuse this situation?

The fact is, the Louisville & Nashville freight rates are "old," but they are neither "high" nor "burdensome." Under the operation of these rates, the communities served by it have enjoyed a measure of prosperity far greater than it has enjoyed. The returns from these rates have been meager. It cannot be shown, it has not been shown, that they are excessive. On the whole, they are lower than the average of rates charged by its competitors in the states of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and Florida.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad company proved these facts by evidence not disputed in the cases lately tried. If these statements were false, they were open to disproof. They were not refuted then; they cannot be refuted now.

In other articles, I shall deal with the situation in Georgia, with the question of a fair return, with the Passenger Rate Act, and with further evidences of discrimination in the statutes of which we complain.

VOL 3. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1912 NO. 23

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

LONG DELAYED PUBLICATION

The Press regrets exceedingly at its volume of advertising mater received from outside sources st as we began the publication the proceedings of the Teach-s' Institute forced us to abandon e publication. It was no fault of rs; we are always in sympathy
th the teachers of the county
d propose to do all within our wer to assist them.

The proceedings were interest-g to a degree and should have and space in our columns had it en possible for us to provide it.
Tho' late, we are printing in ese columns most of the remain-g of the proceedings of the In-itute; especially that with refer-ce to resolutions passed by the stitute and the remarks of visitg educators.

It will all prove interesting read-g and we trust everyone will d it carefully.

1 We, the teachers of Chilton unty, assembled in County In-itute, wish to express our appretion of the faithfulness and self rifice of the teachers of the unty in passed years and to mmend the desire expressed in e Institute for more thorough rming along professional lines.

2 We further express our con-
ctions that the next advance ep in the development of the hools should be the completion the work of grading the schools, d the establishment by the unty Board, of an annual Sev-
th Grade ezamination, entitling e pupil to entrance into the unty High School.

3 We believe that Chilton Coun-should have a County High hool, and we trust each teacher ll wage a campaign for the purse of creating enthusiasm along is line.

4 We wish to endorse the school
provement Association as one the best agencies in developing al support and interest in the hools, and we hope each teacher ll put forth every effort to ornize a local association in his or r district during the coming ar.

5 We believe that the condition the roads of the county has arded the development of the hools in the past by preventing gularity of attendance, and that y movement that will secure tter roads, will help the schools the county.

6 We believe that the tendency the county should be toward e consolidation of districts rather an any further division, because o teachers in one large school n do a great deal more and bet-r work than the same teachers two separate schools.

7 We believe it is an injury t emselves and to the school for ildred under seven years of age be allowed to attend the school.

8 We believe that the County
ard should prohibit the doing of y work above school grade in a e teacher\ school because the eat need of the state is better mentary educatisn.

9 We believe that the teachers the county should inform them-ves on matters of public health d sanitation, and do all in their wer to secure the cooperation the patrons of their district in nitary measures.

10 We believe the Girls' Toma-
Club and the Boys' Corn Club e important factor in the delopment of our county and we ge that each teacher organize e clubs in their district.

11 We urge our State Legislae to prepare and submit to the ers of the state an amendment
e Constitution of the State, ich will make possible the levying of additional taxes in the county and the district.

12 We wish to express to Miss Luther and Miss Ogburn our sincere appreciation of their personal interest in the teachers' of the county, and of their enthusiasm and efficiency as instructors, and we further wish to express our thanks to Dr. Shackelford, County Supt. Moore, and the visitors who have contributed to the success of the Institute.

Mr. john A. Hunter read the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted by the Institute:—

We, the teachers of Chilton County Institute, wish to express to our worthy and efficient Superintendent our most hearty thanks for the kindness and forebearance which he has shown us and for the excellent way in wish he has discharged the duties of his office.

Furthermore, as we are to lose our superintendent after this term of office, we wish him the greatest success in life and invoke the blessing of the Almighty upon him and his family always.

The next business before the Institute was the election of officers for the Chilton County School Improvement Association. The nominations for these offices had been referred to a committee.

The committee made reports and nominations, and the following offiicers were duly elected by rising vote of the Institute:

Prof. Howard Roper, Pres.
Prof. B. J. Sessions, Vice Pres.
Miss Margaret Wood, Sec'ty
Miss Bonnie Jenkins, Treas.

The committee recommended that the county be divided into four districts.

District Presidents were elected as follows:

Dist. No. 1—Rufus L. Popwell;
" " 2—Joseph F. Bone;
" " 3—F. B. Williams;
" " 4—R. A. Smith.

Each District President is to appoint the other necessary officers for his district.

Prof. Howard Roper, who had been elected as County President, made a speech of acceptance, in which he pledged himself to work to make Chilton County one of the foremost counties in the state along the line of School Improvement work, and he made an earnest appeal to the teachers for their support and influence in the work.

The School Improvement Association in the past year under the presidency of Miss Mabel Jones has done very creditable work indeed, although they have been working under very adverse circumstances. It is believed that a new and enthusiastic spirit of the work has been aroused during this Institute, and it is quite certain that by the end of next year this county will be one of the foremost counties of the state in this work.

The following resolution was introduced by Prof. J. F. Bone and adopted by the institute.

Resolved that we extend our sincere thanks to Miss Mabel Jones for her good work as President of the School Improvement Association. We feel that she has accomplished much good which will continue to grow and prosper for many years to come. As she goes to other fields of labor she carries with her the good wishes of every teacher of Chilton County.

The Institute body adopted the following resolution, which was introduced by Prof. Rufus L. Popwell:

We, the teachers of Chilton County, in Institute assembled, heartily endorse what has been said in this meeting favoring a bond issue for the purpose of working our public roads.

We hope that all that is possible will be done by the county officers to give the people a chance at the ballot box to express themselves along this line. We further urge every teacher in the county to encourage the people toward endorsing the issue of bonds and teach them that this is the only solution of our road problem.

The presentation of a subject that had not before been brought before the Institute. Prof. Sibley, instructor of industrial education, in Jacksonville Normal College, was present and made a critical demonstration of teaching manual training in rural schools. He showed that the only prerequisite for teaching the subject in the rural schools is simply a little preparation by the teacher.

A notable feature of his address was an illustration of the use of split log drag for working public roads. He illustrrted the construction as well as the use of the drag. At the conclusion of his talk he asked for volunteers who would pledge themselves to construct and use the drag on a short section of road as an experiment. Those who pledged themselves were: Miss Nelia Johnson, Miss Ennis Aldridge, W. R. Baker, Euell Weeks.

Mr. J. D. Mattock, ot Birmingham was introduced. He spoke words of encouragement to the members of the School Improvement Asssociation.

At about four o'clock Friday afternoon the Institute made its final adjournment. The members of the institute and the instructors clapsed hands and goodbyes could be heard in all parts of the room, as the crowd began to disperse.

This is believed to be by far the best Institute ever held in the county, which is due to the fact that the Instructors were teachers of the highest mark of capability, and also to the deep interest shown by the teachers.

Wilson's Secretary Likes Advertiser's Mailing Card.

The Advertiser's Circulation Manager, in sending out a a series of attractive mailing cards to people who might subscribe to The Advertiser and those who cared to renew, decided to mail a copy to Governor Woodrow Wilson, who is the Democratic nominee for President, as seems to be generally understood in this time. The card carried a campaign cartoon by Spangler which urged people to contribute to the Democratic campaign fund. The Advertiser's circulation manager is in receipt of the following letter in acknowledging receipt of his mailing card:

Seagirt, N. J., Aug. 6, 1912

"My Dear Sir:

"Your mailing card to Governor Wilson reached us here today. The Governor is away, but I hasten to say you certainly do things well in Alabama.

"Very truly yours,
"Walter Measday,
"Asst. Sec. to the Governor."

On the mailing card may be found the following which is a part of the reading matter on the home-made coin-holder:

"Dear Friend:

"The Montgomery Advertiser started its political career as a supporter of Andrew Jackson's policies and has been a consistent Democratic paper ever since.

"The Montgomery Advertiser is in its eighty-fourth year of vigorous life and is entering on its twenty-first National campaign. The Nation will be swept with a Democratic cyclone this fall and the White House will be swept with a Democratic broom next spring cleaning.

"Are you one of us? If so, please follow directions on this page."

No one should be without the daily visits of the Advertiser. All that is necessary this campaign is to send in fifteen (15c) cents today, fifty (50c) cents the first of following month and $3.90 later on the fall.

Send in 15 cents today and ask for coin card.

THE COTTON WORM

FARMERS SHOULD EXAMIME THEIR CROPS.

Last year when the cotton worm made its first appearrnce in this vicinity the Press issued 'a special edition in which it notified the farmers of the presence of the worm.

Some of our business men and farmers decried the efforts of the Press to assist the farmers and belittled us for thinking a special edition necessary, but whether necessary or not it aroused the farmers to action.

This year, again, the worm had put in an appearance in several sections and while we have issued no special edition we have taken occasion to talk with almost every farmer with whom we have come in contact; the concensus of opinion is that the cotton worm last year was a blessing in disguise in that they came at a time when the cotton plant was heavily leaved and by eating the leaves gave the bolls a chance at the sunshine; this year the farmers to whom we have talked sad that they do not fear the worm because the cotton is too far advanced for any ravages of the worm.

But, Prof, Hines, the State Entomologist, who has made the cultivation of cotton a study from a scientific point of view, states that even tho' the worms come in small numbers they do much harm wherever they assemble. He paid the Press offices a short visit Thursday afternoon, on his way from North Alabama to Montgomery—stopping between trains,—and requested this paper to say to the farmers that they "should get busy" and eradicate the worm at the quickest possible moment.

According to his statement—and he knows whereof he speaks—if one boll to the stalk is saved it will more than pay for the expense in poisoning an entire crop.

This sounds somewhat out of reason at first, but he who has studied the subject and has had actual experience, speaks with authority. "Take, said he, one pound of Arsenate of Lead, to each acre of cotton per foot in heighth and spread it over the cotton and, if well distributed, it should destroy every worm; the the cost will be small and the gain large. That is, if your cotton is two feet high use two pounds of lead per acre, if three feet tall use three pounds, and so on, measuring the amount of lead used by the heighth of the cotton plant, with one pound per foot to the acre as a basis." We sincerely trust that our farmers will not sleep over their rights; we have heard of several farmers who fear their crops will be badly damaged—one or two having said that their crops will be cut half by the worms.

Mr. Hines is an authority and his experience and observation should be accepted by our farmers.

The Press has a remedy which it believes is even better than arsenate of lead, and while it costs no money it is a money-maker to the farmer. We raise too few chickens and turkeys; the product here is shipped away so that few chickens, and no turkeys, remain in the country. Why is this? Because chickens and turkeys are money-makers; they bring cash when nothing else will do so.

Turkeys are first-class worm destroyers; not only do they kill the cotton worm effectually but they destroy grasshoppers and every other bug that tends to damage the cotton, corn or hay crop. Then, too, they bring in the money.

With a little care each house wife can make a neat little bank account off her turkeys and at the same time keep the cotton pest far away. Over in Georgia they have proven this to be a success far beyond expectation.

It will not do, however, for just one farmer in a community to try this experiment for the reason that when the turkeys of one farmer stroll over the fields of another farmer, picking grass hoppers and cotton worms that farmer, if he has no turkeys, is sure to complain that his neighbor's fowls are destroying his crop—tho' in reality they are benefitting the crop; but if each will raise fowls then there will no complaint.

Suppose our farmers try this plan for a year or two? We believe that it will put an everlasting end to the worm trouble, and at the same time put money into the pockets of our farmers.

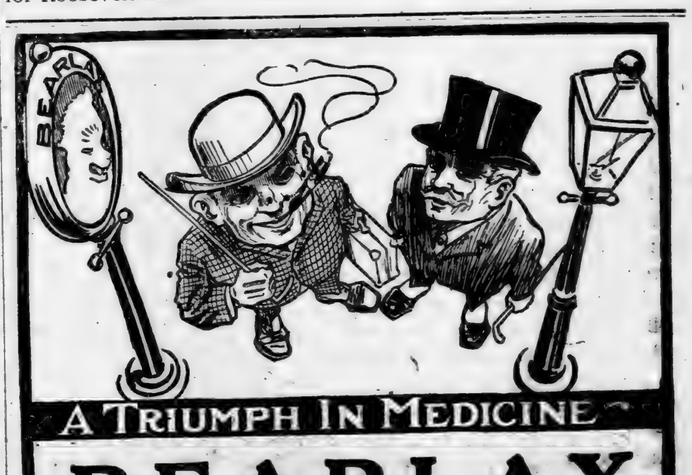
The turkey, if given range, will feed himself and bring in at the proper season lots of little ones to help in the work of the farm.

MR. WILSON AND THE FARMER

BOTH TO WORK TOGETHER FOR COMMON GOOD.

After having Mr. Taft's doleful jeremiad and Mr. Roosevelt's fierce denunciations and exceedingly multitudinods promises to do things which he failed to do or which he opposed to do when he was President, it was refreshing to hear the wise and dignified speech of the great Statesman, Governor Wilson.

The people believe he will set up "his rule of right and of justice," in the making and in the administration of the laws. They also believe that he will be guided by his doctrine of the "universal partnership in public affairs."



He has not, like his opponents, been compelled to apologize for bad laws in which they had a hand in the making and vicious poiicies which they have pursued and now maintain. He has told the everlasting truth and at the same time avoided the use of vulgar denunciation. He knows his cause is righteous and has modestly and reverently declared that he thanks God and takes courage.

Every Republican who will vote for Roosevelt will do so because he believes that the Republican party so abused its trust as to be deserving of death. Such a Republican cannot hope for the election of Mr. Roosevelt and takes comfort in the belief that Mr. Wilson will be elected.

It does not seem that Mr. Taft will carry a state west of the Mississippi river and it appears impossible for Mr. Roosevelt to carry any State east of the Mississippi. A suggestion that any state of the South will give its electoral vote to any one other than Mr. Wilson is highly amusing. Southern men have heretofore refused to be bullied into support of the Republican and these have also steadfastly declined to be cajoled or flattered into the support of that party, the vestige of which in the South, has sometimes been aptly termed the "black and tans" and again the "lily whites." Democrats everywhere are loyal to their party and too buoyant and confident to listen to the suggestions that they desert when the coming victory is assured. The people everywhere know that Mr. Wilson ought to be elected and are daily more and more fortified in the confident belief that he will be elected.

The farmers have for a long time demanded better currency laws to the end that they might have better banking facilities for the making and marketing of their crops. The contemplated juggling with the great question of reform of our currency system. by the Aldrich bill is condemned in the Baltimore platform. The words of Mr. Wilson will reassure the support of every farmer and every other business msn in the South, for they believe. with him, that our currency and bankig laws should be reformed and that in this reformation, "we ought to consult very many persons besides the bankers, not bocause we distrust but because they do not necessarily comprenend the business of the country, notwithstanding that they are indispensible serventy of it and may do a vast deal to make it hard or easy. No more banker's plan will meet the requirements no matter how honestly conceived. It should be merchants' and farmers' plan as well as elastic in the hands of those who use it as an indispensible part of their daily business."

This utteronce of Mr. Wilson will make him strong indeed in every agricultural community.

A TRIUMPH IN MEDICINE

BEARLAX

Substitute For Calomel

Thousands of commercial travelers now constantly carry with them a bottle of BEARLAX (liquid laxative.) BEARLAX is a safeguard against torpid, inactive liver and attendant ills which are the results of irregular hours, change of water and sometimes poorly cooked food.

A torpid or inactive liver means bad health, and may bring on a train of ills—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Flatulence, Foul Breath, Constipation, Biliousness, Jaundice, Chills and Fever, Sour Stomach, Piles, Loss of Appetite, Loss of Flesh, Sleeplessness, Low Spirits, Heartburn, Dizziness, Bilious Colic, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Blood Impurities—all these, if not actually caused by the torpid liver, are each and every one made worse by it.

BEARLAX (liquid laxative) does not simply move the bowels—it acts upon the function of the liver itself, tending to put it into healthy condition, produce laxative effect and restore healthy action to the bowels and helps to purify the blood. Mild and safe. 50c at dealers or by express, prepaid. Money back if not satisfactory.

FREE! For IMMEDIATE RELIEF, in cases where suffering is intense, and where even the short time required to permit BEARLAX to act cannot be spared, we offer FREE with each bottle of BEARLAX one Glycerine Suppository. SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Maitland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping. Fate brings all the actors together. Newbold returns from hunting game and sees a man near the hut. It is James Armstrong, who has at last located the missing girl, and he enters the cabin. Armstrong pleads his love for Enid, but she reminds him of his affection for Newbold's wife. He grows insulting and Enid orders him from her presence. Newbold returns opportunely. He discovers the truth about Armstrong and would have killed him but for the interference of Kirkby and Maitland, who came upon the scene.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Becoming End.

"Why did you interfere?" asked Newbold when at last he got his breath again, of Maitland who still held him firmly although restraint was now unnecessary, the heat and fire of his passion being somewhat gone out of him. "I meant to kill him."

"He'd oughter die sure nuff," drawled old Kirkby, rising from where he had been kneeling by Armstrong's side," but I don't know's how you're bound to be his executioner. "He's all right now, Miss Enid," said the old man. "Here"—he took a pillow from the bed and slipped it under his head and then extending his hands he lifted the excited almost distraught woman to her feet—" 'taint fittin' for you to tend on him."

"Oh," exclaimed Enid, her limbs trembling, the blood flowing away from her heart, her face deathly white, fighting against the faintness that came with the reaction, while old Kirkby supported and encouraged her. "I thank God you came. I don't know what would have happened if you had not."

"Has this man mistreated you?" asked Robert Maitland suddenly, tightening his grip upon his hard breathing but unresisting passive prisoner.

"No, no," answered his niece. "He has been everything that a man should be."

"And Armstrong," continued her uncle.

"No, not even he."

"I came in time, thank God!" ejaculated Newbold.

By this time Armstrong had recovered consciousness. To his other causes for hatred were now added chagrin, mortification, shame. He had been overcome. He would have been a dead man and by Newbold's hands, if the others had not interfered. He almost wished they had let his enemy alone. Well, he had lost everything but a chance for revenge on them all.

"She has been alone here with this man in this cabin for a month," he said thickly. "I was willing to take her in spite of that, but—"

"He made that damned suggestion before," cried Newbold, his rage returning. "I don't know who you are—"

"My name is Robert Maitland, and I am this girl's uncle."

"Well, if you were her father, I could only swear—"

"It isn't necessary to swear anything," answered Maitland serenely. "I know this child, and I believe I'm beginning to find out this man."

"Thank you, Uncle Robert," said Enid gratefully, coming nearer to him as she spoke. "No man could have done more for me than Mr. Newbold has, and no one could have been more considerate of me. As for you," she turned to Armstrong, who now slowly got to his feet, "your insinuations against me are on a par with your charges against the dead woman, beneath contempt."

"What did he say about her?" asked old Kirkby.

"You know my story?" asked Newbold.

"Yes."

"He said that my wife had been unfaithful to me—with him—and that he had refused to take her back. Great God!"

"And it was true," snarled Armstrong.

It was all Maitland could do to check Newbold's rush, but in the end it was old Kirkby who most effectively interposed.

"That's a damned lie," he said quietly with his usual drawling voice.

"You can say so," laughed Armstrong, "but that doesn't alter the facts."

"And I can prove it," answered the old man triumphantly.

It was coming, the secret that she had tried to conceal was about to be revealed, thought Enid. She made a movement toward the old man. She opened her mouth to bid him be silent and then stopped. It would be useless she knew. The determination was no longer hers. The direction of affairs had been withdrawn from her. After all it was better that the unloving wife should be proved faithful, even if her husband's cherished memory of her love for him had to be destroyed thereby. Helpless she listened, knowing full well what the old frontiersman's next word would be.

"Prove it," mocked Armstrong. "How?"

"By your own hand, out of your own mouth, you dog," thundered old Kirkby. "Miss Enid, where are them letters I give you?"

"I—I—" faltered the girl, but there was no escape from the keen glance of the old man; her hand went to the bosom of her tunic.

"Letters," exclaimed Armstrong. "What letters?"

"These," answered Enid Maitland, holding up the packet.

Armstrong reached for them, but Kirkby again interposed.

"No, you don't," he said dryly. "Them ain't for your eyes yet. Mr. Newbold, I found them letters on the little shelf where your wife first struck when she fell over onto the butte where she died. I figured out her dress was tore open there, and them letters she was carrying fell out and lodged there. We had ropes an' we went down over the rocks that way. I went first an' I picked 'em up. I never told nobody about it, an' I never showed 'em to a single human bein' until I give 'em to Miss Maitland at the camp."

"Why not?" asked Newbold, taking the letters.

"There wasn't no good tellin' nobody then, jest fer the sake o' stirrin' up trouble."

"But why did you give them to her at last?"

"Because I was afeered she might fall in love with Armstrong. I supposed she'd know his writin', but w'en she didn't I just let her keep 'em anyway. I knowed it'd all come out somehow; there is a God above us in spite of all the damned scoundrels on earth like this 'un."

"Are these letters addressed to my dead wife?" asked Newbold.

"They are," answered Enid Maitland. "Look and see."

"And did Mr. Armstrong write them?"

"He'll deny it, I suppose," answered Kirkby.

"But I am familiar with his hand writing," said Maitland.

Taking the still unopened packet from Newbold, he opened it, examined one of the letters and handed them all back.

"There is no doubt about it," he said. "It's Armstrong's hand, I'd swear to it."

"Oh, I'll acknowledge them," said Armstrong, seeing the absolute futility of further denial. He had forgotten all about the letters. He had not dreamed they were in existence. "You've got me beat between you; the cards are stacked against me. I've done my damndest"—and indeed that was true.

Well, he had played a great game, battling for a high stake he had stuck at nothing. A career in which some good had mingled with much bad was now at an end. He had lost utterly; would he show himself a good loser?

"Mr. Armstrong," said Newbold quietly, extending his hand, "here are your letters."

"What do you mean?"

"I am not in the habit of reading letters addressed to other people without permission, and when the recipient of them is dead long since, I am doubly bound."

"You're a damned fool," cried Armstrong contemptuously.

"That kind of a charge from your kind of a man is perhaps the highest compliment you could pay me. I don't know whether I shall ever get rid of the doubt you have tried to lodge in my soul about my dead wife, but—"

"There ain't no doubt about it," protested old Kirkby earnestly. "I've read them letters a hundred times over, havin' no scruples whatsoever, an' in every one of 'em he was beggin' an' pleadin' with her to go away with him an' fightin' her refusal to do it. I guess I've got to admit that she didn't love you none, Newbold, an' she did love this here wuthless Armstrong, but for the sake of her reputation, I'll prove to you all from them letters of hisn, from his own words, that there didn't live a cleaner hearted, more virtuous upright feemale than that there wife of yourn, even if she didn't love you. It's God's truth an' you kin take it from me."

"Mr. Armstrong," cried Enid Maitland, interposing at this juncture. "Not very long ago I told you I liked you better than any man I had ever seen. I thought perhaps I might have loved you, and that was true. You have played the coward's part and the liar's part in this room—"

"Did I fight him like a coward?" asked Armstrong.

"No," answered Newbold for her, remembering the struggle; "you fought like a man."

Singular perversion of language and thought there! If two struggled like wild beasts that was fighting like men!

"But let that pass," continued the woman. "I don't deny your physical courage, but I am going to appeal to another kind of a courage which I believe you possess. You have showed your evil side here in this room, but I don't believe that's the only side you have, else I couldn't have liked you in the past. You have made a charge against two women; one dead and one living. It makes little difference what you say about me. I need no defense and no justification in the eyes of those here who love me, and for the rest of the world I don't care. But you have slain this man's confidence in a woman he once loved, and who he thought loved him. As you are a man, tell him that it was a lie and that she was innocent of anything else although she did love you."

What a singular situation, an observer who knew all might have reflected! Here was Enid Maitland pleading for the good name of the woman who had married the man she now loved, and whom by rights she should have jealously hated.

"You ask me more than I can——" faltered Armstrong yet greatly moved by this touching appeal to his better self.

"Let him speak no word," protested Newbold quickly. "I wouldn't believe him on his oath."

"Steady now, steady," interposed Kirkby with his frontier instinct for fair play, "the man's down, Newbold, don't hit him now."

"Give him a chance," added Maitland earnestly.

"You would not believe me, eh?" laughed Armstrong horribly, "well then this is what I say, whether it is true or a lie you can be the judge."

What was he about to say? They all recognized instinctively that his forthcoming deliverance would be a final one. Would good or evil dominate him now? Enid Maitland had made her plea and it had been a powerful one; the man did truly love the woman who urged him; there was nothing left for him but a chance that she should think better of him than he merited; he had come to the end of his resources. And Enid Maitland spoke again as he hesitated.

"O, think, think before you speak," she cried.

"If I thought," answered Armstrong quickly, "I should go mad. Newbold, your wife was as pure as the snow; that she loved me I cannot and will not deny, she married you in a fit of jealousy and anger after a quarrel between us in which I was to blame, and when I came back to the camp in your absence, I strove to make it up and used every argument that I possessed to get her to leave you and to live with me. Although she had no love for you she was too good and too true a woman for that. Now you've got the truth, damn you, believe it or not as you like. Miss Maitland," he added swiftly. "If I had met you sooner, I might have been a better man. Good bye."

He turned suddenly and none preventing, indeed it was not possible, he ran to the outer door; as he did so his hand snatched something that lay on the chest of drawers. There was a flash of light as he drew in his arm but none saw what it was. In a few seconds he was outside the door. The table was between old Kirkby and the exit; Maitland and Newbold were nearest. The old man came to his senses first.

"After him," he cried, "he means—"

But before anybody could stir the dull report of a pistol come through the open door!

They found Armstrong lying on his back in the snowy path, his face as white as the drift that pillowed his head, Newbold's heavy revolver still clutched in his right hand and a bloody welling smudge on his left breast over his heart. It was the woman who broke the silence.

"Oh," she sobbed, "it can't be—"

"Dead," said Maitland solemnly.

"And it might have been by my hand," muttered Newbold to himself in horror.

"He'll never cause no more trouble to nobody in this world, Miss Enid an' gents," said old Kirkby gravely. "Well, he was a damned fool an' a damned villain in some ways," continued the old frontiersman reflectively in the silence broken otherwise only by the woman's sobbing breaths, "but he had some of the qualities that go to make a man, an' I ain't doubtin' but what them last words of hisn was mighty near true. Ef he had met a girl like you earlier in his life, he mought have been a different man."

It Was the Woman Who Broke the Silence.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Draught of Joy.

The great library was the prettiest room in Robert Maitland's magnificent mansion in Denver's most favored residence section. It was a long, low-studded room with a heavy beamed ceiling. The low book cases, about five feet high, ran between all the windows and doors on all sides of the room. At one end there was a huge open fire place built of rough stone, and as it was winter a cheerful fire of logs blazed on the hearth. It was a man's room pre-eminently. The drawing-room across the hall was Mrs. Maitland's domain, but the library reflected her husband's picturesque if somewhat erratic taste. On the walls there were pictures of the west by Remington, Marchand, Dunton, Dixon and others, and to set them off, finely mounted heads of bear and deer and buffalo. Swords and other arms stood here and there. The writing table was massive and the chairs easy, comfortable and inviting. The floor was strewn with robes and rugs. From the windows facing westward, since the house was set on a high hill, one could see the great rampart of the range.

There were three men in the room on that brilliant morning early in January something like a month after these adventures in the mountains which have been so veraciously set forth. Two of them were the brothers Maitland; the third was Newbold.

The shock produced upon Enid Maitland by the death of Armstrong together with the tremendous episodes that had preceded it had utterly prostrated her. They had spent the night at the hut in the mountains and had decided that the woman must be taken back to the settlements some way at all hazards.

The wit of old Kirkby had effected a solution of the problem, using a means certainly as old as Napoleon and the passage of his cannon over the Great St. Bernard—and perhaps as old as Hannibal! They had made a rude sled from the trunk of a pine which they hollowed out and provided with a back and runners. There was no lack of fur robes and blankets for her comfort.

Wherever it was practicable the three men hitched themselves to the sled with ropes and dragged it and Enid over the snow. Of course for miles down the canon it was impossible to use the sled. When the way was comparatively easy the woman, supported by the two men, Newbold and Maitland, made shift to get along afoot. When it became too difficult for her, Newbold picked her up as he had done before and assisted by Maitland, carried her bodily to the next resting place. At these times Kirkby looked after the sled.

They had managed to reach the temporary hut in the old camp the first night and rested there. They gathered up their sleeping bags and tents and resumed their journey in the morning. They were strong men, and save for old Kirkby, young. It was a desperate endeavor but they carried it through.

When they hit the open trails the sledding was easy and they made great progress. After a week of terrific going, they struck the railroad, and the next day found them all safe in Maitland's house in Denver.

To Mr. Stephen Maitland his daughter was as one who had risen from the dead. And indeed, when he first saw her, she looked like death itself. No one had known how terrible that journey had been to the woman. Her three faithful attendants had surmised something, but in spite of all even they did not realize that in these last days she had been sustained only by the most violent effort of her will. She had no sooner reached the house, greeted her father, her aunt and the children, then she collapsed utterly.

The wonder was, said the physician, not that she did it then but that she had not done it before. For a short time it appeared as if her illness might be serious, but youth, vigor, a strong body and a good constitution, a heart now free from care and apprehension and a great desire to live and love and be loved, worked wonders.

Newbold had enjoyed no opportunity for private conversation with the woman he loved, which was perhaps just as well. He had the task of readjusting himself to changed conditions; not only to a different environment, but to strange and unusual departures from his long cherished view points.

He could no longer doubt. Armstrong's final testimony to the purity of his wife, although he had burned the letters unread, and by the same token he could no longer cherish the dream that she had loved him and him alone. Those words that had preceded that pistol shot had made it possible for him to take Enid Maitland as his wife without doing violence to his sense of honor or his self-respect. Armstrong had made that much reparation. And Newbold could not doubt that the other had known what would be the result of his speech and had chosen his words deliberately; score that last action to his credit. He was a sensitive man, however; he realized the brutal and beast-like part he and Armstrong had both played before this woman they both loved, how they had battled like savage animals and how but for a lucky interposition he would have added murder to his other disabilities.

He was honest enough to say to himself that he would have done the same thing over under the same circumstances, but that did not absolve his conscience. He did not know how the woman looked at the transaction or looked at him, and he had not enjoyed one moment alone with her. In all that had transpired since that morning in the hut, the four had naturally and inevitably remained inseparably together.

They had buried Armstrong in the snow, Robert Maitland saying over him a brief but fervent petition in which even Newbold joined. Enid Maitland herself had repeated eloquently to her uncle and old Kirkby that night before the fire the story of her rescue from the flood by this man, how he had carried her in the storm to the hut and how he had treated her since; and Maitland had afterwards repeated her account to his brother in Denver.

Maitland had insisted that Newbold share his hospitality, but that young man had refused. Kirkby had a little place not far from Denver and easily accessible to it, and the old man had gladly taken the younger one with him. Newbold had been in a fever of anxiety over Enid Maitland's illness but his alarm had soon been dispelled by the physician's assurance, and there was nothing now left for him but to wait until she could see him. He inquired for her morning and evening at the great house on the hill; he kept her room a bower of beauty with priceless blossoms, but he had sent no word.

Robert Maitland had promised to let him know, however, so soon as Enid could see him, and it was in pursuance of a telephone message that he was in the library that morning.

He had not yet become accustomed to the world; he had lived so long alone that he had grown somewhat shy and retiring; the habits and customs of years were not to be lightly thrown aside in a week or a month. He had sought no interview with Enid's father heretofore; indeed had rather avoided it, but on this morning he had asked it, and when Robert Maitland would have withdrawn he begged him to remain.

"Mr. Maitland," Newbold began, "I presume that you know my unfortunate history."

"I have heard the general outlines of it, sir, from my brother and others," answered the other kindly.

"I need not dwell upon it further then. Although my hair is tinged with gray and doubtless I look much older, I was only twenty-eight on my last birthday. I was not born in this section of the country, my home was in Baltimore."

Hard Work to Find Publisher.

It is not generally known that J. H. Shorthouse had some difficulty in getting his famous historical romance, "John Inglesant," into print.

Shorthouse was engaged ten years in writing the book, and every page as he wrote it he submitted to the discriminating criticism of his wife. When the story was finished no publisher would accept it. Four years passed away and then Shorthouse resolved to publish 100 copies at his own expense. When this was done a copy came into the hands of Alexander Macmillan, who recognized the merit of the novel, and published it, with the result that all the world knows.

It is not any great wonder that he cannot recall the one he needs just when he needs it.

An English sparrow was the cause of three houses catching fire at Lawrenceburg, Ind., recently, and had it not been for the prompt work of the neighbors and friends all would have been destroyed. The sparrow was building a nest under the eaves of the home of Mrs. Mary Webber, and it picked up a long cotton string from a pile of rubbish that had just been burned. With the burning string in its beak, the sparrow flew to the roof of Mrs. Sophia Shafer's house, then to Otto McCright's house and then to the roof of Emanuel Wuest's home, where it dropped the burning string. A fire started in the shingles of each building. Each was extinguished by neighbors before much damage was done.

THE SIXTY-SECOND CONGRESS ENDS

FLOOR SCENE OF ANIMATION AS MEMBERS TAKE LEAVE OF EACH OTHER.

STATE CLAIMS ABANDONED

Wild Outburst of Applause Marks Clark's Announcement of Adjournment.

The Day in Congress.

Senate:

Passed Penrose resolution providing for further inquiry into Standard Oil campaign contributions.

Petitions for investigation of elections of Senator Chilton and Watson presented.

Yielding to House protests against state claims and passed general deficiency bill with objectionable claims eliminated.

Adjourned sine die at 4:30 p. m.

Washington.—Sobered by the embarrassments of all night session of filbusters and disagreements Congress adjusted its differences, invited President Taft up to the capitol once more, and at 4:30 o'clock wrote "finis" after the proceedings of the second session of the Sixty-second Congress.

The end was marked with a return of harmony. Senator LaFollette, demanding action of the Penrose campaign fund resolution, found all opposition smoothed away in front of him and the resolution passed almost without discussion.

Senators Chamberlain, Martin, Swanson and Culberson, after fighting bitterly for the payment of the "state claims," embodied in the general deficiency bill, yielded to the urgings of their colleagues and permitted the Senate to yield to the demands of the House, and strike these claims from the bill. In return for this concession, however, they received the promise of support next winter, when the claims again will be pressed for payment.

With these old claims, amounting in all to $600,000 went the "extra month's" pay for congressional employes, which the Senate demanded and the House refused to give. In the last half hour of the session while President Taft waited in his special room to sign the measures of the dying Congress, an attempt was made to rush through a special resolution giving the employes the "extra month," but the House again blocked this proposition.

The President signed the general deficiency bill at 4:10 o'clock, making certain the payment of $1,800,000 deficiency in army pay, the $150,000 for the Gettysburg memorial celebration next year, the $350,000 for extension of customs work and scores of other important payments that hinged on the passage of the bill.

The session "just fizzled out," in the Senate, to use the words of one observer.

A compartive handful of members occupied their seats, and a call for a quorum in either the House or Senate would have forced a return of the embarrassing situation of last week.

A wild outburst of applause greeted Speaker Clark's announcement of adjournment as his gavel fell in the House. The floor immediately became an animated scene, members bidding each other good-by and shaking hands. Old time political foes buried all differences and all feuds apparently were forgotten in the general leave taking.

SPARKS FROM THE WIRES.

Valdosta, Ga.—Col. S. K. Ford, wealthy owner of Kentucky coal lands, and B. L. Hall of this city announced the sale of about 1,000,000 acres of coal and timber land in Kentucky to a syndicate for $5,000,000. The deal was concluded at New York in a conference with agents of the syndicate.

Vallejo, Cal.—The first direct communication between the Mare Island navy yard and the recently completed Pribiloff wireless station in Alaska was established. The operators read the messages easily though the distance is 3,100 miles.

Bristol, Tenn.—Dr. James T. Cooter, of Kansas has been elected president of Washington college, recently separated from Tusculum by decree of court. Dr. Cooter was president of Washington college three years ago when the union was formed with Tusculum. He will take charge of the school at the opening in September.

Rome, Ga.—While Mrs. Cicero Hammond, wife of a prominent farmer, was tucking her children, aged 3 and 5, in bed, a bolt of lightning leaped from a tree through the open window, melted the bedstead and set fire to the mattress. Mrs. Hammond suffered serious burns, but the children escaped injury.

Gulfport, Miss.—While asleep at his home near Loraine, about nine miles from here, G. W. Blackwell was shot through the head by an unknown assailant and seriously wounded.

BLUEJAY LIVES IN WOODS

Hawks, Owls and Other Birds Are Teased and Tormented by These Noisy Birds.

The bluejay likes best to live in thick woods, but it often comes into open fields, orchards and near dwellings in search of food. When it discovers you it assumes a proud and angry air of conceit and defiance.

The bluejay's upper parts are purplish-blue. The lower parts are purplish-gray. The wings and tail are bright blue with black bars. The tail feathers are tipped with white. It has a crested head.

The bluejay builds its nest about twenty feet above ground. It is made of twigs and fine roots. From four to six eggs are laid. They are of a greenish drab color flecked with brown.

Doubtless the bluejay helped to name itself, as its common utterance is a long drawn, "jay, jay, jay." This cry, with the bright blue color, has given it its name.

While the jay sings no song it is able to imitate the calls of other birds, by which means it often attracts them. It likes to tease and torment the owl and especially the little sparrow hawk. This is done by imitating the cry of a wounded bird, which draws the hawk near. Then several jays will dart at the hawk squealing and frolicking about in great glee. Sometimes the play ends in a tragedy, for the hawk pounces upon one of them, to the dismay of the others. Jays may be caged and tamed like crows and some writers say they can be taught to utter words. —"Bird Studies," by Herman C. De Groat.

Everybody in Hard Luck.

Suddenly he stepped up to a gentleman, who was waiting for the tram, and, tapping him lightly on the shoulder, said: "Excuse me, but did you drop a five-pound note?" at the same time holding out in his hand the article.

The gentleman quetioned gazed a moment at the note, assumed an anxious look, made a hasty search of his pockets, and said: "Why, so I did, and I hadn't missed it," holding out an eager hand.

The elderly hunter took the name and address of the loser and, putting the note in his pocket, turned away.

"Well," said the other, "do you want it all as a reward?"

"Oh, I did not find one," remarked the benevolent one with another beam; "but it struck me that in a big place like London there must be a quantity of money lost, and upon inquiry I found that you are the one hundred and thirty-first man who lost a five-pound note this morning."—London Answers.

Couldn't Happen to Them.

Mike got a job moving some kegs of powder, and, to the alarm of his foreman, was discovered smoking at his work.

"Je-ru-sa-lem!" exclaimed the foreman. "Do you know what happened when a man smoked at this job some years ago? There was an explosion that blew up a dozen men."

"That couldn't happen here," returned Mike calmly.

"Why not?"

"'Cause there's only you and me," was the reply."—Everybody's Magazine.

If your appetite is not what it should be perhaps Malaria is developing. It affects the whole system. OXIDINE will clear away the germs, rid you of Malaria and generally improve your condition.

HANDS ITCHED AND BURNED

Warrenton, Va.—"My little girl was troubled with eczema for three years. Her hands burned and itched and looked as if they were scalded. She could not sleep at night; I had to be up all night to keep her hands in warm water. She rubbed her hands and large white blisters came full of yellow water. Then sores came and yellow corruption formed. She could not take hold of anything with her hands. I used an ointment and tried a treatment, but nothing did her any good, so I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After bathing her hands with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment I was astonished to see the great relief, and Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment cured her hands in three weeks." (Signed) Mrs. John W. Wines, Mar. 8, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

A Word to the Wise.

The proverbial advice, "Cobbler, stick to your last," had an apposite exemplification in the following anecdote, for which Zion's Advocate is responsible:

A colored man was brought before a police judge, charged with stealing chickens. He pleaded guilty, and received sentence, when the judge asked how it was managed to lift those chickens right under the window of their owner's house when there was a dog in the yard.

"Hit wouldn't be of no use, judge," said the culprit, "to try to 'splain dis thing to you all. Ef you was to try it, like as not you would git yer hide full o' shot, an' git no chickens, neither. Ef you want to engage in any rascality, judge, yo' bettah stick to de bench, whar yo' am familiar."

Orphanages in Turkey.

There are 22 orphanages in the Turkish empire, conducted by Americans, enrolling 3,000 inmates. In connection with these orphanages an industrial work has sprung up which gives employment to over 10,000 people in addition to the orphans. The work is largely done by the widows and orphans and includes rug and lace-making, various forms of embroidery, and other domestic work. The product of these institutions finds a market abroad.

Diplomacy.

"Mrs. Jinks always has such a good time when she goes anywhere. How does she manage to convey the impression she is a widow?"

"She always makes an allusion to her tardy husband, as 'my late husband.'"

Remarkable Financiering.

"Figures don't lie."

"Don't they? Here's an item from New York that says a policeman there saved $80,000 a month from his salary of $2,800. Those figures must lie, for they won't stand."

As a summer tonic there is no medicine that quite compares with OXIDINE. It not only builds up the system, but taken regularly, prevents Malaria. Regular or Tasteless formula at Druggists.

The nearest some people ever come to getting close to nature is to sit in a palm room.

MAST TREES FOR THE CROWN

Mark of the Broad Arrow Was Placed on Pines in Plymouth Colony.

In the provincial charter of 1691, under which the Plymouth colony and the province of Maine were united with Massachusetts, it was provided that all trees of the diameter of 24 inches and upward at 12 inches from the ground, growing upon land not heretofore granted to any private person, should be reserved to the crown for the furnishing of masts for the royal navy. Harper's Weekly observes.

A surveyor general of woods was appointed to se that this provision of the charter was carried into effect. Near the coast all white pines of suitable dimensions were marked with the "broad arrow"—three cuts through the bark with an ax, like the track of a crow. This was the king's mark.

Long after the revolution had obliterated the royal authority men who had been taught in boyhood to respect the king's mark hesitated to cut such trees.

In felling a tree it was necessary to "bed it" to prevent its breaking. This was done by cutting the small growth and placing small trees across the hollow, so that there should be no strain upon one section more than upon another when the monster pine struck ground.

The mast was hauled out of the woods on one strong sled, whether in winter or summer, and so many oxen were required that the hind pair were often choked in crossing a hollow, being hung up in their yoke by the pulling of those ahead of them.

A mast hauling was a great event, and everybody within walking distance came to see it.

Barber Shops in China.

Since the Chinese revolution a great many Chinese have had their queues cut off, and this had led to the opening of a large number of barber shops throughout the far east wherever Chinese are located, says an exchange. Several progressive business men of Singapore, anticipating this, imported a large number of American barber chairs, and they are now unable to get supplies quickly enough. It has also been learned that the Chinese insist on having American hair clippers, and refuse all other makes offered them.

It would seem that American manufacturers of barbers' supplies should experience a large increase in their Oriental trade.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50 cents.

Patriotism.

Marks—So your Italian barber refused to shave you. Why was that?

Parks—I told him I'd just had a Turkish bath.

A great majority of summer ills are due to Malaria in suppressed form. Lassitude and headaches are but two symptoms. OXIDINE eradicates the Malaria germ and tones up the entire system.

Paradoxical Effect.

"There always is when she is put out."

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

That man who becomes discouraged because he fails to carry his point in all matters is easily discouraged and is unfit as a guide.

Some people come fearfully near "bending the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning;" but, thank God, there are very few men in these "diggins" who do such things.

In the very nature of things men will think differently on many propositions, but on the subject of presidential succession ninety per cent of the people are united in thinking, and declaring, that two terms is enough for any man. Mr. Roosevelt will find this out to his sorrow upon the arrival of November.

He who once declared that the "populists were a set of men who looked with suspicion upon any man who bathed frequently" is now seeking to associate with the very men whom he took a delight in abusing, and, strange to say, quite a few of them are willing to submit to his insults and follow his lead.

A negro from West Virginia may be a better negro than a negro from Alabama, at least Roosevelt says so, but we doubt it. For us give us the genuine old time Southern negro; he knows his place and will keep it. The West Virginia kind seeks to "butt in" where he should not.

If the Pennsylvania negro is better than an Alabama negro why was it that Roosevelt invited an Alabama negro to dine with him while an occupant of the White House and refused to sup with those from Pennsylvania? The answer is easy—he simply made a statement which he himself did not believe in order that he might catch the white vote of the South, by leading them to think that he would build up a white party. Such statements are miserable makeshifts and an insult to the intelligence of the white men of the South.

It appears that the Senatorial Investigating Committee—a majority of whom are republicans—have gotten Mr. Roosevelt into the Annanias Club good and proper; and to be sure he's there on good testimony and with credentials properly signed.

As between two witnesses, one of whom is directly interested and the other disinterested, it is fair to assume that the disinterested party would come nearer giving the true statement of facts.

Mr. Roosevelt was personally and politically interested in that large contribution by the Standard Oil Company; Mr. Archbold was interested only in that he desired the election of the republican ticket.

Mr. Archbold, backed by other strong witnesses, says he gave $100,000.00 to help elect Mr. Roosevelt; Mr. Roosevelt says "he didn't do it."

Mr. Archbold seems to have the documentary evidence that he did do as he says; Mr. Roosevelt has no evidence that he did not.

Which would you believe if you were on the jury?

The Senatorial Committee, composed mostly of republicans, says it believes Mr. Archbold.

The establishment by the City Council of a fire limit wherein no wooden structures shall be erected was a move in the right direction; but in order to make that ordinance effective it should be published—unless it is desired to hurry matters, in which event it may be posted and go into effect five days thereafter.

Mr. Wilson, the democratic nominee for President, is a Southerner with Southern sympathies; he desires the good of the agricultural classes in legislation and in the enforcement of law; he seeks the reformation of the banking system, the currency system, of the country—in such manner as will not place the farmer at the mercy of Wall street brokers and bankers. North, South, East and West the farmers are lining up for Wilson and Marshall; they recognize that this is the psychological time for them to help themselves; they are going to vote the way their interests dictate rather than the way the bosses demand.

The line of battle this year is clearly drawn; it's a fight of the people against the trusts; a battle of the farmers, laborers of all classes against, those who live in palaces and fare sumptuously every day.

The former is represented by Wilson and Marshall, the latter—take your choice—by Taft and Sherman or Roosevelt and Johnson.

As for us we are with the plain people and shall so vote.

The PRESS does not desire to "but in" nor is it undertaking to give advice to our city officers; they are men who know their duty and will perform it, but we have heard it frequently stated on the streets that the "posting of notices in three public places in the municipality" would be all that is necessary to make a municipal election valid & c. We respectfully call the attention of those in authority to Section 1164 of the Code of Alabama which provided the ways and means for holding elections. That Section distinctly states (we are quoting only a part of the Section, that which relates directly to the point at issue) "It shall be the duty of the mayor and clerk to provide for the opening of said polls and to give at least ten days' notice BY PUBLICATION IN SUCH CITY OR TOWN (italics ours) if any, or by posting such notice in three public places in the municipality."

We contend that had the law makers intended that the mayor and clerk should be left to exercise their discretion in the matter, the words "IF ANY" would have been omitted; that with those words included in the statute it becomes a matter of LAW that the notice of election SHALL BE PUBLISHED. There are two newspapers in the town of Clanton, hence it becomes necessary that it be published in one or the other of those papers.

The Press is seeking for the publication—what we are asking is that the notice of election be published as the law directs; if those who have the matter in hand prefer the other paper we shall not grumble; that is their privilege, but we shall insist that to make the election legal notice be published.

BANKING SYSTEM FEEDS SPECULATION

ANTIQUATED BANKING LAW DRIVES IDLE FUNDS INTO CALL LOAN - MARKET.

The New York banks carry loans of $2,000,000,000. This large sum is more than one-sixth of the loans of all the 25,000 banks of the country.

The New York banks now have in their vaults in cash $450,000,000. This is 30 per cent. of all the reserves carried by all the banks of the United States.

The lawful money of the country (exclusive of $700,000,000 of national bank notes) amounts to $2,900,000,000. The New York banks, therefore, have in their vaults more than one-seventh of all the lawful money in the country.

Our system of redepositing country bank reserves with city banks makes New York the central reserve of the country, just as the Bank of England is the central reserve of all England.

More than half the reserves of the country banks are now deposited with reserve city correspondents. Nearly half the reserves of the reserve city banks are deposited with the three central reserve cities. The country national banks have $500,000,000 now on deposit with city banks. The New York national banks are carrying $330,000,000 deposits for out-of-town national banks.

It is this system or depositing reserves that gives New York its great command over the banking credit of the country.

The crying evil of the system is that New York banks have only one large market in which they can keep these reserves liquid—the call loan market of the stock exchange. The enormous call loan market is based primarily on the reserves held in trust for country banks.

The concentration of the country's banking reserves in Wall Street, and the dangerously large use of bank loans in speculation, are financial phenomena due, not to the greed of a "Money Trust," but to our antiquated banking laws.

The remedy for the evil is to be found in a co-operative reserve-holding institution that will make no loans to Wall Street, but will establish a national market for commercial paper based exclusively on the productive industry of the nation.

Woman Finally Recovers From Nervous Breakdown

Impoverished nerves destroy many people before their time. Often before a sufferer realizes what the trouble is, he is on the verge of a complete nervous breakdown. It is of the utmost importance to keep your nervous system in good condition, as the nerves are the source of all bodily power. Mrs. Anna Kounz, 211 Mechanic St., Pueblo, Colo., says:

"For many years I suffered from nervous prostration; I was unable to do any house work and doctors failed to help me. Remedies I tried from druggists did not do me a particle of good. A neighbor told my husband about and he procured a bottle. After the first few doses I showed a marked improvement and after taking two bottles I was entirely cured. I have been perfectly well for years and cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine too highly."

If you are troubled with loss of appetite, poor digestion, weakness, inability to sleep; if you are in a general run down condition and unable to bear your part of the daily grind of life, you need something to strengthen your nerves. You may not realize what is the matter with you, but that is no reason why you should delay treatment.

has proven its value in nervous disorders for thirty years, and merits a trial, no matter how many other remedies have failed to help you.

Sold by all druggists. If first bottle fails to benefit your money is returned. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

FARMER WOULD PROFIT FROM BANKING REFORM

BIG BANK CUSTOMER SUFFERS FROM THE PRESENT ANTIQUATED MONETARY SYSTEM.

PAYS HIGHER INTEREST RATES THAN SPECULATOR

Cost to Consumer Raised by Discrimination Against the Producer.

The American farmer has nearly $40,000,000,000 invested in his business.

He produces $25,000,000 of new wealth every day.

He uses hundreds of millions of dollars of bank credit every crop season.

But, by reason of our antiquated banking system, the farmer bears the burden of dear money. He pays more for credit than the farmer of any other great commercial nation.

The lowest money rates in this country are paid by speculators in the financial centers; the highest rates are paid by the farmer.

The higher the rate for agricultural capital, the higher the cost of production, the higher the prices of agricultural products, and the higher the cost of living.

The farmer and the buyer of the farmer's products will both gain by a reform of our banking system.

Thirty million Americans have money in the bank.

Have you money in the bank?

Then you have a personal interest in the soundness of the banking system.

Bankers are the servants of the public. Their chief duty is the running of the machinery of credit.

Credit is the life-blood of business. Nine-tenths of the business of the country is done on credit.

If the banking system breaks down, as ours did in 1907, and as it did in '73 and in '93, the machinery of credit stops—the industry and commerce of the country is paralyzed—workingmen are thrown out of employment. The losses suffered by this country in panics are incalculable.

This periodic collapse of the machinery of credit in a rich country like ours is a national disgrace.

We have 25,000 banks in this country. The vast majority of them are sound banks, conducting their business on sound banking principles.

Our banking resources are in excess of those of any other country in the world. We have the greatest stock of gold of any country in the world.

But we have today no system of cooperation among these 25,000 banks, whereby they may use their enormous resources and this great stock of precious metal most effectively for the common good—especially in times of commercial distress.

The suspension of cash payments by the banks and the collapse of credit over the entire country in1907—a catastrope impossible in Europe in a time of peace—was due, not to the weakness of the banks, but to the weakness of the banking system.

IF WE ARE TO MAKE OUR CREDIT MACHINERY AS EFFICIENT AS THAT OF OTHER WORLD COMMERCIAL POWERS, AND IF WE ARE TO PREVENT IN THE FUTURE THE DISASTROUS LOSSES OF MONEY PANICS, WE MUST REMEDY THE RECOGNIZED EVILS IN OUR BANKING SYSTEM.

It is the duty of every bank depositor, every manufacturer, every merchant, every farmer, every wage-earner, to do his part in bringing about this reform, so vital to the interests of all the people of all the country.

It is a non-partisan question that ought to be settled without appealing to the passions and prejudices of partisan politics.

You can show your interest by writing a personal letter to your congressman, telling him that you are a bank depositor and have a personal interest in legislation which will give this country the best banking system in the world.

Every bank looks to its particular business section for patronage, but only in a small way does it return more than what becomes a safe depository for its patrons. A rejuvenation of the banking system, which would permit of more freedom in credits, would make the banks truer friends to those whose deposits permit them to exist. To this end there is demanded of congress a humanizing of banking methods to comport with the necessities of business.

If anything better than a National Reserve Association were offered for the correction of the abuses in our banking system it would have been exploited in congress. Nothing half so corrective or so appealing to the judgment has won so nation-wide an endorsement as protective of and cooperative with the interests of the wage earner, manufacturer, business man and farmer.

No reform of our banking system will be adequate or acceptable which does not divorce legitimate business from speculation.

SOMEBODY IS SICK

THAT'S why you go for the doctor. And you take care you get the best, for health is dear to all. But there is something you should watch as closely as your choice of a physician---the prescription he gives to you. Help the doctor by bringing it here.

Only the most careful selection of the freshest drugs and the greatest care in compounding that prescription can assure you of the quickest cure. Bring it here.

Everything else for the sick room carried in this store.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

GovernorO'Neal of Alabama would like the city of Montgomery to afford him better protection from midnight visitations of burglars. The governor has had five visits from burglars, which have occurred within the past few weeks. Altogether, burglars have broken into the executive mansion two times, and have attempted to break in on three other occasions. Some weeks ago several rings were taken from the governor's mansion.

John G. Kerner of Kernersville, N. C., and one of the most prominent men in that section of the state, has been shot and probably fatally wounded by a young man named Claude Dickens. Mr. Kerner had gone to his mill plant for some purpose and found several young men drinking and carousing. He intervened when, it is alleged, Dickens became insulted, ran into his house, and, picking up a shotgun, emptied the entire load into Mr. Kerner's arm and side at a range of 20 to 30 feet.

When L. I. Waxelbaum returned to his home in Macon, Ga., after an absence of four or five days, he found that his home had been converted into a hotel for burglars. The unbidden guests had evidently been making the most of their sojourn and had taken their time in ransacking the house for valuables. They had taken a mattress from one of the beds and placing it on the floor had apparently rested from their labors long enough to play a few games of cards and consume a goodly portion of Mr. Waxelbaum's supply of "nigh-beer."

General.

Four members of the family of Jefferson Ruhlo, a road worker, were killed by lightning, which struck the tent they were living in near Desota, Mo. Ruhlo, his wife, a 16-year-old daughter and a baby girl were instantly killed. A grown son escaped death, but was stunned and severely burned.

The foreclosure of the mortgage on a Montana home was prevented and the savings of a lifetime were restored to Mrs. Katherine McDonald of Butte, when congress passed the Shoshone irrigation claim bill. Mrs. McDonald will receive $11,000 of the $42,000 carried in the bill for the relief of about 400 claimants who lost heavily by the failure of a contracting firm, which was erecting the Wyoming irrigation project. President Taft approved the measure in its final form.

The massacres by the Turks have extended to the Servian frontier. Telegram received from Sientiza on the southern boundary say the Turks attacked the town and butchered several of the inhabitants. News of the massacre caused great excitement in Belgrade, and the newspapers issued special editions containing demands that the Servian government protest vigorously to the porte. The citizens are loud in their clamor for a declaration of war against Turkey.

The wrecking steam Greenwood, commanded by Captain Whitelaw, sailed from San Francisco under rush orders to reach the wreck of the steamer Pleiades, on the rocks off Magdalena bay. The haste with which the wrecker was dispatched to the scene of the accident was accounted for when the owners of the Pleiades announced that the wrecked vessel had 125 tons of dynamite stored in her.

American bluejackets have been landed at Corinto, Nicaragua to protect that port. There have been but slight disturbance, but desultory fighting between rebels and government troops continues between Corinto and Managua.

The Rev. William Booth, general and commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, is dead in London. He was born at Nottingham in 1829. The veteran Salvation Army leader was unconscious for forty-eight hours previous to his death. The medical bulletins had not revealed the seriousness of the general's condition which, it is now admitted, was hopeless. So great was General Booth's faculty for handling and inspiring men, that Marshal Wolsely once declared that the British army had taken lessons in the methods of organization, distribution and control from the Salvationists. He started his career as a soap box preacher at the age of 15 years.

It was announced at the treasury department that the Panama canal will be completed with funds now available in the treasury and that another issue of Panama canal bonds will not be necessary.

Fire caused a loss at Jamesville, N. C., estemated at $75,000, with insurance of $40,000.

Mrs. Kate Ferrell, widow of John Ferrell, a rescue worker of the United States bureau of mines, who lost his life several months ago in an attempt to save others in the Spring Valley, Pa., mine disaster, has received a cheque for $1,000 from U. S.

The Ottoman government at Constantinople has received the preliminary report formulated by the commission which investigated the massacre of more than 140 Bulgarians, August 2, near Uskup, showing that the civil and military officials of the town failed in their duties, and that the Turkish troops participated in the attacks on the Bulgarians. The government has ordered that a state of siege be proclaimed at Kotschana, and that the guilty persons be court-martialed without distinction. The authorities have dispatched $5,000 to Kotschana to be distributed among the sufferers.

A woman and a boy were killed and eight other persons were injured, one probably fatally, by lightning, which accompanied a severe electrical storm that visited St. Louis, Mo., and vicinity.

Great Britain has served notice upon the United States government that it will patricipate in the Panama exposition in San Francisco in 1915, despite the action of the United States senate in passing the Panama canal administration bill. England had entered formal complaint against the bill, which was alleged to be a violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and her hesitancy in accepting the invitation to take part in the world's fair had led to reports that there would be no English exhibit.

Attaches of the New York City district attorney's office are investigating what is believed to have been an attempt to steal evidence of grafting in the police department by breaking into the home of William Flynn, chief of the eastern division of the United States secret service.

The figures showing the amount of excavation to be done on the Panama canal indicate that the great work was five-sixths finished on August 1.

Harvey Dodd, one of the two Americans reported to have been killed in the massacre of Federal troops by rebels at Leon, Nicaragua, had served with the rank of colonel in the revolutionary army which overthrew President Zelaya in 1909.

John D. Archbold, testifying under oath before a senate committee, said that the refusal of the company to contribute $150,000 to the Republican national campaign committee in 1904, after they had given $125,000, brought down upon their heads the wrath of Theodore Roosevelt and their subsequent misfortunes. Colonel Roosevelt thanks Messrs. Archbold and Penrose for "making it clear beyond possibility of doubt that I am the man the Penroses and Archbolds of the country most dread in public life."

Five persons were seriously injured and forty were bruised and cut in the collapse of a grandstand seating 300 in University place during the formal notification of his nomination as the Democratic candidate for vice president at Indianapolis, Ind. The injured were quickly carried into the Indiana Democratic club nearby or taken to hospitals, and the notification ceremony proceeded. The grandstand had been set up on the asphalt pavement directly back of the speaker's platform. Judge Alton B. Parker was in the midst of his address when the stand swayed and sank slowly to the street.

LaViolette Pollock, a deaf mute, 19 years old, is in the St. Louis, Mo., city hospital observation ward pending an examination by physicians and city officials. Patrolman John King said he was attracted to the Pollock home by faint cries for help made by the girl. He found her holding her father in a chair at a front window. A long chain was wrapped around both of them. The father said he was trying to restrain the girl from going out, and that she had overpowered him.

Washington.

Undeterred by talk in the senate of projected resolutions regarding the constitutionality of the landing of American sailors and marines in Nicaragua, the navy department dispatched peremptory orders to navy yards on two sides of the continent to rush reinforcements to the naval forces now located far in the interior of the insurrection-torn country. Fear that the forces there are now in danger of annihilation at the hands of the insurgents prompted the order. Two thousand bluejackets and marines will be rushed to Nicaragua. This force will be sent over the Panama railroad and taken on board the cruiser California and then be rushed northward to San Juan Del Sur and Corinto.

Secretary MacVeagh, in comprehensive instructions, issued to the commission he has appointed to investigate appraising methods, condemned the appraising system of the United States, and declared its rehabilitation should unearth frauds and produce improvements to increase the Federal revenues by millions. The gross undervaluations in various lines of importations which have beep exposed by a general reform of the customs service, the secretary said, have conclusively shown that the grave defects of the appraising branch to go beyond any accurate knowledge the trade has acquired.

The Moss committee presented to the house two reports of its investigation of the Florida Everglades charges and the subsequent inquiry into the drainage division of the department of agriculture. The reports take up the charge that a certain circular unfavorable to the sale of Everglade lands was suppressed. Secretary Wilson escaped personal arraignment. The minority report held that Secretary Wilson had acted within his legal discretion. Both majority and minority agreed that the dismissal of Elliott and Morehouse on technical charges was "over discipline."

Several large orders are understood to have been placed by local pig iron dealers within the last few days One company has just completed a deal for 50,000 tons to be delivered this fall and has also negotiated for 15,000 tons for the first quarter of next year at $12.50. THE GREAT AMERICAN PRODUCER WILL HAVE FAIR TREATMENT

NOT RIGHT LEADER

COLONEL ROOSEVELT'S RECORD IS NOT CONVINCING OF HIS FULL SINCERITY.

TOO FRIENDLY TO PRIVILEGE

People Will Judge Him By His Inaction Concerning Tariff While President and Will Not Accept Lofty Phrases of Altruism.

Mr. Roosevelt opened his campaign in Massachusetts with a telling speech. It was expressed with a good deal more than his usual skill of rhetoric. It was more than ordinarily free from bitter and abusive personalities. It was pretty much confined to general appeal, and it was couched in the spirit of lofty morality and altruism which he has deliberately chosen to adopt in the presentation of his claims to a third term. We say this in no mood of hypercriticism. We simply note as a matter of significance and importance that Mr. Roosevelt has assumed the role of ethical and even religious prophet and reformer, and that he hopes thereby to attain his personal aims.

The sentiment to which he appeals is of immense strength and virtue. It is the saving salt of humanity. It is the force that has advanced the race from its low beginnings more than any other. So far as Mr. Roosevelt can persuade the public that he is sincere, that his aims are honestly pursued, that his methods are intelligent and practical, he will unquestionably win support. Nor that alone, he will deserve it. For it is not to be forgotten that in the actual situation of public affairs in this country the sentiment of morality and altruism is extraordinarily excited. It takes the general form of resentment of the reign of privilege. Mr. Roosevelt is seeking to convince the people that he is the embodiment of that resentment, and if he can convince them of that he will have a great following; there has been and still is a reign of privilege excessively oppressive, and it should be, must be, and will be ended.

Is Mr. Roosevelt the man to accomplish this, to lead in it, even fairly to begin it? We are persuaded that he is not. The worst type of privilege resting on legislation in this country is the so-called protective tariff. It is also the most corrupt and corrupting force in our affairs. Mr. Roosevelt was at the head of the government for nearly eight years, and he did nothing to lessen this privilege or to abate its evil consequences. He refrained from doing anything in his first term when it was plain that resistance to the tariff extortions would absolutely prevent his nomination. That is a fair and practical test of his sincerity. We think that it will be applied to his present proposals to the people, and that it will be fatal. His professed purpose as to the future will hardly help him. He now says that he is in favor of a revision of the tariff by a non-partisan commission. So is Mr. Taft. Each of them contemplates a revision that will leave the protective principle, and the favoritism inherent in it, in full force. Mr. Roosevelt in this thing—and it is the most important thing in sight—plainly has no intention of ending the reign of privilege.

Most of his first address in Massachusetts was devoted to fervent advocacy of the general notion of industrial amelioration and general denunciation of the courts for preventing it. He has no monopoly of this matter. His criticism of the courts is based on misrepresntation, on exaggeration, and is singularly sophistical. A reasonable analysis of his professions and his ideas, so far as he has consented to define them, shows a very pale and ineffectual conception of the great subject with which he is undertaking to deal. That analysis will be made in the course of the next two months. The American people will not take high sounding and, for the moment, telling protestations of superior humanity as proof of Mr. Roosevelt's peculiar fitness for the Presidency.—N. Y. Times.

WAS TIME TO CALL A HALT

Democratic Modification of Civil Service Law Justified By Acts of Public Servants.

The Democratic members of congress have committed themselves to a modification of the civil service law which limits tenure of office of government employes to seven years. This modification appears to have been suggested by the results of investigations of the executive departments which, in round numbers, employ 23,000 people resident in Washington alone. Through organization these employes have established conditions and exerted influences which the Democrats do not believe yield to the government the highest degree of efficiency. The Democrats may be right.

There is no doubt whatever that the Democrats have pretty good grounds for assuming the position they have. Even though their claims concerning the efficiency of civil service protected employes should not be wholly sustained by critical examination of service rendered, the fact remains that there are approximately 200,000 men and women scattered over the country who yield political service to the administration to which they owe appointment, and to the party which secured such appointment. It is notorious that during the ante-convention campaign just concluded there were no more active partisans than those holding federal office. The tendency of civil service protection is toward license, which, carried to extremes, would prove mischievous in this country. Even Grover Cleveland denounced "pernicious activity" on the part of such employes.

The underlying principle of civil service is reward for efficiency and faithfulness in official duties. If its protection of office holders extended only so far, it would give the country thoroughly trained, high class public servants. If its prohibitions were more rigorously enforced there would be less "pernicious activity" in political affairs. But they are not. Whether it be the fault of the administration or the party in power, public servants have been becoming political bosses to such an extent that the Democrats have had the courage to call a halt.

Too Radical for Democrats.

Mr. Hilles is probably right in the belief that Mr. Roosevelt will draw from both of the old parties. But certainly not in numbers from the Democratic party. For he must be intense in his radicalism indeed who leaves the Democratic party at this time to go experimenting with such a man as Theodore Roosevelt, with his bag of traps and tricks.—Washington Star.

Jingoes Must Be Satisfied.

After all the pother over battleships, one new one is authorized, and we hope that the jingoes will not lose sleep that there are not two. The most alarming thing that has come from the naval experts is that battleships are no good unless they come in sets. An odd one is a great nuisance. The most powerful ship in the world would be a detriment unless there were enough of her to make a squadron. But as the styles change radically every four or five years, we should have only the more obsolete vessels to discard if we built several at a time. We can't order superdreadnoughts in half-dozen lots without bankrupting ourselves for the production of warships that will go out of fashion as soon as the hats of women.

Bourke Cockran has come out for Roosevelt, but our opinion is the colonel's word mill needs no reinforcement. What he needs is votes and Bourke is a political scarecrow.

JIM WATSON SAYS DEMOCRATS WILL WIN

INDIANA POLITICIAN PREDICTS VICTORY FOR GOV. WILSON.

"Jim" Watson, the Indiana politician, who conducted the steam-roller that brought about Taft's nomination at Chicago, once Republican whip in the lower house of Congress, once Republican nominee for Governor of his State and who recently declined the nomination for Governor, was in Montgomery Tuesday and predicted the election of Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall in November.

"There is no use is being secretive about," said Mr. Watson, "for taking things as they now stand there is no way in the world to defeat the Democratic ticket. I say this notwithstanding the fact that I am an ardent supporter of the President, have done nothing the last two months but work for him and will be on the firing line until the election is over.

"Our party is split in two, and what can we hope for? If the Democrats ever had an opportunity to win, now is the time. Of course, in making predictions, I am talking from an August point of view, for nobody knows what the first of November will find. Elections have been won and lost in a week or two."

Mr. Watson takes the position that if the election should be held now Roosevelt and Taft would split even, allowing the Democrats to carry practically all the States. He says the South does not overestimate Taft's weakness nor overestimate Roosevelt's strength. He would not undertake to name the States that either will carry, confessing that he does not know what the most rock-ribbed Republican States will do.

REPUBLICAN PARTY SPLIT.

"What's the use?" asks Mr. Watson, steam-rolling the question right on Chicago-like and giving his own answer. "Neither Taft nor Roosevelt can hurt the Democrats with things running like they are now. Our party is split to flinders, and why discuss the few doubtful States? I am going to campaign in Maine and Vermont," looking at the reporter with his keen blue eyes, "but, died in the wool Republican as they are, I confess I am at sea over the outcome."

Admitting that the Democrats will carry Indiana, Mr. Watson said he would not attempt to point out any State as one that will give Taft or Roosevelt its electoral votes.

"Now I am not pessimistic," Mr. Watson said, explaining why he speaks out so freely on the political outlook. "But I am simply giving the thing as I see it, believing that it never hurts me or my party to be honest about the weaknesses."

While Mr. Watson would not say as much, he indicated that it is no longer the hooe of his party leaders to elect Taft, bnt an innate desire to defeat Roosevelt. He declared Tom Taggart and other Democratic leaders in Indiana know his position, and says: "All I want the Democrats to do is to vote their ticket."—Advertiser.

"What the Traffic Will Bear"

It would be a violation of every sound business principle for a merchant, on opening his store, to adopt a policy of exacting from his patrons the highest possible margin of profit. He wouldn't have many customers very long.

It would be a violation of every sound farming principle for a planter, on clearing his land for cultivation, to adopt a policy of exacting from the soil each year a maximum yield without taking steps to conserve the fertility of the soil.

"What the traffic will bear," a phrase common in railroad circles, is directly applicable to these self-evident business and farming principles. It means simply at how LOW a rate of freight can a railroad afford to transport any given commodity from point of production to point of consumption to enable the grower, or manufacturer, or jobber, to profitably produce or trade in that particular commodity in competition with a similar commodity transported from any other point of production to point of consumption.

The object the railroad has in fixing the rate of freight as LOW as possible is identical with the object of the merchant in operating on a narrow margin of profit, or the farmer in conserving the fertility of the soil which yields him a crop.

A low freight rate will frequently create production and stimulate the movement, or transportation, of a commodity over the lines of the railroad along which it is grown, or manufactured, or traded in. Not until commodities are transported over its lines has a railroad an earning power; and not until a railroad has an earning power does it become a constructive, a stimulating, a wealth-creating factor in the interest of the territory through which it operates.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company long ago recognized that proposition as the base of the free and unfettered movement of all traffic and of all traffic interchange. The L. & N. has therefore exerted equal effort to build up the territory through which its lines operate as it exerted to develop and build up the L. & N. itself. The L. & N. realized that the prosperity of the territory was essential to the prosperity of the railroad; that the interests of the railroad and the interests of the territory were identical; that what benefits the one benefits the other, and that what injures the one injures the other.

If this were not so, how many industries would now be in existence in Alabama? And if these industries were not in existence in Alabama, how would it be possible for the Louisville & Nashville to afford adequate transportation facilities to the people of Alabama?

We invite fair consideration by the thoughtful people of Alabama of these and other questions bearing on the relations of the L. & N. to the people.

the candidates, we are also ed, spoke in commendation new party and signified their willingness to fight under its emblem.

A vote was taken and it was so decided.

The meeting was a distinct failure when expectations are taken into consideration. It was thought that not less than seven hundred and fifty to a thousand stalwart republicans would be in attendance; in reality the meeting did not number over three hundred and fifty counting all noses. In that meeting were a number of democrats, a good sprinkling of socialists and a number of regular republicans, all of whom went merely as spectators. Those taking actual part in the convention wound not number over three hundred at best.

A brass band was called into requisition to rally the "boys" and to enthuse their souls. It played one little tune on the way to the "meeting house" and never a chirp did it utter after that. The cool, damp atmosphere of that exceedingly warm, sultry day drooped their spirits so that they could not get up courage to pump wind into their instruments—it wasn't their fault either; the time, the occasion and the crowd just would not furnish the necessary inspiration.

Judge Longshore, of Shelby, who was recently turned out of the republican party, was on hand to "whoop 'em up" for "the boys" to do his best—and that's saying lots—but it just wouldn't go somehow or somehow else.

Mr. T. C. Bingham, Secy. and Treas. of the "regular republican" campaign committe of the state, was here as a "looker on" getting the facts in the case for the regular organization. He did not care for hearsay testimony, he wanted the personal eye-sight, ear-hear testimony of his own individuality and "he got it!" He went away thoroughly disgusted. While here he showed the editor of this paper a letter from Mr. Chas. J. Allison, State Campaign chairman of the republican party, to the effect that in case an attempt was made by Chilton Republicans to go over to the third party the regular republican party of the state would take a hand, reorganize the party in the county and put out a regular republican ticket.

This letter was endorsed by State Chairman, Pope M. Long, who is the Republican referee for President Taft in Alabama. Just what he will do in the premises is unknown but there is to be a meeting of Republicans in Birmingham soon that will take the matter up and thresh it out to a final conclusion.

The Press would like to say that there is no more Republican party in Chilton, but this pleasure is denied us; there is a Republican party here and it is going to give the Democrats some trouble. They are active, alert, have the endorsement of the state and national officers and will wield a big influence in the coming campaign.

The new party will not prove much of a factor in county, state or national politics; already Mr. Roosevelt is losing ground, and losing it fast. Having been put on the defensive by Senator Penrose and Mr. Archbold; having had it proved that he did knowingly accept large contributions from trusts and corporations to finance his campaign, even though he vigorously denied it, having stolen the platform of the Socialists and incorporated it in his own platform as original matter, he is today standing where long ago he should have stood—as a man seeking power regardless of the way he gets it or whom he destroys in achieving success.

The local party, like the national party, will soon die of its own weight; with any other persons leading it except Roosevelt and Perkins, the one a throne seeker, the other a trust maker, it might succeed, but with these two it can't survive the wave of popular government now sweeping the country.

But we have wandered from our subject.

The mass meeting was addressed by a number. Judge Reynolds, in the course of his remarks, we understand, stated that anyone who came into Chilton to put out a new ticket would be inspired by local democrats and was a traitor to the people.

This may be true, we do not pretend to deny it, but whether true or not, that thing, we have been informed, is going to be done and there will be found many "traitors" who will take a part in it, if such be traitorism.

After the formation of the new party, an executive committee was chosen with Hon. J. O. Middleton as Chairman. Mr, Middleton was once the representative from this county, elected by the so-called republicans.

Judge Reynolds, of course, having left the Republican party, also tendered his resignation as the nominee of that party for congress from this district; or rather, he failed to accept the nomination tendered, for he never formally accepted it. He is also a member of the state committee and chairman of the district committee; what his action with reference to these two committees will be is not known to this paper, but it is presumed he will retire from them.

Thus have the mighty fallen! Thus the grave, the silent grave of oblivion, claims its victims, who once gloried in their strength and prowess.

Crafty old Ulysses in his palmy day looked forward to a time when he should rule a world; the syrens tempted and he fell; true he was victor over the great Cyclops and won many a hard fought battle, but old Ulyses is a thing of the past—so are some of the "world powers" in the political field hereabouts.

Once they gloried in their democracy; once they told the people how the downtrodden people of the south were being abused by the money powers of Wall Street: once they screamed loud and long for "victory, victory, victory" under the banner of the "plain people as represented by the democracy."

They cried lustily for the cause in those halcyon days.

Then democracy—that is the democracy of Alabama—made one mistake; it was not a fatal mistake, but some of those who proclaimed their ardent affections for her never forgave that mistake; others did forgive, and they not only forgave but FORGOT! They came back into the party they loved and they worked untiringly for her principles. Many, very many of them are today occupying places of trust and honor and emolument because of their loyalty. But of those who refused to forgive—what of them?

THOUGHT THE CUP EMPTY.

They went off into a third party—the populite party—and there, under the influence of "leaders," they remained till hope deferred made the heart sick, and rather than come back to the old roof tree they destroyed, or attempted to destroy, the ancient landmarks: loving the enemy more than they loved their brethren at home they pitched their tents toward Sodom because the "pickings" in that direction looked abundant.

HOW LONG DID THEY STAY?

Less than the time Jacob served for his Rachel; yea even less than his service for Leah the despised. But they remained as long as there was "fodder in the rack," and then leaving the faithful few to their fate, like Roderick of other days, hied themselves to other fields. No blast upon their bugle horns encourged their clansmen, but with apparent cowardice they sought pastures new and greener glades.

HOW MANY CHANGES?

Well, it's been about four in a score of years. The world whirls through space at the rate of nineteen miles a second, but then the world has been in business for some millions of cycles, hence it is not "going" quite as rapidly as doth those of Chilton who change four times in a score of years.

LEADERSHIP.

There's an old adage which says "All things comes to him who waits" but evidently some of our leaders—or rather some of the political leaders in this section of the inhabited globe—do not believe in the truth of that adage.

They want to be on the move. It's a case of "Tramp, tramp, tramp the boys are marching," but will "the boys," tramp to another field with the leaders? Will they be haltered and hobbled and carried about it will? Perhaps they will, but we do not believe one word of it; we are of the opinion that "marching to orders" has become a tiresome job with a large number of them, and that they will either remain where their present camp is pitched or else they will go back to the house of their fathers, and like the Prodigal Son, receive the kiss of welcome, be presented with the ring of authority and affection, have a feast made in their honor and be made to know that they are indeed and in truth in the old home, the home where first they saw the light, where, in the days agone, they found happiness and joy.

We shall see, and we will not have to wait many days to see it.

MRS. PINCKARD ENTERTAINS

On Friday afternoon the hospitable home of Mrs. E. M. Pinckard was thrown open to her friends when she entertained in her own charming manner at a bridge party in honor of her sister, Mrs. W. D. Pinckard, of Gadsden.

The beautiful home was tastefully decorated with choice flowers grown from the hostess' own garden. The punch table was elaborately decorated with smilax and gorgeous pink blossoms, over which Miss Emmett Matthews gracefully presided, wearing a beautiful lingerie over pink.

Mrs. W. D. Pinckard, the attractive guest of honor, was attired in a magnificent soft clinging costume of pink lingerie.

Mrs. E. M. Pinckard, the charming hostess, was gowned in a lovely costume of real lace.

The highest score prize, a beautiful pair of silk hose, won by Mrs. Watts Moore. The consolation prize, two beautiful point de sprit kerchiefs, was drawn by Mrs. Amzi Gowan. The guest prize, a magnificent cut glass fern dish, was presented to the house guest Mrs. W. D. Pinckard. A delicious salad and ice course was served.

Mrs. Pinckard, a charming matron of Gadsden, is a great social favorite in Clanton. Upon previous visits by her sweet personality she has attracted a host of admiring friends.

Deputy C. W. Cox Killed

Fatally Shot Friday Last By Ed Martin

Dispute Over Business Transaction the Cause of Killing

Last Friday about noon Deputy Sheriff, C. W. Cox met death by a gunshot wound inflicted by Ed Martin one mile west of Clanton. While the wound did not produce instant death, Mr. Cox was never conscious after the fatal shot was fired.

But meager details of the affair can be secured even at this late day from the fact that there was but one eye witness besides the principals, and he has gone

Mr. Cox and Mr. Martin, so our information goes, were farming on shares—Cox furnishing the land and the stock, while Martin did the actual work on the farm.

In the early summer a dispute arose between the two men in which Cox accused Martin of using his (Cox's) corn and oats for personal purposes rather than for feeding it to the stock; this Martin denied and a lawsuit ensued. Martin was cleared of the charge, but the bitterness that then sprang up between the two never was dispelled. Later Martin warned Cox not to come on the place again, but as he had a perfect right under the law to go on his own place, it not being rented for a stipulated sum, he continued to go to the place. Besides this, it is stated, that Cox reserved, in his rental agreement, the lower floor of the barn on the place for his own personal use, and without doubt, if this be true, he had a right to go to that barn. But, we know nothing of these things and are merely giving out what we have gleaned in order that the reading public may have all the facts and rumors connected with the homicide possible to obtain.

Cox, having been warned to remain off the place, was, on his next visit there, arrested and tried for trespassing. This suit was decided in favor of Cox, the Court holding that he had a right on the place under the terms of the rental agreement. Mr. Cox also owned and operated land adjoining the farm operated by Mr. Martin.

It was developed in the trespass trial, it appears, that Martin was permitting the fodder on the place to go to ruin, as he had not gathered any during the year; thereupon an agreement was made for Cox to gather his half of the fodder,

This, it seems, was the business of Cox on the place Friday—the day he met his death.

At the time he went to the place Martin and his family and a Mr. Payton who boards with Mr. Martin, were at dinner; they must have been conversing at that particular time about Cox, for as he appeared Martin took up a shotgun saying, "There there he is now", and rushed from the door.

In a conversation on the streets Mr. Payton stated, so it is said, that the shooting occurred so quickly that he had no opportunito go to Martin or Cox. Mr Payhas since left Clanton and his statement could not be verified, but it was heard, so said by a number of witnesses. If true, but little conversation could have taken place between the two principals after Martin left the house.

Mr. Martin on his way to jail stated that the affair occurred so quickly that he scarcely knew how to tell of it. He also stated that when he went into the yard he told Cox not to go into his lot and that Cox replied he would go in there or one of the two would go dead.

Mr. Cox being unconscious after the shooting no verification or denial of these statements could be secnred.

The shots entered the right side of the face almost completely severing the head from the body; several shots struck the right hand.

Just how these are accounted for is not known. Some seem to think that Cox held a pistol in the direction of Martin when the shot was fired and that a stay bullet or two tore away the fingers which clasped the pistol. Others seem to think that Cox, when he saw that Martin was going to shoot, threw up his hand to shield his face or else to warn him not to shoot.

Mr. Cox was hurriedly brought to Clanton immediately after the shooting and carried to the office of Dr. Hopkins where his wounds were dressed; no operation was attempted as it was known he could not survive more than an hour or two at the best; and would assuredly die under an operation.

Soon after his death, which occurred on the afternoon of the shooting, a coroners' Jury was empannelled consisting of Messrs W. I. Mullins, Mc D. Broadhead, J. W, E. Gulledge, T. J. Littlejohn, B E. Jones and J. P. Gore, who after the examination of several witnesses and a visit to the scene of the shooting rendered a verdict stating substantially that Mr. Cox came to his death by gun shot wounds inflicted by a gun in the hands of Mr. Ed. Martin. The funeral services of Mr. Cox took place Saturday afternoon attended by a large concourse of friends and relatives. The exercises were conducted by the Masons and Woodmen conjointly, assisted by Revs. Olive and Mills.

Mr. Cox is survived by his widow and a young stepdaughter of eight or ten years, also his six brothers, all of whom were present at the funeral.

In connection with the shooting it is stated in substantiation of the statement of Martin that Cox had first attacted him that a pistol was

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland. James Armstrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Maitland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping. Fate brings all the actors together. Newbold returns from hunting game and sees a man near the hut. It is James Armstrong, who has at last located the missing girl, and he enters the cabin. Armstrong pleads his love for Enid, but she reminds him of his affection for Newbold's wife. He grows insulting and Enid orders him from her presence. Newbold returns opportunely. He discovers the truth about Armstrong and would have killed him but for the interference of Kirkby and Maitland, who came upon the scene. It develops that Armstrong was engaged in a plot to separate Newbold and his wife. He clears the woman's name and afterward ends his own life.

CHAPTER XXIV (Continued).

"Do you by any chance belong to the Maryland Newbolds, sir?"

"Yes, they are distantly related to a most excellent family of the same name in Philadelphia, I believe."

"I have always understood that to be the truth."

"Ah, a very satisfactory connection indeed," said Stephen Maitland with no little satisfaction. "Proceed, sir."

"There is nothing much else to say about myself, except that I love your daughter and with your permission I want her for my wife."

Mr. Maitland had thought long and seriously over the state of affairs. He had proposed in his desperation to give her hand to Armstrong if he found her. It had been impossible to keep secret the story of her adventure, her rescue and the death of Armstrong. It was natural and inevitable that gossip should have busied itself with her name. It would therefore have been somewhat difficult for Mr. Maitland to have withheld his consent to her marriage to almost any reputable man who had been thrown so intimately with her, but when the man was so unexceptionably born and bred as Newbold, what had appeared as a more or less disagreeable duty, almost an imperative imposition, became a pleasure!

Mr. Maitland was no bad judge of men when his prejudices were not rampant, and he looked with much satisfaction on the fine, clean limbed, clear eyed, vigorous man who was at present suing for his daughter's hand. Newbold had shaved off his beard and had cropped close his mustache; he was dressed in the habits of civilization and he was almost metamorphosed. His shyness wore away as he talked and his inherited ease of manner and his birthright of good breeding came back to him and sat easily upon him.

Under the circumstances the very best thing that could happen would be a marriage between the two, indeed to be quite honest, Mr. Stephen Maitland would have felt that perhaps under any circumstances his daughter could do no better than commit herself to a man like this.

"I shall never attempt," he said at last, "to constrain my daughter. I think I have learned something by my touch with this life here; perhaps we of Philadelphia need a little broadening in life more free. I am sure that she would never give her hand without her heart, and therefore, she must decide this matter herself. From her own lips you shall have your answer."

"But you, sir; I confess that I should feel easier and happier if I had your sanction and approval."

"Steve," said Mr. Robert Maitland, as the other hesitated, not because he intended to refuse, but because he was loath to say the word that so far as he was concerned would give this daughter into another man's keeping, "I think you can trust Newbold; there are men who knew him years ago; there is abundant evidence and testimony as to his qualities, I vouch for him."

"Robert," answered his brother, "I need no such testimony; the way in which he saved Enid, the way he comported himself during that period of isolation with her, his present bearing—in short, sir, if a father is ever glad to give away his daughter, I might say I should be glad to entrust her to you. I believe you to be a man of honor and a gentleman; your family is almost as old as my own; as for the disparity in our fortunes, I can easily remedy that."

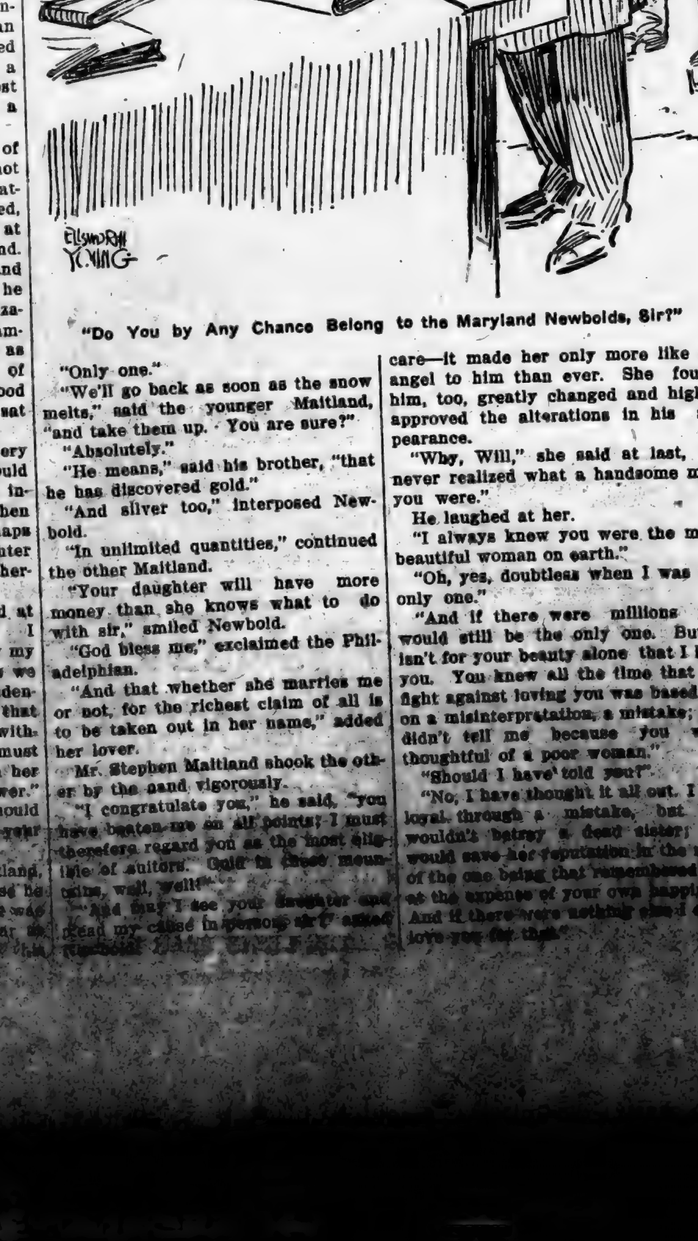
Newbold smiled at Enid's father, but it was a pleasant smile; albeit with a trace of mockery and a trace of triumph in it.

"Mr. Maitland, I am more grateful to you than I can say for your consent and approval which I shall do my best to merit. I think I may claim to have won your daughter's heart; to have added to that your sanction completes my happiness. As for the disparity in our fortunes, while your generosity touches me profoundly, I hardly think that you need be under any uneasiness as to our material welfare."

"What do you mean?"

"I am a mining engineer, sir; I didn't live five years alone in the mountains of Colorado for nothing."

"Pray, explain yourself, sir."



"Did you find gold in the hills?" asked Robert Maitland, quicker to understand.

"The richest veins on the continent," answered Newbold.

"And nobody knows anything about it?"

"Not a soul."

"Have you located the claims?"

"Do You by Any Chance Belong to the Maryland Newbolds, Sir?"

"Only one."

"We'll go back as soon as the snow melts," said the younger Maitland, "and take them up. You are sure?"

"Absolutely."

"He means," said his brother, "that he has discovered gold."

"And silver too," interposed Newbold.

"In unlimited quantities," continued the other Maitland.

"Your daughter will have more money than she knows what to do with sir," smiled Newbold.

"God bless me," exclaimed the Philadelphian.

"And that whether she marries me or not, for the richest claim of all is to be taken out in her name," added her lover.

Mr. Stephen Maitland shook the other by the hand vigorously.

"I congratulate you," he said, "you have beaten me on all points; I must therefore regard you as the most eligible of suitors. Gold in these mountains, well, well!"

"And may I see your daughter and plead my cause in person, sir?" asked Newbold.

"Certainly, certainly. Robert, will you oblige me—"

In compliance with his brother's gesture, Robert Maitland touched the bell and bade the answering servant ask Miss Maitland to come to the library.

"Now," said Mr. Stephen Maitland as the servant closed the door, "you and I would leave the young people alone. Eh, Robert?"

"By all means," answered the younger, and opening the door again the two older men went out leaving Newbold alone.

"But I don't quite understand," queried Mr. Stephan Maitland.

He heard a soft step on the stair in the hall without; the gentle swish of a dress as somebody descended from the floor above. A vision appeared in the doorway. Without a movement in opposition, without a word of remonstrance, without a throb of hesitation on her part, he took her in his arms. From the drawing-room opposite, Mr. Robert Maitland softly tiptoed across the hall and closed the library door, neither of the lovers being aware of his action.

Often and often they had longed for each other on the opposite side of a door, and now at last the woman was in the man's arms and no door rose between them, no barrier kept them apart any longer. There was no obligation of loyalty or honor, real or imagined, to separate them now. They had drunk deep of the chalice of courage, they had drained the cup to the very bottom, they had shown each other that though love was the greatest of passions, honor and loyalty were the most powerful of forces, and now they reaped the reward of their abnegation and devotion.

At last the woman gave herself up to him in complete and entire abandonment without fear and without reproach; and at last the man took what was his own without the shadow of a reservation. She shrank from no pressure of his arms, she turned her face away from no touch of his lips. They two had proved their right to surrender by their ability to conquer.

Speech was hardly necessary between them, and it was not for a long time that coherent words came. Little murmurs of endearment, little passionate whispers of a beloved name—these were enough then.

When he could find strength to deny himself a little and to hold her at arm's length and look at her, he found her paler, thinner and more delicate than when he had seen her in the mountains. She had on some witching creation of pale blue and silver; he didn't know what it was; he didn't care—it made her only more like an angel to him than ever. She found him, too, greatly changed and highly approved the alterations in his appearance.

"Why, Will," she said at last, "I never realized what a handsome man you were."

He laughed at her.

"I always knew you were the most beautiful woman on earth."

"Oh, yes, doubtless when I was the only one."

"And if there were millions you would still be the only one. But it isn't for your beauty alone that I love you. You knew all the time that my fight against loving you was based upon a misinterpretation, a mistake; you didn't tell me because you were thoughtful of a poor woman."

"Should I have told you?"

"No, I have thought it all out. I was loyal through a mistake, but you wouldn't betray a dead sister; you would save her reputation in the mind of the one being that remembered her, at the expense of your own happiness. And if there were nothing else I could love you for that."

"And is there anything else?" asked she who would fain be loved for other qualities.

"Everything," he answered, rapturously drawing her once more to his heart.

"I knew that there would be some way," answered the satisfied woman softly after a little space; "love like ours is not born to fall short of the completest happiness. Oh, how fortunate for me was that idle impulse that turned me up the canon instead of down, for if it had not been for that there would have been no meeting—"

She stopped suddenly, her face aflame at the thought of the conditions of that meeting; she must needs hide her face on his shoulder.

He laughed gayly.

"My little spirit of the fountain, my love, my wife that is to be! Did you know that your father had done me the honor to give me your hand, subject to the condition that your heart goes with it?"

"You took that first," answered the woman looking up at him again.

There was a knock on the door. Without waiting for permission it was opened; this time three men entered, for old Kirkby had joined the group. The blushing Enid made an impulsive movement to tear herself away from Newbold's arms, but he shamefully held her close. The three men looked at the two lovers solemnly for a moment and then broke into laughter. It was Kirkby who spoke first.

"I hear as how you found gold in them mountains, Mr. Newbold."

"I found something far more valuable than all the gold in Colorado in these moutnains," answered the other.

"And what was that?" asked the old frontiersman, curiously and innocently.

"This!" answered Newbold as he kissed the girl again.

(THE END.)

Wife Who Nags.

The worst thing that the bad fairy could wish upon a man is a nagging, fault-finding wife. The most savory of the dishes prepared by her hand tastes flat and stale if served up with the sauce of her complaints, and the cosiest of homes is a place of unrest if it is the storehouse of her recriminations. Even if there is just cause for jealousy, nagging is an aggravation rather than a cure.

It breeds the spirit of antagonism and the case of the injured party is hurt rather than helped.

The only safe cure for straying affections is to make oneself so attractive, so agreeable, that the desired love and attention is irresistibly held to its original moorings. Sometimes sudden evidence of indifference awakes the errant one to the fact that the straying may be mutual. Sometimes renewed outbursts of affection, of care and interest, is the tonic of weakened ardor. Sometimes splendid results are accomplished by wearing smart and becoming clothes and brushing up the wits and vivacity.

Big Bags of British Hunters.

The shooting in Great Britain for 1911 is over as far as grouse are concerned. The heaviest one-day bag obtained in Scotland was that of Lord Dalkeith and his party on the Duke of Buccleuch's Roanfell moor, in Roxburghshire, when eight guns killed 2,523 birds.

In England the best one-day bag was that of the Duc de Luynes and five other guns on Lord Strathmore's Wemmergill moors in the Upper Lunedale district of Durham; 1,599 birds were killed during four drives in stormy weather.

On the Duke of Devonshire's Upper Wharfedale moore in Yorkshire 14,918 birds were killed in twenty-two days, all by driving, and there were usually nine guns out. The best bag was obtained on August 18th, when the King was included in the party, and nine guns killed 1,580 birds on the Barden and Rylstone moors.

Like a Lawyer.

Dr. Cyrus Cutler, the well known Springfield surgeon, is a member of the Colonial club, an institution that fines its members for talking shop, relates the New York Tribune.

Dr. Cutler, getting out of his motor car, entered the Colonial club the other day for luncheon, and, advancing into the restaurant, said to a lawyer as he took off his goggles:

"Well, old man, how are you?"

The lawyer got Dr. Cutler fined then and there for talking shop.

The next day when he arrived at the club again for luncheon, the surgeon, angered at what had happened, cut the lawyer. The latter then had him fined once more.

TURTLE HUNTING IN FLORIDA

HAUNT OF THE TURTLE.

It is only during very recent years that common turtles, or loggerheads, and the easily raised water terrapin have been fully appreciated as articles of food that may be commonly enjoyed, instead of relegated to form the choice dish of banquets. The northern former, with drainage streams forming an important feature of his land, and the owner of spring-fed ponds on suburban gounds, may learn much from the turtle industry of the south that will prove interesting as well as practical. In the early days, when all that portion of the coast of Florida swept by the Gulf of Mexico, afforded abundant hunting ground for turtles, they were such a common article of food that they were little appreciated, but during recent years their commercial value has increased.

The most important commercially are the green turtle, the turnkbacks, the hawkbills and the loggerheads. Though some of them weigh only a few pounds, there are some mammoth specimens captured, the claim being made, on good authority, that the largest have been known to reach a weight of 1,200 pounds. The green turtle is also known as the Chelonia mydas, and is the variety most prized by the natives of Southern Florida.

Captured by Nets.

At the present day turtles are captured mainly by nets, and also from the land by probing into their hiding-places along the banks of streams with a turtle-hook fastened to a long, stout pole. What is known as "turtle-turning" is mainly followed as a sport by boys. But the old residents claim that in the early days turtle-turning was made the most important manner of capture, as well as sport. An early authority thus tells of the method used:

"Here (along the southern coast of Florida) one can follow the most sardonic of all sports—turtle-catching. You walk along the lovely beach at night, when the turtle has come up from the waters to deposit her hundreds of eggs. You see one. You advance, and coolly turn it over on its back—and that is all. You leave it leisurely and pursue your stroll; turn another on its back, leave it, and so on until you are tired. When you come again on the morrow there they are. To walk up to a turtle in the morning, having treated him in this manner over night, and look steadily in the eye thereof without certain titillating sensations at once in your diaphragm (where you laugh), and in your conscience (where you do not laugh) requires more grim rigidity of the former and more supple elasticity of the latter than some people possess. Nor can there be anything in life, considered without reference to your own act in making it so, more preposterous than an upturned turtle lying, poor innocent, on its mildly convex back, with its mildly white eyes staring weakly at heaven, and its flippers wriggling in flabby helplessness toward the four quarters of the earth."

In these more practical days one questions why they should have been turned on their backs, thus to remain over night. Why there was not a possibility of some one else getting there first in the morning and reaping the fruits of the "turner's" labor. Why there was not considerable danger of the "wriggling flippers" giving the sudden twist that will send the average small turtle "right side up with care," after a few effective struggles, and why it would not be just as easy, and much more sensible, on going a-turtling, to take along means of carrying home the prizes when first caught, instead of allowing them to lie on their backs until morning.

Only a few years ago, when the turtle industry first began to be appreciated from its commercial standpoint, the beef and turtle markets of Key West stood side by side, many preferring the latter as a regular meat supply, and it then began to be a profitable industry to ship turtles alive to the northern markets, not only from Key West, but from all along the southern coast of Florida. The turtle eggs are also valued as food, and the pioneer settlers in the far south found them a very appreciable item in their provisioning, as the large varieties of turtles have been known to lay from 100 to 300 eggs in each nest. What is known as the Florida "gopher" is a species of tortoise of terrapin, that burrows in the sandy soil and furnishes very acceptable food. Gopher calipash is the most popular dish made from this small turtle.

Among the visitors to the famous turtling grounds along the coast of Florida, inquiry is often made as to why the name tortoise is so seldom applied to the many varieties of marine chelonians found on the borders of the Gulf of Mexico. It is true that tortoise is the correct name for all these various species—both the land and the marine species—as the name is derived from various French and Latin words meaning twisted, crooked or contorted, describing the crookedness of the curious feet and head protruding from the tortoise shell. How the tortoise of early days became known by the name of turtle is explained by the fact that certain species of sea-turtles show such great affection for their mates, that the name of turtle (from turtle-dove celebrated for the constancy of its affection) came to be applied to them. Later the name turtle was applied to many species of the marine tortoises, with turkey frequently used for the species found in the West Indies.

Green Turtle the Favorite.

Among the private turtle ponds owned and operated by progressive Florida farmers who possess many acres of submerged land bordering famous turtle streams, many interesting features await the study of the northern tourist. The green turtle is the favorite, not only because of its fame in regard to "green turtle soup," but also for the delicacy of its flesh for various articles of diet. The tortoise shell of commercial value is also most highly prized when secured from the green turtle, with its delicate colorings. Both the upper shell—the carapace, or carapax; and the lower shell—the platron, are utilized for articles and ornaments of commercial value. The most common method of preparing the shells for use is to soften them by means of boiling. They are then formed into various shapes, or are flattened by being passed through a press.

The Florida native entertains the visitor with many interesting legends and traditions concerning the numerous turtles commonly known in the early days as Chelonias. This name, applied to various river and sea tortoises, was derived, 'tis said, from the beautiful nymph Chelonia of mythological fame. According to the legend, she alone of all the nymphs was not invited to the bridal of Zeus and Hera, because she had amused herself at the cost of the immortal couple. But Hera was not contented with this vengeance. She made Mercury throw the witty but unwise maiden into the sea with her house, and metamorphosing her into a tortoise, condemned her to carry it on her back in eternal silence. For this reason the ancients called the tortoise Chelonia.

CHARACTER SEEN IN BACK

Rear View of Men and Women Often Reveals Their Personality to the Student.

Have you ever noticed that the back views of men and women are intensely characteristic of the persons?

Then look carefully at that very ordinary young man who has passed you. He has one hand in his pocket, and shoulders slightly stooped. From what you can see of him, his head is bent, and every now and again he gives an aimless little kick at some object in his path. What back view could be more eloquent of indecision of character?

Now glance at the receding back of the man who has passed you by. Why does it fill you with an instinctive sense of reliability? Because there is strength in it; not necessarily physical, but mental. The back is straight and alert. The head is held well back, the arms swing easily, and the walk is buoyant, confident, hopeful.

Now direct your gaze across the street a moment. There goes a girl who, under a cursory scrutiny, looks the personification of what wealth can do. Walk behind her a little way, and take good stock of the back view presented you. You soon discover that the end of a fringe net hangs down on to the coat collar. The collar of the blouse is done up with a large pin. The middle seam of the skirt is not in its place. There is a hole in the stocking just above the ankle, and the shoes, in spite of being expensive, need repairing. Evidently the wearer is an untidy, slovenly woman.

To Operate Canal by Electricity.

The Panama canal will be operated almost exclusively by electric power. Approximately seven per cent. of the minimum water supply will be diverted for hydro-electric development, and this will be the excess which is not required for lockages, evaporation, and leakage. The hydro-electric station will be located adjacent to the north wall of the Gatun spillway and the plant will have a capacity of 6,000 kilowatts. The average hydraulic head throughout the year will be about 75 feet.

It will be the first time in the history of jurisprudence that such evidence will have been introduced. THIRTY-SIX DEAD IN WAKE OF STORM

HEAVY RAINS FLOOD PARTS OF PENNSYLVANIA, OHIO AND WEST VIRGINIA.

RAILROADS BADLY CRIPPLED

At Colliers, W. Va., 18 Are Dead; Cherry Valley, Pa., 6; Canonsburg, 3; Avella, 3.

Pittsburg.—Life toll of at least 36 was claimed by heavy rains and resulting in floods that swept West Virginia, Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio. Several persons are missing. Added to the list of fatalities are 10 foreigners at Colliers, W. Va., bringing the list there up to 18, three at Burgettstown, Pa., bringing the list there up to four, and one at Woodlawn, Pa., near this city.

From meagre reports it is believed the monetary damage will reach $1,500,000.

Latest reports from the various districts give the following table of fatalities:

Colliers, W. Va., nine dead. It is estimated that 20 persons met death.
Cherry Valley, Pa., six drowned.
Burgettstown, Pa., one drowned.
Auella, Pa., three drowned.
Cannonsburg, Pa., three drowned.

Pittsburg's suburbs suffered, cellars being flooded, street cars crippled and wire service prostrated. In a number of Western Pennsylvania towns citizens became panic stricken. At New Castle, Pa., churches were dismissed when it was announced that a flood was headed to the town.

At Ford City, Pa., a dozen houses were washed from their foundations. Lightning struck a score of houses, while McGrahn, a suburb, was under under from three to five feet of water.

A cloudburst devastated the valley in which Colliers, W. Va., is situated. The entire valley was deluged, houses swept from their foundations, railroad tracks torn up for long stretches and roads made impassable by landslides. Colliers seemed to suffer the brunt of the storm in West Virginia. Debris floated down the creek, piling high at Holliday's Cove, and a score of houses were washed away by the gorge. Most of the fatalities at Colliers occurred when these houses were swept away. At many placed in that territory, railroad tracks were so badly crippled that it is not hoped to resume operations for a week.

At Washington, Pa., the storm was especially severe. Six persons, George Gilespie, wife and four children were drowned at Cherry Valley, the flood coming on them while asleep. It is feared others lost their lives at Cherry Valley.

Telegraph wires are down and only meager telephone service is to be had. In this section alone the damage is estimated at $200,000.

Cannonsburg is under three feet of water and three persons are dead. Many houses, undermined by water, collapsed. A spectacular feature was the wrecking of a large department store.

Rebel Soldier Kills American.

El Paso, Texas.—Death at the hands of a rebel soldier was the fate of an American citizen, Joshua Stevens, while he fought to protect his two daughters in Colona, Pacheco. News of the tragedy was received here by O. P. Brown, business agent of the Mormon colonies in Mexico. At first it was reported that Stevens was killed by an American, but this report was sent, it was said, to avoid trouble with the rebels who still infest the American settlements southeast. Two rebels visited Stevens' home apparently with intentions on the two young women of the household. Stevens met the intruders with a shotgun and escorted them to the limits of his property. According to the story told by his daughters, one of the Mexicans drew a sword bayonet from his belt and thrust it into the American's body. Stevens fired and fell dead over the man whom he had killed. The other Mexican fled.

England Will Ask Arbitration.

London.—It has been announced officially that the British government will make a formal demand upon the United States government for arbitration of its claim that the Panama canal toll act, as passed recently by the United States congress, violates the Hay Paucefote treaty. Nothing definite is known here beyond the brief official announcement that the formal demand for arbitration would be made, but it is believed instructions are en route to the British embassy at Washington concerning the situation.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Nogales, Ariz.—According to advices received here rebels have surrounded Canasea, where many Americans are located at the copper camps, and an attack is imminent. Bridges leading to the east have been burned by the invaders.

Panama.—The United States cruiser California sailed for Nicaragua with nearly 800 United States marines who were sent south from Philadelphia on the transport Prairie.

Telling the Age of a Horse.

The age of a horse may be judged by the appearance of the teeth because on the upper surface of the incisors a hollow is to be seen in the young tooth, which, not extending through the whole substance, naturally wears out with the wear of the tooth, and as a considerable degree of regularity occurs in the wearing away in all horses, it has been adopted as a general criterion of age.

PICKED OUT THE WRONG EYE

Physician Meant Well Enough but He Had Left the Motorman Seriously Handicapped.

Frank E. Payne, a member of the state railroad commission, said when investigating a trolley accident recently, he was told of a motorman on a work car who was running at high speed when the trucks left the rails because of snow and sleet, and the car was thrown to the side of the right of way, bringing up against a telephone pole.

"The motorman was not seriously hurt, but was cut and bruised about the head and face by flying glass. He was carried to a physician's office where his wounds were dressed and bandaged. When the physician had placed the last pin, he asked the wounded man if he felt like he could walk.

"'Sure, I can walk all right,' returned the patient, 'but I wish you would fix those bandages so I can gee.'

"'Why, man,' returned the physician, 'I left one of your eyes uncovered for the purpose.'

"But, doc, that eye you left uncovered is a glass one.'"—Indianapolis News.

HAIR CAME OUT BY HANDFUL

58 Lewis St., Nashville, Tenn.—"About three years ago I had the malaria fever, and when I recovered my hair was falling out so that the doctor told me to cut it off. My hair came out by the handful, and I had dandruff so that I had to scratch it out every week, and my scalp itched so that I pulled my hair all down trying to scratch it. I tried —— and —— and —— but they failed to do any good. At last I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"First I combed my hair out, made a parting on the side and rubbed my scalp with the Cuticura Ointment. The next morning I washed with the Cuticura Soap and water, and continued until the third application gave a complete cure." (Signed) Miss Nellie M. Currin, Dec. 6, 1911.

Not Necessary to Leave Home.

In an effort to stop the migration of dying consumptives to the Southwest, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis will ask physicians to be more careful in ordering patients to go away, and will also ask railroads to discontinue their practice of selling "charity" tickets to those who cannot afford to pay full fare. "No consumptive should go to Colorado, California, or the West for his health," says the association, "unless he has a good chance for recovery from his disease, and unless especially he has at least $1,000 to spend for this purpose, over and above what his family may need.

"Tuberculosis can be cured in any part of the United States, and it is not necessary for a tuberculosis patient to go West. Whenever possible, the National Association urges tuberculosis patients who have not ample funds to go to a sanatorium near home, and if they cannot do this, to take the cure in their own homes, under the direction of a physician."

How She Managed It.

"Sarah," said Mr. Jollibcy to his wife, as he finished his breakfast, "I shall not be home to dinner tonight. My old friend Bill Peters is in town."

"Good" said Mrs. Jollibcy. "That suits me to a T. I'm not going to be home to dinner myself. My old friend George Watkins telephoned me yesterday——"

Both dined at home.—Harper's Weekly.

Mixing the Names.

Mayor Racharach of Atlantic City, at a dinner at the Marlborough-Blenheim, told of a summer girl:

"On the beach in the moonlight," he said, "a youth clasped a maiden passionately to his breast and murmured:

"'Do you love me, darling?'

"'Yes—ah—, yes, Reginald,' she sighed.

"'Reginald?' said the youth in a startled voice. 'You mean Clarence, don't you, dear.'

"Smiling sweetly, she nestled closer. 'How stupid of me! I was thinking it was the week end.'"—Exchange.

Keeping Water Cold.

If you are in the habit of taking a pitcher of iced water to your room on retiring, try this: Procure a square pasteboard box (with lid), sufficiently large to hold your pitcher, and give it two or three coats of varnish on the outside, allowing each coat to dry thoroughly. Place your pitcher of water in this box before retiring, putting the lid on tightly, and you are sure of having cold drinking water any hour of the night.

An Oversight.

"There has certainly been a serious miscalculation about this year."

"What's that?"

"So many dreadful things are happening, and they forgot all about presaging them by a comet."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nat is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and h pinesses of man. Science has indeed made giant str in the past century, and among the—by no me least important—discoveries in medicine is the Therapion, which has been used with great succe French Hospitals and that it is worthy the atten of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nerv diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin erupti piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evi from the big stir created amongst specialists, THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivio those questionable remedies that were formerly sole reliance of medical men. It is of course im sible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell t in this short article, but those who would th know more about this remedy that has effecte many—we might almost say, miraculous c should send addressed envelope for FREE boo Dr. Le Clerc Med. What do you think of three candidates in the field for mayor? That's running some isn't it? Yet that, it appears, will be the final outcome.

On the democratic executive committee in younger days; on the Populite "steering committee" in later days; on the republican committee in days but recently gone and now the Bull Moose "thinking committee" Gee, but that's lighting-like changing. Hermann, the magician was a mere novice in the "change" act when it comes to some records, and yet such changes think they can carry flocks of men, real men with them—just because "I say so".

The Bull Moose convention, with the brass band and yeller dodgers didn't "pan" out so well after all. Somebody whistled but the boys didn't come out of the "sticks" and the "brushes" as in ye olden day. No Siree, they've larnt a few things for themselves; hobbling and haltering men don't go now like it did a few months ago. Then too, they want a leader who will decide once and for all what side he is going to take and stick to it—they are growing fearfully tired of being dragged around at the whim of anyone man or set of men.

We again call the attention of our readers to the fact that the national democratic campaign committee is calling for funds with which to finance the campaign. They do not desire large contributions—would not accept a dollar from a trust or combination. They are depending upon the "common masses of the common people"—for whom the democratic ticket stands and by whom it will be elected—for small contributions.

This paper, along with every other democratic paper in the State, is the authorized agent of the committee to receive contributions; we will gladly receive them and forward to the proper authorities. You get a double receipt for your contributions; we give you one and then the national committee give you one also. We should not delay these contributions; the committee needs them NOW!

The election in the rock ribbed republican state of Vermont of Tuesday establishes beyond a reasonable doubt the forthcoming election of Wilson and Marshall.

For more than forty years Vermont has been the national election barometer. When the republicans would carry that state by as much as 26,000 majority in its September state election the country invaribly went republican in the national election; when it failed to give as much as 26,000 majority for the republican nominee for governor the county has without a single exception, gone democratic it the November election. At Tuesday's election no governor was selected (the law in that state requires a majority vote to elect) and hence the selection of a governor will be left with the Legislature. The legislature, it is true, is republican by a good majority, but the fact remains that the candidate for governor did not receive but five thousand more votes than did the democratic candidate.

Two years before (1910) the republican candidate defeated the democratic candidate by over 26,000. What a change! Yes, that change undoubtedly means the election of Woodrow Wilson. Straws show which way the winds blow and in this political storm it demonstrated that the wind tide had turned to democracy.

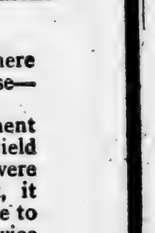
An I H C Manure Spreader Is an Investment—Not an Expense

A MACHINE that makes two dollars where one was made before is not an expense—it is a good investment.

Careful tests made at the Ohio Experiment Station showed an average increased crop yield of $15 an acre when eight loads of manure were properly spread. Spreading with a fork, it would take at least sixteen loads to an acre to produce the same result. By fertilizing twice as much ground with the same quantity of manure and doing the work better, an I H C manure spreader soon pays for itself. Add to this saving an increase of $15 an acre in the value of your crops, and you at once see why we urge the purchase of an

I H C Manure Spreader

Kemp 20th Century, Corn King, or Cloverleaf



Ask the I H C local dealer to show you the self-aligning, removable boxes on the main axle; notice that the axles are roller bearing to reduce the draft; study the apron construction, and note the large rollers on which it runs. I H C spreaders can be used in any corner of the barnyard. There is no reach to interfere. The seat folds out of the way when filling the spreader.

If you appreciate machines of extra merit; machines that spread manure in ample range of quantities; machines which can be equipped with drilling attachments for use in market gardens, and above all, machines which are made in sizes convenient for every farm, investigate I H C spreaders. Go to the local I H C dealer and look carefully over the machines he shows you. Get catalogues and full information from him, or, write

The arrival of a freight train at Prospect, Ala., saved the Northern Ala., railroad station agent there from a horrible death by a pack of wolves. The wolves surrounded the litle depot and drove the agent inside, where he barricaded the windows and doors. He shot two of the wolves when they tried to jump through the window. The arrival of the freight train scared the pack away. The agent left with the train, going to Jasper, twelve miles away.

Cal Miracle, arrested in Alabama last winter and then brought back to Kentucky to stand trial for the murder of a man and a woman in Bell county last August, was electrocuted in the state penitentiary at Eddyville, Ky. He walked coolly to the chair, and when he was asked if he desired to make a statement, replied. "Nothing to say." Three minutes later he was dead. Miracle called Matthew Jones to the latter's front gate Sun- August 25, 1911, and shot him down, apparently without reason.

Washington, Ga., banks were notified that F. M. Laxton of Charlotte, N. C., had been robbed of $5,000 in cash and checks while asleep in a Pullman car between Atlanta and Charlotte. Mr. Laxton is vice president of a company which is putting in a new electric plant and the money was in part payment by the city of Washington for that work. Four thousand dollars of the money was in the shap of a cashier's check

With a vote of 138,314 recorded, South Carolina has cast the heaviest vote in its primary here. Cole L. Blease, the incumbent, led for governor by a majority of 2,203 votes over his two opponents. This elects him on the face of the returns. Senator Benjamin R. Tillman was re-elected. The primary in Charleston was attended by much excitement and by frequent disorder.

A commission form of government, including the right of initiative and referendum, was adopted at the special election in New Orleans, by a vote of more than 10 to 1. The official returns were 23,900 for and 2,119 against. Both regular and reformers voted for the new system of government. At the general election in November a constitutional amendment will be voted upon, the carrying of which will mean that the right of recall will also be made a feature of the commission form of government just adopted.

The negro murderer and burglar of Collinsville, Ala., who has been pursued by an armed mob of several hundred men and bloodhounds, was landed in jail at Fort Payne. He was captured near Chesterfield across the Lookout mountain by J. W. Gavin and son. The mob was some distance behind when the capture was effected, but the negro was turned over to Sheriff Harris and he eluded the mob and took the prisoner to Fort Payne, Alabama.

Funeral services of the founder of the Salvation Army, Gen. William Booth, took place at the Olympia. In accordance with traditions of the organization in London, they were without any pomp or symbols of mourning, but were carried out with a moving fervor and impressiveness. Thirty-four thousand persons participated in the functions. Nearly half of them wore the coats and red jerseys or bonnets with the red ribbon so familiar on the streets of the cities of the world where the army is established.

Public anxiety is intense in France over the fate of the French officers held as hostages by the Moors at Marewesh, Morocco. Emissaries have been dispatched by the French commander, but have obtained no information. General Lyautey, the French resident governor, reported eo the foreign office that the volunteers who had undertaken the dangerous duty had returned from El Hiba's headquarters, where they had in vain tried to effect a ransom.

J. W. Moye, an actor, in reaching for his hat, which blew off his head, fell from the rear platform of a train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad near Pelham, N. Y., and was killed.

Thirty skeletons and mummies have been found in the southern part of Mexico.

Dr. J. F. Gosin, a Big Rapids dentist, his wife and 4-year-old son were killed and his mother probably fatally injured and his son, Herz, 11 years old, slightly hurt when a freight train crashed into their automobile, near Howard, Mich.

Mrs. Emilio DeBaro and six of her seven children, ranging from five months to 12 years of age, met death in a fire which destroyed their home at Rutherford, N. J. DeBaro, the husband and father, and the seventh child, a boy of 13, escaped by jumping from a second-story window.

In the presence of hundreds of people, 14-year-old Chester Betts, son of Bart N. Betts of Flint, was accidentally caught by the guy-rope of a balloon and hurled about two thousand feet in the air before the rope untangled and hurled him to his death at Flint, Mich.

Because Mrs. William Bowyer of Logansport, Ind., was up early milking, while her husband slept, lives of the husband and two children were saved, but the industrious wife is bent in grief over the death of her 15-months-old baby. Mrs. Bowyer discovered fire in their home when near the barn attending to her regular work. Rushing into the burning structuer she dragged the unconscious form of her husband and two of her children to safety. She was about to dash in again to get her baby when the roof fell.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in a statement regarding labor troubles on his father's estate at Tarrytown, made it known that private detectives had been called to delve into the situation. A detective, with a large force of deputies, has been guarding Mr. Rockefeller's 1,000-acre place for several weeks. About 200 men are employed on the estate, nearly all foreigners. Mr. Rockefeller discredited reports that it was a black-hand warfare.

Corporal Cedric M. Long of the Fifth regiment of Massachusetts, is the champion military rifleman of the United States. He attained this honor at the annual rifle tournament at Seagirt, N. J., after two days of shooting, during which he surpassed the efforts of more than 100 other competitors, including all the crack shots in the military service of the United States, regular and National Guard. He scored 235 points against 231 for his nearest rival.

Washington.

That Enrique Maza, the reporter who attacked Hugh Gibson, American charge of the legation in Havana, was merely a tool in the hands of Cuban plotters antagonistic to the United States, and who would like to get the Cuban government into trouble with this country, was the opinion expressed in Washington by Senor Matrin-Rivero, the Cuban minister to the United States. He was of the belief that Maza had not attacked Mr. Gibson of his own volition, but that he had been urged on by others who had made him think he had been insulted and should seek revenge.

In consequence of a vigorous protest by Hugh Gibson, the charge d-affaires of the American legation in Cuba, against the release on trivial bail of Enrique Maza, the newspaper reporter who assaulted him, Maza was arrested for the third time by order of the audiencie court and committed to jail to await indictment. Immediately after the re-arrest of Maza, the squad of secret service men who had been detailed to watch the American legation and to attend Mr. Gibson wherever he went, was relieved from duty. There is a fresh storm of indignation in the press.

In an interpretation of the new contract eight-hour labor law, Attorney General Wickersham has decided that the government may enter into contracts without restricting the hours of labor for purchase of supplies and other articles exempted by the act, even though the government itself occasionally has manufactured these articles. He also held that no provision of the law becomes effective until January 1 next.

Great Britain has reaffirmed its protest against the Panama canal bill. In a note filed with the state department by A. Mitchell Innes, charge of the British embassy, it was stated that if a satisfatcory agreement could not be reached Great Britain would appeal to The Hague tribunal for arbitration. The note submitted says Great Britain will give careful consideration to both the bill and the message President Taft sent to congress relating to discrimination in favor of American coastwise shipping in the canal. If no agreement can be reached, arbitration will be tried.

Speaking on the canal question at a dinner to visiting British officers and legislators to Ottawa, Can., Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he believed British, Canadian and American diplomacy would bring about an agreement satisfactory to all. Pointing to the fact that for more than 100 years differences between Canada and the United States had been settled without resort to arms, Sir Wilfrid declared that poor arbitration was better than the most successful war.

Repairmen examining the futniture of the house discovered that Speaker Clark during the last nine months had used his gavel with such effect that virtually the entire top of the desk was wrecked. One entire section had been pounded away.

Sobered by the embarrassments of an all-night session of filibusters and disagreements, congress adjusted its differences, invited President Taft up to the capitol once more and wrote "finis" after the proceedings of the second session of the Sixty-second congress. The end was marked with a return of harmony. A wild outburst of applause greeted Speaker Clark's announcement of adjournment as his gavel fell in the house. The floor immediately became an animated scene, members bidding each other goodbye and shaking hands. Old-time political wars buried all differences and feuds.

PROVED BY TWO INSTANCES

Condition of Workingmen in Highly Protected Steel Industry Is Bad While Plants of Moderately Protected Farm Implement Industry Are Bright Spots in Labor World.

By agreement of all observers, a lie dies hard. There, for example, is the lie that asserts that the American workingman is dependent upon the tariff for whatever he enjoys of superiority to the "pauper workman" of Europe in wages and standard of living. Let us look at a couple of great American industries, one very highly, the other very moderately, protected. By the theory, the workingmen employed in the first ought to be better off than those employed in the second.

Take the steel industry and the agricultural implement industry, both flourishing, and each enjoying a good export trade. And in order not to complicate the tariff problem with the trust problem, suppose we leave out the harvesting end of the implement industry and consider only the manufacture of plows and machinery for planting and cultivating, an unmonopolized branch. The steelmaker is protected by a 45 per cent. tariff; the tariff on agricultural implements is just 15 per cent. For the past fifteen years—the period of most rapid development of both industries—the tariff on steel has ranged from two and one-quarter to three times as much as that on implements.

The condition of the workingmen in the highly protected steel industry, generally speaking, is bad, as the world knows. A tariff barrier of 45 per. cent. against the output of the "pauper labor" of Belgium, Germany and England has not kept the American workingman from making the acquaintance of the twelve!-hour day and the seven-day week. It is not necesary to resume familiar facts; the Pittsburg Survey will supply details to the curious, at any public library. Since the degree of prosperity assured to the workingman by a 45 per cent. tariff is so low, we should be prepared, acording to orthodox Republican doctrine, to find the employes of plow, planter and cultivator factories the pariahs of the industrial world.

The very contrary of this assumption is the fact. There are no brighter spots in the American industrial system than these very plants, whose tariff protection is relatively so little. In the "plow towns" of Illinois you find wages good. Scrupulous attention is paid to matters of safety and factory sanitation. In no industry employing an equal amount of unskilled labor are conditions more stable. From this, and the thriftiness of the workingmen, it results that a large proportion of them own their own homes. It is not uncommon to find workingmen of three generations of the same family in a single organization. One large concern has a successful pension and insurance scheme in operation; another, instead of buying outright inventions of employes, pays substantial royalties for the use of them.

The tariff was not designed to help the workingman. It is a trick to enable the manufacturer to exploit the consumer. Nothing could be more conclusive on this point than the contrast between industrial conditions in the two industries under discussion.

Why is the "infant" steel industry, protected by a 45 per cent. tariff and selling annually about $280,000,000 worth of its products in the foreign market, unable to treat its workingmen as well as the plow and planter industry, which has only a 15 per cent. tariff and an export trade of about one-twenty-fifth as much? And how does it come that the implement maker some years since, professed their willingness to get on without any tariff at all while the steel industry, according to no less an authority than President Taft's veto mesage, would be withered and blighted if the duties on steel were reduced to a figure still substantially higher than the implement duties?

The answer is that the tariff philosophy is a farrago of lies.

Mere Details Lacking.

The Progressive platform is explicit and my speech before the Progressive convention was explicit.—The Third Termer.

Sure, they are! Except, of course, as to the mere details of how to do what it is proposed to do.

The Big Campaign Fact.

The one hope of the American people for relief from the terrific cost of living lies in the election of Governor Wilson, and the inauguration of his sane and sensible plan of reform.

The Farmer and the Trusts.

"While you were feeding the world, congress was feeding the trusts."

In that one compact phrase, Governor Wilson stated the case of the farmers of this country versus the Republican party.

Of the two billion dollars which the tariff costs the consumers of this country each year, the farmer pays nearly half—and gets nearly nothing.

The farmer exports considerable produce, every year.

The exporter can get no advantage out of an import tariff unless he is in a trust, which is able to charge higher prices at home than it gets abroad.

The farmers of the country have never been able to form a trust, and never will be able to do so.

The farmer has fed the world, and congress—a Republican congress—has fed the trusts. Yet now the Republican party asks another lease of power that it may tame the trusts and encourage the farmer!

ONLY HOPE IS IN WILSON

To Him Alone Can People Look for Serious Effort to Reduce Cost of Living.

As the campaign progresses, it becomes plain that Gov. Wilson is the only presidential candidate to whom the country can look for a serious effort to reduce the high cost of living.

President Taft, who was born rich, approaches this question only to explain why the high cost of living must remain high. He does not understand what high prices mean to poor people, and it is hopeless to try to teach him.

Mr. Roosevelt, who also was born rich, is interested in wars and rumors of wars, in grand stand plays, in spectacular denunciations, and most of all, in himself. If elected—which he will not be—he would probably raise the cost of living by his wide extravagance.

Governor Wilson alone has given careful thought to this most pressing problem of the day.

Governor Wilson sees that needlessly high tariff duties raise the price of the articles on which they are levied by approximately the amount of the duty. He calls for a revision of the tariff downward, "steadily and unhesitatingly downward."

Governor Wilson sees that in the shade of the tariff the trusts gathered to exploit the people. He would not only cut down the trust protecting shade; but he would invoke the law, fearlessly and without favor, to break up the vast combinations which have assumed the right to fix the high cost of living "by private agreement."

Only by the election of Governor Wilson and the triumph of the principles of which he is the exponent, can the burden of high prices be lifted from the shoulders of the American people.

What Wilson Promises.

We may expect readjustment, but not revolution. That is the key-note of the whole—"a new point of view and a new method and spirit of counsel," but no "excited change." Governor Wilson is for meeting the changed conditions of our life candidly, and with new laws—radical laws, if you please—but not with a new and strange form of government.

We may expect the one great reform we have fully discussed and resolved on—tariff revision downward—made, indeed, without vindictiveness or violence; but, nevertheless, "unhesitatingly and steadily downward."

We may expect a policy with the trusts and other great industrial combinations and confederacies equally firm for justice, yet equally free from any impulse of mere destructiveness; laws to prevent and punish unfairness and wrongdoing, but none against mere bigness, none to arrest the natural course of economic development.

We may expect a conservative policy which will conserve without mere hoarding; which will prevent waste and robbery of our natural wealth, but permit and encourage the proper use of it.

We may expect a revision of our laws of currency and banking, to make our system more elastic, more modern and scientific, and more responsive to all the needs of business.

We may expect, if we ourselves have the virtue to play our part in the change, the proper working of representative government—the true "rule of the people" through public servants brought again into a right sense of loyalty to the entire public. And in the highest place of all, we may expect a leadership at once resolute and entirely democratic; ready to learn and to be advised, but of good faith and courage; a leadership by consent and counsel, but nevertheless an authoritative and fearless statesmanship of the people.

That is what we understand Governor Wilson to have resolved and promised when he accepted the nomination for the presidency and the headship of his party.—Harper's Weekly.

A Democratic Year.

"Some time before the presidential conventions there was a feeling in the east that this was a Democratic year," said Nicholas L. Potter of New York, "and since all the nominations have been made it looks as if the Democrats would have a sweeping victory.

"I am one of the multitude that votes, but do not take any active part in politics. I have always voted the Democratic ticket, but this is the first time since my first presidential vote, which was in 1892, that I have felt as if we were going to win.

"Before the Baltimore convention had selected the ticket I was inclined to think that Congressman Underwood of Alabama would be the best man for standard bearer, but since Wilson was chosen I am strongly for him. I think we have a splendid ticket.

"I have many friends who are actively engaged in political work, and it is their opinion that the state of New York will go for Wilson and Marshall."

A So. Dak. woman, after thirteen years of misery from drinking coffee, found a way to break the "unlucky spell." Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee. She writes:

"For thirteen years I have been a nervous wreck from drinking coffee. My liver, stomach, heart—in fact, my whole system being actually poisoned by it.

"Last year I was confined to my bed for six months. Finally it dawned on me that coffee caused the trouble. Then I began using Postum instead of coffee, but with little faith, as my mind was in such a condition that I hardly knew what to do next.

"Extreme nervousnes and failing eyesight caused me to lose all courage. In about two weeks after I quit coffee and began to use Postum I was able to read and my head felt clear. I am improving all the time and I will be a strong, well woman yet.

"I have fooled more than one person with a delicious cup of Postum. Mrs. S. wanted to know where I bought my fine coffee. I told her my grocer had it and when she found out it was Postum she has used it ever since, and her nerves are building up fine.

PRELIMINARY TRIAL OF ED MARTIN

On Account of Illness of Attorney Curry Trial is Continued Until Saturday Next.

Clanton has been stirred by the preliminary trial of Ed Martin, charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff C. W. Cox, which begun Tuesday morning in the Justice Court of Mr. J. L. Wilson, as it has not since the days of the now famous Pope trial. Early in the morning, for fear that the Court room would not accommodate all spectators, the curious begun to assemble, tho' court was not to be called till ten o'clock. In the assembly were many ladies anxious to hear the testimony. The court awaited the arrival of Solicitor Tate from Wetumpka, who came in on a late train, delayed by reason of sickness in his family.

When court was called Justice Wilson asked "What says the state in this case?" Solicitor Tate arose and amid almost breathless silence, said "The state wishes to dismiss this suit." Immediately the attorneys for the defense were on their feet protesting against a dismissal. They insisted that if the suit was to be dismissed at the instance of the state, the facts should be reduced to writing and reasons assigned. This the state contended was unnecessary; since it had begun the prosecution, it, and it alone, had the right to dismiss it and was not required to give any reason for its action. Here a lengthy argument ensued, each side citing authorities on the point. The court, after two hours argument, decided that it would go into a hearing and called for witnesses. Immediately Mr. Tipton Mullins, for the prosecution, arose and requested the court to give them time in which to sue out mandamus proceedings compelling Justice Wilson to dismiss the suit. This was refused by the court and announcement was made that the testimony would be begun at one-thirty.

The attorneys for the prosecution were evidently taken by surprise by Mr. Wilson's firm determination to try the case. There was no judge here of competent authority before whom mandamus proceedings could have been brought; the nearest judge would have been in Montgomery, and to go there would have consumed a day at best. This was the muddle in which the case was left at twelve-thirty, the hour of adjournment for dinner. During the argument for dismissal it developed that the warrant on which Martin was arrested and held, charged him with manslaughter only, whereas the state desired that be discharged with murder in first degree. The state contended that under this warrant Martin was entitled to bail at any time without preliminary trial. It also developed that another warrant charging murder in the first degree had been sued out before Judge Deason and was ready to be served the moment the case was dismissed. It was also plainly evident that the state did not wish to try the case before Justice Wilson. However, he forced the issue and announced that after dinner he would go into the examination of witnesses.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

When court re-assembled the whole of counsel had plainly changed; the state's attorneys were in high glee while the attorneys for the defense did not look so well. Immediately upon Justice Wilson's taking his seat, Solicitor Tate arose as if to say something to the court when Senator Curry asked for a conference. After this Senator Curry and Mr. A. C. Smith, attorneys for the defense, together with Justice Wilson, retired for a conference, and upon returning to the court room it was announced that by agreement of counsel on both sides the old warrant was to be withdrawn and that Judge Deason was to be substituted as trial judge for Justice Wilson. By agreement all witnesses were held under the subpoeanas from Justice Wilson's court and the case rested where it was at adjournment with the exception of the substitution of the first degree warrant and that of Judge Deason for Justice Wilson. There were eighteen witnesses for the state and twenty-two for the defense. These were all sworn and put under the rule with the exception of Mr. H. C. Martin, brother of the accused, Mrs. C. W. Cox, widow of the murdered man, Sheriff Jones and Deputy Sheriff Smitherman.

The first witness examined was Mr. Payton, the only eye witness to the killing except the two principals. Many preliminary questions were asked him to show that he knew Cox and Martin, that Cox was now dead, that he lived on Martin's place, etc. We give only the salient points in his testimony. He stated that at, or about the time of the killing, he and Martin and Martin's two children were sitting at the table; had been eating dinner; he remained at the table playing with the two children, but Martin arose and went into his bed room and secured a shot gun and then left the house; about that time he arose and walked to the gallery of the house; saw Cox standing near a load of fodder; did not see or hear Cox when he drove up. Cox and Martin were in conversation, but he could not tell what they were saying; they were eight or ten feet apart, Cox standing with his hands on his hips, he was in his shirt sleeves; saw no pistol or gun about Cox. Martin always kept his gun in his room. When I first saw Martin he was eight or ten steps from the lot gate, Cox was at the gate. It was five minutes between the time Martin went to his room and the time I saw him near Cox, both were going toward the lot gate, Cox being only two or three steps away. While Cox and Martin were talking Cox took both hands from behind him and brought them around to the front of his body; I do not think he brought just one hand, I know he brought both hands, they were not in a presenting position, but in front of his body. I saw nothing in his hands, it was broad day light, there was nothing to obstruct my view. When Cox brought his hands around Martin raised and fired; Cox fell where he was shot and Martin turned and walked to his room, I then went to Mr. Kemp's and Mr. Hinkle's. Mr. Hinkle, Dr. Hopkins and I were the first to go to Cox; it is a quarter of a mile to Hinkle's from Martin's place; so far as I know there was no one at the house while I was gone except Martin, his wife and two children, Martin said nothing to me before Hopkins and Hinkle got there. I left no one there except Martin, his wife and children; no one was there except them when I returned.

On cross examination nothing new was developed; Payton seemed cool and rather clear, but his voice was low and it was with difficulty that reporters sitting near could hear his words. He stated that Martin was standing with his face toward Cox and his back toward witness and that he held his gun down, the barrel resting upon his foot. It was merely his opinion as to the length of time that elapsed between the time Martin left the table and the time of the shot. Witness said he saw a pistol laying near Cox when he returned, it was a small pistol. (Here a small double barrelled Derringer pistol was introduced in court and was identified by witness as the one he saw near Cox.) The pistol was laying on the right side of Mr. Cox. Martin was about the place till the time of his arrest. I do not know of my own knowledge that he remained there all the time I was gone. After I returned from Hinkle's I again went back for a buggy, but I did not go back to Martin's.

On re-direct examination nothing further was brought out of material interest except that Martin came out near the body of Cox after he and Hinkle and Hopkins got there and that it was Martin who called attention to the pistol; he did not know whether Davis looked at the pistol or not and he didn't know whether it was loaded or not but he knew the pistol didn't fire. He did not see the pistol till he got back from Hinkle's. No one, he said, picked the pistol up while I was there.

On re-cross he stated that he was certain it was Martin who called attention to the pistol and that Davis was standing about ten feet from it. Here Payton's testimony was completed for the time being but he was afterward brought back to contradict testimony given by the defendant himself.

Dr. Hopkins was the next witness He testified substantially as follows: I am a regularly practicing physician; I first saw Cox professionally, out at his farm after he had been shot; when I got to him he was propped on his right elbow leaning against the fence; no intelligence was perceptible; the shot had punctured the face, most of them entering the right eye. I would judge that the shot used were number six; there was also a gun wad in the head. Jake, my office boy, was with me when I went to Cox. Mr. Hinkle and someone else was there Prof. Davis came shortly after. The ground was rather dusty about where Cox was; I saw no pistol and heard no one mention anything about a pistol.

On cross examination he said:—The farm is known as the Cox farm; Cox was not living there at the time of the shooting; my whole attention was concentrated on the patient. I think I saw everyone there except Mr. Payton. Some one came up with Mr. Hinkle; I can not say who it was; I first examinedCox and then gave him a hyperdermic, then moved him into the shade and then brought him to my office.

STATE RESTS ITS CASE

Contrary to expectation, the state here rested its case and witnesses for the defense were called,

Mr. P. T. Hinkle, who had been summonsed by both sides, next took the stand. He learned of the shooting from Payton, who came after him. I telephoned for the doctor and the sheriff and then went immediately to the scene of the shooting; when I got there Cox was lying on the ground but made continual efforts to rise; he was trying to grasp the fence railings to pull himself up. I got there at same time the doctor arrived; Payton, Martin, Hopkins and I were there; the doctor gave him an injection and then we moved him into the shade. The index finger on the right hand was badly shattered; Martin was standing on his steps when we went in, he came out to meet us. I called for help and either Martin or Payton brought water, sheets and a pillow; I cannot say which one it was who brought them. Martin was standing at the gate when the sheriff arrived, I mean the yard gate, not the lot gate, the gate between the lot and the house; when we were moving the body to the shade I saw no pistol; when we unbuttoned Cox's clothes to examine for wounds two or more cartridges fell from his trouser pockets; I saw the cartridges at the Coroner's inquest; they were simular to the ones now shown me and to the ones which fell from Cox's pockets.

PROF. PICKENS HELD UP

SHERIFF HOOD'S FORCES NAB HIM.

A good one is told on Prof. Pickens, our newly elected principal of Clanton High School, told by himself, and which we would have published last week but for the fact that Prof. Pickens was then a comparatively new comer here and we did not wish to embarrass him by telling of his "good fortune" so early. But really, the incident is too good to keep, and as everyone who knows Prof. Pickens also knows that he is too high toned a gentleman to have been implicated in any such transaction, we give it as nearly like he gave it to us as possible.

It seems that Prof. Pickens visited the capital city some days ago on business matters and while there, with a few spare moments to spend, he decided to visit his one time friend, Prof. Lammons, ex-Superintendent of Education of Geneva county, who was at that time confined in the Montgomery county jail under charge of having appropriated county and state school money to his own uses. Prof. Pickens and Prof. Lammons had known each other in the prosperous days ot the latter and naturally Prof. Pickens felt a sympathy for him that induced him to visit his one time friend while languishing behind prison walls. This occurred just after the capture of Prof. Lammons, who had ten days before escaped from jail while awaiting sentence. Just how he made his escape no one seems to know, but it has been hinted tbat he was assisted by some outside parties.

After the visit to Lammons in jail was concluded, Prof. Pickens turned to take his departure, but a broad shouldered deputy detained him. He was not exactly ready for genial instructor to leave the place. Naturally Prof. Pickens became indignant and demanded the cause of his detention. "Well, said the deputy, you need not be in such a hurry, we may want you."

This, of course, made the Prof. even more indignant and he become loud in his protests. Finally the deputy asked him where he was on the day Lambert made his escape from jail (naming the date). Prof. Pickens immediately replied that he was in Clanton attending to his business, "By whom can you prove that you were there?" demanded the officer. "Well," said he, "I think I can prove it by several gentlemen, giving the names of the Board of Trustees of Clanton High School and several other prominent gentlemen of the town; but after thinking a moment he decided that perhaps he had remained quite closely in his room that day preparing the academy catalog, and that perhaps, after all, these gentlemen did not see him during that particular day. Again the deputy plied him with questions, "Where did you stop when you came to Montgomery?" was asked. Prof. Pickens named his hotel. "How did you register?" he was asked. "As J. J. Pickens of Clanton," was the reply. All this of course, proved to be strictly true, but the deputy was not yet satisfied; he wanted proof that Prof. Pickens was in Clanton on the day of Lammon's escape. Not being certain that he could prove it by any particular person among the business men, he turned to the deputy and said:

"Say, look here, you great big blunderer, you telephone to my landlady; she will know whether I was in Clanton or not on that day; I never miss a meal and she will tell you that I was right on the spot when the bell announced breakfast, dinner and supper. Now, get busy, for I must leave here for home, I haven't time to waste with such fumblers as you are."

The phone was called into requisition, the landlady was questioned and she gave assurance that the professor had his feet under the table three times on that particular day, that he was prompt in responding to the call of the bell and that he lingered as long as the best of tbem. This relieved the situation, but it didn't relieve Prof. Pickens; he had been uselessly detained by a bungling officer, had missed his train and had been suspected of doing that which no gentleman who knows him would ever have thought of attributing to him.

A letter of apology from Sheriff Hood (it was supposed to have been from him, though it was not signed by any one) stated that the detaining officer was a new man and was anxious to display his ingenuity in catching offenders of the law and that since Prof. Lammons was assuredly assisted in securing his escape on a previous occasion they were more than cautious when visitors presented themselves at the jail to pay a friendly call.

We have no doubt Sheriff Hood made a truthful statement but it is, nevertheless, a woeful commentary upon the efficiency of some officers when a high toned gentleman cannot visit the capital city of the state and call at the county jail without being detained as a breaker of the law. It was enough to have aroused all the anger of Prof. Pickens and he did not hesitate to express his opinion of the detaining officer in the most vigorous language.

CLANTON HIGH SCHOOL OPENS

ENTHUSIASTIC ADDRESSES AND LARGE ENROLLMENT.

Monday morning at nine-thirty the Clanton High School threw open its doors for the reception of pupils and for organization for the year's work.

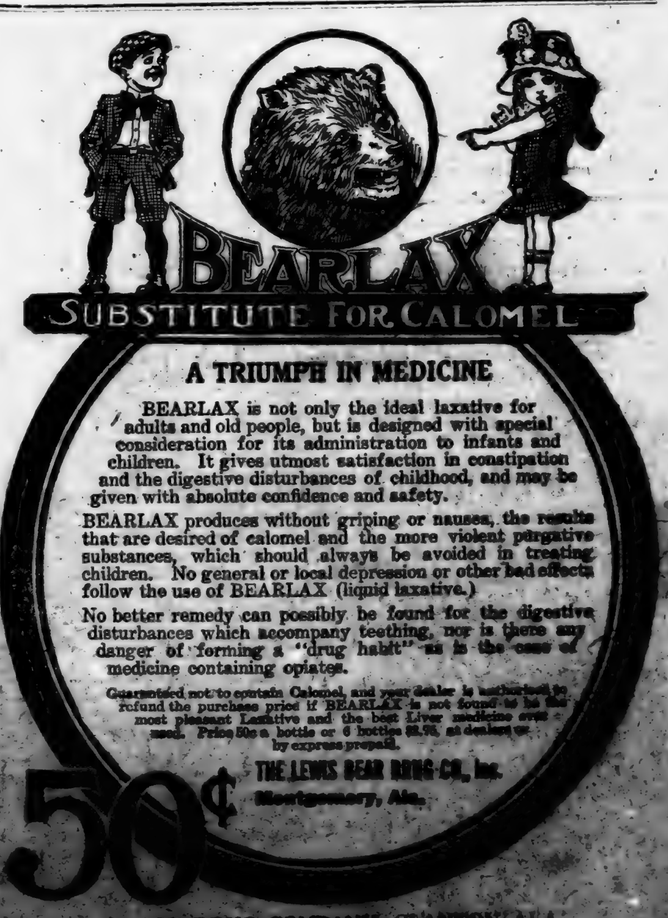
Quite a large number of patrons of the school were present to encourage the teachers and pupils.

The exercises of the day were opened with an instrumental solo by Miss Elna Sartor, the music teacher, after which the audience joined in singing an appropriate song; then Rev. W. M. Olive read a scripture lesson and led a short prayer. Mrs. Monroe and Miss Mayme Foshee render that beautiful song "Was That Somebody You?" in a most touching manner.

Addresses were made by members of the Board of Trustees as follows: Chairman C. Reese Mullins, Judge L. H. Reynolds and Mr. Jno. W. Stanfield; Prof. Pickens also made a most appropriate address touching on the duties of pupils and teachers; this address was followed by others made by Revs. W M. Olive and R. J. Mills and Mr. W. I. Mullins.

After the conclusion of the addresses the audience again joined in singing and were then dismissed by prayer offered by Rev. W. M. Olive.

The enrollment for the first day was 126, which, considering the unusual hot and dusty weather is far in advance of other years.



The new corps of teachers start out under most flattering circumstances and will doubtless make it the best year in the history of Clanton Academy.

DR. HOPKINS ELECTED

TO BE CAMP PHYSICIAN.

The constantly increasing number of men employed on the works at the river has made it necessary for those in command to select a regularly attending physician to look after the welfare of the men employed there.

Last week Doctor Hopkins was selected to fill this important position. A temporary hospital will be erected at once for the care of the sick of the camp. Dr. Hopkins, while he will give his personal attention to those requiring the services of a physician, will keek his offices in Clanton and employ an assistant to stay permanently on the ground. Just who this will be has not yet been given out to the public.

MR. C. W. COX KILLED

found near the place where the shooting occurred. This was a small pistol of the "derringer" patern which is in the posession of officers. It is also stated that certain threats have been made against the negro who carried the barn keys for Mr. Cox to the effect that unless he swore certain things on the trial he, too, would be treated to the same dose which Cox received. Hearing this Sheriff Jones gave the negro quarters near the jail where he will be under constant protection.

The affair is one of the most lamentable that has ever occurred in this county for years. Mr. Cox was a high toned, honorable gentleman, a fearless officer, a loyal friend and a tender loving husband—he will be greatly missed in the circles in which he moved.

The Press learns That Mr. Martin is equally popular among his acquaintances; he also is married and has two or three small children.

The preliminary trial will take place Monday morning before Probate Judge Deason to determine whether or not bond shall be allowed and if so in what amount.

Since the above was put in type, the Press learns that Mr. Payton was apprehended by the Sheriff and his testimony taken at the Coroner's inquest.

Our Interests Are Identical

It is an axiom that the prosperity of a railroad is dependent upon the prosperity of the territory it serves; but the prosperity of any state would avail its people little but for the resulting ability of the railroad to provide the needful transportation.

Therefore, The Louisville and Nashville Railroad works in co-operation with the shipper to create and develop business to supply traffic upon which freight charges are earned. Freight charges are earned to enable the Louisville and Nashville to supply transportation from the place of production to the point of consumption. The shipper who appreciates the importance to him of such an arrangement is not only willing but anxious to have the L. & N. make a fair return on its investment so the L. & N. can continue to supply transportation, just as the L. & N. is anxious to have the shipper make a success of his business so the shipper can continue to supply traffic on which freight charges are earned.

With this idea in view The Louisville and Nashville Railroad has recently pledged its credit and prepared to enable the South and North Alabama Railroad to expend a very large amount of money to provide additional facilities to reduce the cost and promote the more expeditious handling of traffic. Extensive improvements will be made in the belief that increased facilities will accelerate development of this fertile territory, to the benefit of both the L. & N. and the people.

Only a prosperous railroad, such as The Louisville and Nashville, would be able to profitably sell its bonds and otherwise provide the needful capital, the expenditure of which within the state of Alabama will be of immense direct benefit to her people. It is, therefore, in accord with both good morals and good business that the L. & N., through economy of operation and a constructive policy, has established its financial responsibility in the money markets of the world, and is in position to contribute to the upbuilding of the territory through which it operates. It is in this spirit of co-operation and mutual development that the officials of the L. & N. request a thoughtful consideration by the citizens of Alabama of the problems now before the people as they relate to the railroad.

PRELIMINARY TRIAL OF ED MARTIN

On Account of Illness of Attorney Curry Trial is Continued Until Saturday Next.

Clanton has been stirred by the preliminary trial of Ed Martin, charged with the murder of Deputy Sheriff C. W. Cox, which begun Tuesday morning in the Justice Court of Mr. J. L. Wilson, as it is not since the days of the now famous Pope trial. Early in the morning, for fear that the Court room would not accommodate all spectators, the curious begun to assemble, tho' court was not to be called till ten o'clock. In the assembly were many ladies anxious to hear the testimony. The court awaited the arrival of Solicitor Tate from Wetumpka, who came in on a late train, delayed by reason of sickness in his family.

When court was called Justice Wilson asked "What says the State in this case?" Solicitor Tate arose and amid almost breathless silence, said "The state wishes to dismiss this suit." Immediately the attorneys for the defense were on their feet protesting against a dismissal. They insisted that if the suit was to be dismissed at the instance of the state, the facts should be reduced to writing and affidavits assigned. This the state contended was unnecessary; since they had begun the prosecution, it, and it alone, had the right to dismiss it and was not required to give any reason for its action. There was a lengthy argument ensued, each side citing authorities on the point. The court, after two hours argument, decided that it would go into a hearing and called for witnesses. Immediately Mr. Tipton Mullins, for the prosecution, arose and requested the court to give them time in which to sue out mandamus proceedings compelling Justice Wilson to dismiss the suit. This was refused by the court and announcement was made that the testimony would be begun at one-thirty.

The attorneys for the prosecution were evidently taken by surprise by Mr. Wilson's firm determination to try the case. There was no judge here of competent authority before whom mandamus proceedings could have been brought; the nearest judge would have been in Montgomery, and to go there would have consumed a day at best. This was the muddle in which the case was left at the twelve-thirty, the hour of adjournment for dinner. During the argument for dismissal it developed that the warrant on which Martin was arrested and held, charged him with manslaughter only, whereas the state desired that he be charged with murder in first degree. The state contended that under this warrant Martin was entitled to bail at any time without preliminary trial. It also developed that another warrant charging murder in the first degree had been sued out before Judge Deason and was ready to be served the moment the case was dismissed. It was also plainly evident that the state did not wish to try the case before Justice Wilson. However, he forced the issue and announced that after dinner he would go into the examination of witnesses.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

When court re-assembled the attitude of counsel had plainly changed; the state's attorneys were in high glee while the attorneys for the defense did not look so well. Immediately upon Justice Wilson's taking his seat, Solicitor Tate arose as if to say something to the court when Senator Curry asked for a conference. After this Senator Curry and Mr. A. C. Smith, attorneys for the defense, together with Justice Wilson, retired for a conference, and upon returning to the court room it was announced that by agreement of counsel on both sides the old warrant was to be withdrawn and that Judge Deason was to be substituted as trial judge for Justice Wilson. By agreement all witnesses were held under the subpoenas from Justice Wilson's court and the case rested where it was at adjournment with the exception of the substitution of the first degree warrant and that of Judge Deason for Justice Wilson. There were eighteen witnesses for the state and twenty-two for the defense. These were all sworn and put under the rule with the exception of Mr. H. C. Martin, brother of the accused, Mrs. C. W. Cox, widow of the murdered man, Sheriff Jones and Deputy Sheriff Smitherman.

The first witness examined was Mr. Payton, the only eye witness to the killing except the two principals. Many preliminary questions were asked him to show that he knew Cox and Martin, that Cox was now dead, that he lived on Martin's place, etc. We give only the salient points in his testimony. It was merely his opinion as to the length of time that elapsed between the time Martin left the table and the time of the shot. Witness said he saw a pistol laying near Cox when he returned, it was a small pistol. He did not see the pistol till he got back from Hinkle's. No one, he said, picked the pistol up while I was there.

On re-cross he stated that he was certain it was Martin who called attention to the pistol and that Davis was standing about ten feet from it. Here Payton's testimony was completed for the time being but he was afterward brought back to contradict testimony given by the defendant himself.

Contrary to expectation, the state here rested its case and witnesses for the defense were called.

Mr. P. T. Hinkle, who had been summonsed by both sides, next took the stand. He learned of the shooting from Payton, who came after him. I telephoned for the doctor and the sheriff and then went immediately to the scene of the shooting; when I got there Cox was lying on the ground but made continual efforts to rise; he was trying to grasp the fence railings to pull himself up. I got there at same time the doctor arrived; Payton, Martin, Hopkins and I were there; the doctor gave him an injection and then we moved him into the shade. The index finger on the right hand was badly shattered; Martin was standing on his steps when we went in, he came out to meet us. I called for help and either Martin or Payton brought water, sheets and a pillow; I cannot say which one it was who brought them. Martin was standing at the gate when the sheriff arrived, I mean the yard gate, not the lot gate, the gate between the lot and the house; when we were moving the body to the shade I saw no pistol; when we unbuttoned Cox's clothes to examine for wounds two or more cartridges fell from his trouser pockets; I saw the cartridges at the Coroner's inquest; they were simular to the ones now shown me and to the ones which fell from Cox's pockets.

PROF. PICKENS HELD UP

SHERIFF HOOD'S FORCES NAB HIM.

A good one is told on Prof. Pickens, our newly elected principal of Clanton High School, told by himself, and which we would have published last week but for the fact that Prof. Pickens was then a comparatively new comer here and we did not wish to embarrass him by telling of his "good fortune" so early. But really, the incident is too good to keep, and as everyone who knows Prof. Pickens also knows that he is too high toned a gentleman to have been implicated in any such transaction, we give it as nearly like he gave it to us as possible.

It seems that Prof. Pickens visited the capital city some days ago on business matters and while there, with a few spare moments to spend, he decided to visit his one time friend, Prof. Lammons, ex-Superintendent of Education of Geneva county, who was at that time confined in the Montgomery county jail under charge of having appropriated county and state school money to his own uses. Prof. Pickens and Prof. Lammons had known each other in the prosperous days ot the latter and naturally Prof. Pickens felt a sympathy for him that induced him to visit his one time friend while languishing behind prison walls. This occurred just after the capture of Prof. Lammons, who had ten days before escaped from jail while awaiting sentence. Just how he made his escape no one seems to know, but it has been hinted that he was assisted by some outside parties.

After the visit to Lammons in jail was concluded, Prof. Pickens turned to take his departure, but a broad shouldered deputy detained him. He was not exactly ready for genial instructor to leave the place. Naturally Prof. Pickens became indignant and demanded the cause of his detention. "Well, said the deputy, you need not be in such a hurry, we may want you."

This, of course, made the Prof. even more indignant and he become loud in his protests. Finally the deputy asked him where he was on the day Lambert made his escape from jail (naming the date). Prof. Pickens immediately replied that he was in Clanton attending to his business. "By whom can you prove that you were there?" demanded the officer. "Well," said he, "I think I can prove it by several gentlemen, giving the names of the Board of Trustees of Clanton High School and several other prominent gentlemen of the town; but after thinking a moment he decided that perhaps he had retained other rooms in the room that day, and that he could see him during that particular day. Again the deputy plied him with questions, "Where did you stop when you came to Montgomery?" was asked. Prof. Pickens named his hotel. "How did you register?" he was asked. "As J. J. Pickens of Clanton," was the reply. All this of course, proved to be strictly true, but the deputy was not yet satisfied; he wanted proof that Prof. Pickens was in Clanton on the day of Lammon's escape. Not being certain that he could prove it by any particular person among the business men, he turned to the deputy and said:

"Say, look here, you great big blunderer, you telephone to my landlady; she will know whether I was in Clanton or not on that day; I never miss a meal and she will tell you that I was right on the spot when the bell announced breakfast, dinner and supper. Now, get busy, for I must leave here for home, I haven't time to waste with such fumblers as you are."

The phone was called into requisition, the landlady was questioned and she gave assurance that the professor had his feet under the table three times on that particular day, that he was prompt in responding to the call of the bell and that he lingered as long as the best of them. This relieved the situation, but it didn't relieve Prof. Pickens; he had been uselessly detained by a bungling officer, had missed his train and had been suspected of doing that which no gentleman who knows him would ever have thought of attributing to him.

A letter of apology from Sheriff Hood (it was supposed to have been from him, though it was not signed by any one) stated that the detaining officer was a new man and was anxious to display his ingenuity in catching offenders of the law and that since Prof. Lammons was assuredly assisted in securing his escape on a previous occasion they were more than cautious when visitors presented themselves at the jail to pay a friendly call.

We have no doubt Sheriff Hood made a truthful statement but it is, nevertheless, a woeful commentary upon the efficiency of some officers when a high toned gentleman cannot visit the capital city of the state and call at the county jail without being detained as a breaker of the law. It was enough to have aroused all the anger of Prof. Pickens and he did not hesitate to express his opinion of the detaining officer in the most vigorous language.

CLANTON HIGH SCHOOL OPENS

ENTHUSIASTIC ADDRESSES AND LARGE ENROLLMENT.

Monday morning at nine-thirty the Clanton High School threw open its doors for the reception of pupils and for organization for the year's work.

Quite a large number of patrons of the school were present to encourage the teachers and pupils.

The exercises of the day were opened with an instrumental solo by Miss Elna Sartor, the music teacher, after which the audience joined in singing an appropriate song; then Rev. W. M. Olive read a scripture lesson and led a short prayer. Mrs. Monroe and Miss Mayme Foshee render that beautiful song "Was That Somebody You?" in a most touching manner.

Addresses were made by members of the Board of Trustees as follows: Chairman C. Reese Mullins, Judge L. H. Reynolds and Mr. Jno. W. Stanfield; Prof. Pickens also made a most appropriate address touching on the duties of pupils and teachers; this address was followed by others made by Revs. W. M. Olive and R. J. Mills and Mr. W. I. Mullins.

After the conclusion of the addresses the audience again joined in singing and were then dismissed by prayer offered by Rev. W. M. Olive.

The enrollment for the first day was 126, which, considering the unusual hot and dusty weather is far in advance of other years.

The new corps of teachers start out under most flattering circumstances and will doubtless make it the best year in the history of Clanton Academy.

DR. HOPKINS ELECTED

TO BE CAMP PHYSICIAN.

The constantly increasing number of men employed on the works at the river has made it necessary for those in command to select a regularly attending physician to look after the welfare of the men employed there.

Last week Doctor Hopkins was selected to fill this important position. A temporary hospital will be erected at once for the care of the sick of the camp. Dr. Hopkins, while he will give his personal attention to those requiring the services of a physician, will keek his offices in Clanton and employ an assistant to stay permanently on the ground. Just who this will be has not yet been given out to the public.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

LATE NEWS OF THE WORLD TERSELY TOLD.

SOUTH, EAST, NORTH AND WEST

Notes From Foreign Lands, Throughout the Nation and Particularly the Great South.

Southern.

At Hillsboro, Texas, a Trinity and Brazos Valley passenger train ran into an open switch and collided with a work train. The locomotive was an oil burner and was completely destroyed by fire. The mail car caught fire, but was extinguished by the Waco fire department, and the mail was saved. The fireman, whose name was not learned, on his first run, was seriously hurt. Express Messenger Huff had his back and arm broken, and the mail clerk, whose name was not learned, was badly cut on the arm. The train was wrecked at Normanges earlier in the day. One passenger has a broken leg and two others were less seriously hurt.

A lone train bandit held up the northbound express of the Louisville and Nashville railroad near Michaud, twelve miles from New Orleans, looted the mail car, robbed the passengers in five Pullmans and a club car, and then, just as he was about to leave the tender, was struck over the head with a brass torch by Engineer Baer and captured. He was taken to Bay St. Louis and may die. The booty except for one mail bag thrown from the car was recovered and returned. The bandit would give no name.

Lightning striking the big barn at the Georgia Experiment Station, at Experiment, near Griffin, Ga., started a large fire which destroyed the entire plant, with the exception of the residences. Blown by a high wind, the flames rapidly spread from the barn to the other buildings, and, when the conflagration was finally checked, about two hours and a half after, it had wiped out the guano house, the carpenter shop, the packing house and the silo. Several head of cattle were burned alive in the barn.

Policeman W. O. Roberts was killed while searching for cattle thieves, who, in the night, stole twenty head of cattle from the pens of the Iron Mountain railroad at Monroe, La. The cattle was stolen shortly after they had been unloaded for delivery to a local packing house. Roberts was shot through the heart, and fell dead with his own smoking revolver, which he fired as he fell, in his right hand and a searchlight in his left hand.

General.

The government troops have occupied the town of Catarina, on the Heights of Pagaya. Many casualties resulted from the engagement. The clergy of Granada, Nicaragua, have issued an appeal for quick relief as the people of that city are starving.

The American marines from Philadelphia and bluejackets from the cruiser Colorado have arrived at Managua. There are now 800 marines and bluejackets in Managua, Nicaragua and about the same number have headquarters at Leon.

News of an important battle in Nicaragua has been received by Dr. Marease Velasquez, the Panama minister to that country. The fighting was severe and many lives were lost, but the exact number of casualties is not stated.

Thirty-five persons were injured, five of them seriously when a special Lake Erie electric car, with a trailer attached, crashed into brewery truck, four miles west of Rocky river, near Cleveland, Ohio. The cars were crowded with a party bound to a clam-bake. Ambulances and physicians were rushed to the scene from Cleveland. The injured were conveyed to local hospitals. The crowded cars were bound for Toledo and left Cleveland at 11:30.

The Dryden trophy match, regarded as the most important event of the Seagirt shooting tournament, was won by Massachusetts with a score of 1,104 out of a possible 1,200. The winner receives the $4,000 trophy, presented by the late United States Senator Dryden of New Jersey.

Oscar S. Straus, former secretary of commerce and labor, in the cabinet of President Roosevelt, was unanimously acclaimed the nominee for governor by the Progressive party of New York in a stampede convention under circumstances not only unexpected, but dramatic.

The capital stock of the Louisville and Nashville railroad is to be increased from $60,000,000 to $72,000,000 and the new $12,000,000 in common stock will be sold to stockholders at par.

Battling Nelson fought Steve Ketchel a 15-round draw at St. Joseph, Missouri.

Louis Potter, 39 years old, of New York, a noted American sculptor, died in great agony in an obscure hotel in Seattle, Wash., after undergoing ten days' treatment at the hands of a Chinese physician for a skin disease.

A conference of all the veterinarians, pathologists and bacteriologists now treating horses afflicted with the mysterious disease that is killing off hundreds of animals in Kansas was called by Governor Stubbs and J. H. Mercer, Kansas live stock sanitary commissioner, who issued the summons. It is hoped to organize for a systematic fight on the plague. Dr. R. Sophian, a meningitis expert, told Governor Stubbs that the disease affecting the horses was dissimilar to meningitis.

Mexican rebels cut all traffic and communication between Naco, Aris., and Cananea, Sonora, Mexico, where about five hundred Americans reside. Shortly afterward a passenger train arrived at Naco, carrying five hundred rifles and 150,000 rounds of ammunition sent by the United States government from the arsenal at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas, to arm the American residents in Cananea. The rebels cut the railway in an attempt to prevent the shipment of arms reaching the Americans at Cananea. Six bridges were burned.

Mexican rebels crossed the boundary and were engaged by United States soldiers on the Lang ranch, 50 miles east of Douglas, according to a report received in Douglas, Ariz. Fourteen American troopers held back 25 rebels, killing five and wounding one of the Mexicans, it is reported. The rebels are believed to be in command of Inez Salazar, whose men also engaged American soldiers below Hachita, N. M., farther to the east.

One of the most thorough jobs of wholesale burglary ever accomplished in New York City has been discovered. The police were called to an eleven-story loft building in Unicity place by the sounding of a burglar alarm. It was found that burglars had been through every one of the first floors, which were occupied by clothing manufacturers; had gone through all the stock rooms and offices and had removed several truck loads of merchandise.

Thirty girls were forced to leap out of second story windows to escape death when an explosion caused by benzine vapor wrecked a building occupied by a dyeing and cleaning establishment in Chicago. Rudolph Spinner, foreman of the establishment, was crushed to death. His body was dug out of the ruins by firemen. One girl who jumped out of a window was picked up unconscious and with both legs fractured. Others in rushing to reach the stairways were knocked down and trampled.

The standardization in depth of all canals along the Atlantic seaboard was advocated, amid much enthusiasm on the part of the delegates, by Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina in his address to the Atlantic Deep Waterways convention at its fifth annual convention at New London, Conn.

It is officially announced that the total deaths from the explosion of fire damp in the Clarence pit, near Bruay, numbered sixty. These include several miners who died after being brought to the surface. Most of the bodies were so mangled as to be unrecognizable. A further explosion occurred and the entire pit is on fire. Mining engineers say it must be sealed. Twenty-one bodies had been brought to the surface, before the continued explosion caused the rescuing parties to abandon their efforts.

Five companies of Michigan National Guardsmen, with rifles loaded to kill, are camped within and outside the walls of the state penitentiary. The convicts, whom the authorities allege were responsible for an outbreak—probably the worst in the history of the institution—are locked up in th eheart of the prison, many of them being chained in their cells.

Washington.

A package more deadly than dynamite was delivered to the United States hygienic laboratory in Washington, D. C., by a special messenger who mopped his brow with evident relief when he got a receipt for it. The package contained 50,000 ticks infected with the deadly Rocky mountain spotted fever, enough to wipe out the population of the nation's capital should they be liberated from the glass tubes. The fever carriers were part of those with which the late Surgeon T. B. McClintic was experimenting when he died.

Treasury figures for August indicated that the government revenues were jumping over the returns for the same period last year. Customs receipts for August and July, the first two months of the present fiscal year, ran $4,000,000 each above the figures for the same two months of 1911. Ordinary internal revenue taxes were an increase of $3,000,000 more for the two-month period of this year than for last year. Aside from the Panama canal and the public debt, the excess of ordinary disbursements over receipts was approximately $16,000,000 less than last year.

The message of explanation and appeal sent by President Gomez of Cuba to President Taft has done very much to clear up the situation growing out of the attack on Charge d'Affaires Hugh S. Gibson of the American legation in Havana, Cuba, by Enrique Maxsi, a Cuban newspaper man. State department officials expressed their satisfaction with the evident sincerity of the Cuban president's attitude. It was made plain, however, that the department would by no means relax its demand for complete satisfaction for the insult to the flag of the United States.

MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

GOOD ROADS MEET PROGRAM

Executive Committee of the Alabama Good Roads Association Holds Meeting.

Birmingham.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Alabama Good Roads association in the Chamber of Commerce plans were consummated for the entertainment of the delegates to the annual convention of the association in Birmingham on October 8, 9 and 10. John Craft of Mobile, president of the association, presided at the meeting and nine members of the committee were present.

From the plans made the first day's session of the convention will be given over to organization and the reading of the reports of the officials and delegates. The second day's session will be devoted to practical talks on road building by engineers. The third day's session will be held as good roads day at the Alabama State Fair, and several congressmen from the state will be invited to attend and address the crowds at the fair. On the afternoon of the 10th the delegates will be entertained with a car ride and a barbecue. Night sessions will be held during the convention and stereopticon views and addresses by government experts will be featured.

It was also decided by the committee to invite Gov. Thomas R. Marshall to attend the convention, he to select his own day.

Birmingham.—In an explosion at the Great Elk mine, near Carbon Hill, in Walker county, Percy Fwinwood, a pumper, was killed outright. No one elese was in the mine at the time of the explosion, and the pumper was the only man injured. The mine is the property of the Galloway Coal company, with local offices at Carbon Hill, though the company is a Birmingham firm and has Birmingham offices. According to officials the explosion was purely local as the heading in which Fwinwood was killed is isolated from the main slope entrance. No damage was done to the mine, and the pocket of gas was burnt out, thus enabling the men who searched for the body to proceed without danger to themselves.

Huntsville.—Local fire insurance men are preparing to entertain the fire prevention bureau of the Southeastern Undrwriters' Association, which will meet here September 26. About 40 special agents of that many insurance companies are expected here and their purpose is to teach the property owners how to minimize their fire losses through the best preventive methods. A banquet in honor of the visitors will be given by the Huntsville insurance agents.

Birmingham.—It was predicted that James B. Sloan, state senator from Blount county would be named United States district attorney for the Mobile district. According to rumors in official circles President Taft has expressed himself as willing to appoint Senator Sloan. Recommendations favorable to the Blount county senator are in the hands of the President. This announcement will cause surprise, it is probable, inasmuch as it has been believed generally that a man of south Alabama would be named to succeed W. H. Armbrecht, resigned.

Opelika.—Damon Lodge No. 14, Knights of Pythias, have appointed committees to arrange for entertaining the 10th district convention of K. of P. in this city, September 25. The tenth district comprises about 15 lodges and over 50 visiting knights are expectd to attend the convention. A reception will be given the vistors at the evening session.

Cuba.—Cotton has gone backward for the past 10 days, and no bumper crop is expected. Shedding has been genral and the usual deterioration for August is now taking place.

Atlanta, Ga.—A young woman, registerd at a local hotel as Clara Cameron, Birmingham, Ala., committed suicide in the local terminal station. W. D. Whitehead, also of Birmingham, is being held by the police pending an investigation. No cause for the act is known.

Marion.—Cotton throughout this section has deteriorated from 10 to 20 per cent during the present week, due to the extreme hot days.

Gadsden.—Articles of incorporation for the Gadsden, Bellevue and Lookout Mountain railroad were filed with the probate judge. The object of the company is to construct a railroad from Sixth street to the top of Lookout mountain near Nectonia Falls, a distance of more than three miles. The capital is $100,000, which paid in [illegible]

SYLACAUGA WINS BIG FIGHT

Ex-Governor Comer and Associates Decide that This is the Best Place for $100,000 Mill.

Birmingham.—Sylacauga gets the $700,000 cotton mill to be erected by ex-Gov. B. B. Comer and associates At a meeting held here at which the reports of several places were received Sylacauga was decided upon. With that decision ended a very warm and spirited campaign, that has been made for the location of the mill.

The company has acquired 230 acres of land in Sylacauga on which the mill will be located as well as the homes for the employes.

The plant, while not the largest in the state, will be the most modern perhaps, inasmuch as a great many new features will be introduced into the operations.

Marion.—Bids opened for the construction of sevral miles of additional highways under the recent bond issue. The most important road will be that leading to Borrough's bridge, which will be partly constructed by the state appropriation. The town of Marion is spending a thousand dollars on the street leading to this road, which is regarded as the most important of all roads radiating from Marion.

Huntsville.—The special criminal term of the law and equity court which has been held here during the last four and one-half weeks by Judge James H. Ballentine, adjourned. A majority of the 350 criminal cases that were on the docket when court opened were disposed of.

Tuskegee.—The public roads in all sections of Macon county are being put in excellent shape before the heavy fall traffic sets in. A new road is also being constructed between this city and Chehaw, the junction on the Western railway.

Montgomery. — The Montgomery members of the committee on arrangements for an Alabama Centennial Exposition in 1919 at a meeting at the capitol decided to call a meeting of the whole committee for Montgomery one day during the state fair in October. The action of the subcommittee in calling the meeting places them on record as favoring Montgomery as the site for the exposition. During the meeting discussion arose as to the relative merits of Birmingham and Montgomery for the meeting of the committee on arrangements next month. Chairman Owen finally decided on Montgomery.

Montgomery.—Discrepancies to the amount of nearly $1,000 were found in the books, accounts and vouchers of officials of Cleburne county, according to a report submitted to Hugh D. Merrill, judge of the Seventh judicial circuit by Frank V. Evans, examiner of public accounts. A copy of Mr. Evan' report has been filed in the office of Governor O'Neal. Most of the discrepancies found by the examiner were of a techincal nature, and, in the language of Mr. Evans, were "charges made under the law as interpreted by the courts and by the attorney general."

Montgomery. — Sums aggregating nearly $1,000 were due the state and county by officials of Cleburne county, according to Frank V. Evans, examiner of public accounts, in a report submitted to Judge Merrill, of the seventh judicial circuit, and filed in the office of Governor O'Neal. The Sums are due as the result of discrepancies of a technical nature, and of legal charges under the law recently interpreted by the courts and by the attorney general, says the examiner in his report.

Ashland.—The Farmers' union of Clay county held an all day rally at High Pine, four miles from Ashland. Lieut. Gov. Walter Seed, Commissioner of Agriculture Kolb and Congressman Heflin spoke. Congressman Heflin called attention to the high consumption of American cotton both at home and abroad. The trade this year, he said had been better than ever before and the record for consumption had been made. "This crop ought to bring from 12 1-2 to 15 cents. It will bring that if our people demand it and show by refusing to sell for less that they are in earnest."

Fort Payne.—Pursuant to a call of W. J. Hawkins, chairman of the republican party in this county, a number of republicans met at the court house at this place September 12 to nominate a county ticket.

Ashville.—Gayle Ford, cashier of the Bank of Dixon Springs, Dixon Springs, Tenn., who killed himself, was the founder of the Ashville Savings bank. He also caused the erection of about 20 institutions of this kind in Tennessee and several in this state.

Tuskegee.—J. B. Myhand, of Society Hill beat, holds the record thus far for fine corn in this section. He brought to town five ears averaging eighteen inches in length and were fully matured in every respect.

Birmingham.—While engaged in dismantling the Peoples Telephone company cable, Charles Bizzus, a lineman for the Southern Bell Telephone company, was electrocuted near Overton station. Twenty-thirty hundred volts of electricity struck the lineman just above the head, causing instant death.

CHAPTER I.

A Perilous Mission.

Several of us had remained rather late that evening about the cheerful fire in front of my hut—for the nights were still chilly, although it was May, and the dreadful winter passed—discussing the improved condition of our troops, the rigid discipline of Baron de Steuben, and speculating on what would probably be attempted now that Sir Henry Clinton had succeeded to the command of the forces opposing us. I remember Maxwell joined us, together with Knox of the artillery, each man with a different theory of campaign, but alike agreeing that, in spite of all we had endured during those months of suffering and privation at Valley Forge, the time to strike once again was near at hand, although our numbers were barely half that of the enemy.

It must have been midnight when I crept into a bunk, and even then found sleep absent, my eyes gazing out through the open door to where the embers of the fire glowed red, and a sentinel paced back and forth in regular monotony. Suddenly he halted, and challenged hoarsely, flinging forward his gun. There was an indistinguishable answer, and as I straightened up the figure of a man blotted out the doorway.

"Major Lawrence?"

"Yes. What is it?" I swung to the floor, unable to recognize the voice. The man's hand rose to salute.

"I am Colonel Gibbs' orderly. General Hamilton wishes you to report at once at headquarters."

"The Potts house?"

"Yes, sir."

I dressed hastily, my pulses throbbing with eagerness. Whatever the message meant, there was certainly some purpose of vital importance in sending for me at this unusual hour, and I was boy enough still to welcome any form of active service. No duty of the war had so tried me as the long winter of waiting. Yet, rapidly as I moved, the orderly had disappeared before I got outside, and I picked my way as best I could alone through the darkness, along the rear of McIntosh's huts, until I reached the low fence surrounding the Potts house. Here a sentinel challenged, calling the corporal of the guard, and in his company I trudged up the path to the front door. There was a light showing through the window to the left, although the shade was closely drawn, and a guard stood within the hall. At the first sound of our approach, however, a side door was flung open, letting forth a gleam of illumination, and I perceived the short, slight figure of Hamilton, as he peered forward to get a better glimpse of my face.

"All right, corporal," he said tersely, gripping my hand. "Come in, major; your promptness would seem to indicate a readiness to get into service once more."

"I had not yet fallen asleep," I explained, "but we are all eager enough for action of any description."

He smiled cheerily.

"You will soon be busy, never fear." He closed the door behind us, and, with a glance, I viewed the room and its occupants. It was a small, low ceilinged apartment, containing a table, a few chairs and a high commode. A few coals glowed in the wide fireplace, and the walls were dingy with smoke. Three candles, already burning low, gave fitful illumination, revealing four occupants, all known to me. At an open door to the right stood a sweet-faced woman, glancing back curiously at my entrance, and I whipped off my hat bowing low. Once before I had seen her, Mistress Washington, and welcomed the gracious recognition in her eyes. Colonel Gibbs stood before the fireplace motionless, but my glance swept past him to the calm, uplifted face above the pile of papers littering the table. He was not looking at me, but his eyes were turned toward his wife.

"It is not necessary for you to retire," he said quietly. "We shall not detain this gentleman except for a few moments."

"It is not because of the major's coming I withdraw," she replied pleasantly, "but the hour is late, and I am very tired. Good night, all."

Washington's eyes were upon the door until it closed; then he turned slightly, facing me. Before he spoke again, Hamilton broke in:

"This is the officer, sir, recommended by General Maxwell—Major Lawrence of the Maryland line."

I bowed silently, and the commander rose to his feet, extending his hand.

"No doubt we have met before," he said slowly. "You have been with us for some time?"

"My first action was at Harlem, sir."

"You could not have been at Valley Forge during the past winter, however?"

"I was with the Marquis de la Fayette at Albany."

"Ah, yes," his face clouding at the recollection. "A young officer, Hamilton, but capable, no doubt. You have served him before, you said?"

"Yes, at Long Island, and he entered New York once at my request."

Washington's gray eyes were still on my face.

"Lawrence is a Massachusetts name."

"Not exclusively," I returned, "as our branch are Virginians."

The stern lines about the mouth relaxed into a smile.

"Indeed; from the eastern shore, then. I recall now having once met a Judge John Lawrence, whose wife was a Lee."

"My father, sir."

His hand rested firm on my shoulder, as his glance turned to Hamilton.

"I require no further commendation, colonel. You will find the papers in the second drawer. Please explain all the details carefully to Major Lawrence."

"This is a simple duty, major," said Hamilton, "but may prove a dangerous one. You have been selected because of previous successful efforts of a similar nature, but the commander-in-chief does not order your going; we seek a volunteer."

"Without asking the nature of the service," I answered sincerely, "I rejoice at the privilege."

"I knew that, Lawrence," heartily. "That answer accords with your well-earned reputation throughout the army. I will explain briefly the situation. Early this evening our pickets—or rather some partisan scouts near Newtown—captured a British officer, in field uniform, on his way from New York to Sir William Howe in Philadelphia. The prisoner was brought here, and on examination proved to be Lieut. Edgar Fortesque of the Forty-second regiment of foot. These troops came over with the last detachment, and arrived in New York less than a month ago. On searching Fortesque's clothing we found this dispatch," holding out a sealed paper, "which we opened. It is not of any great military importance, being merely an order for Howe to proceed at once to New York, taking with him certain officers of his staff, and placing a naval vessel at his disposal."

He paused, turning the paper over in his hands.

"However," he went on slowly, "it affords us the opportunity we have long been seeking of getting a competent military observer into Philadelphia. Now that Sir Henry Clinton is in command of the British forces directly opposing us, it is necessary that we know accurately their number, state of discipline, guns and any point of weakness in the defences of the city. We require also information regarding the division of troops under Sir Henry's command—the proportion of British, Hessians and Tories, together with some inkling as to Clinton's immediate plans. There is a rumor abroad that Philadelphia is to be evacuated, and that the British forces contemplate a retreat overland to New York. Civilian fugitives drift into our camp constantly, bearing all manner of wild reports, but these accounts are so varied as to be practically valueless. We must possess accurate details, and to gain these a man would need to be in the city several days, free to move about, observe, and converse with the officers of the garrison. Do I make myself clear?"

"Yes, sir; you propose forwarding the dispatch by an officer who shall impersonate this captured lieutenant."

"Exactly. Fortesque is a young fellow of about your age and build. He has been in the army only eight months and in this country less than thirty days. It is scarcely probable he is known personally to any of the present Philadelphia garrison. There is a risk, of course, but in this case it would seem to be small." He picked up a paper from off the table. "Here is an officer's roster of the forty-second regiment. It might be well for you to familiarize yourself with a few of the names."

I studied the list a moment, bending down closer to the nearest candle, while rapidly reviewing in my own mind the duty required. I had no thought of refusal, yet appreciated to the full the possible danger of the venture, and felt anxious to make no serious mistake. I had achieved a reputation for reckless daring, yet this kind of service was hardly to my liking. To wear British uniform meant my condemnation as a spy, if discovered, and a death of disgrace. I had been within the lines of the enemy often before, but always as a scout, wearing the homespun of the Maryland line, but this was to be a masquerade, a juggling with chance. I was not greatly afraid of being unmasked by the officers of the garrison, but there were those then in Philadelphia who knew me—loyalists, secret sympathizers with our cause, and not a few deserters from the army—whom I might encounter at any turn in the road. The prospect was not alluring, yet a glance aside at the profile of Washington, now bending low over a mass of papers, instantly stiffened my resolve. It was work I had no excuse to shirk—indeed no inclination—so I returned Hamilton's glance of inquiry frankly.

"You wish me to go at once?"

"The earlier the better. I will furnish passports through our lines, and hard riding will put you across the neutral ground by daylight."

CHAPTER II.

Within the Enemy's Lines.

A long cavalry cape concealing the British uniform I wore, my horse and myself were ferried across the Schuylkill, just below the mouth of Valley creek, and there, amid the silence and darkness of the eastern shore, I parted with Hamilton, who had accompanied me thus far, whispering final words of instruction. My horse was a fresh one, chosen from the stables of the Life Guard, but the trappings were of the British service. Within five minutes I was out of sight of the picket fire on the river bank, riding steadily southeast through the night, every nerve alert. An hour's riding found me well beyond our outermost pickets, yet, in fear that I might encounter some body of irregulars, scouting the neutral ground, I held on to my passport until I perceived the first flush of dawn in the east. Then, convinced of close proximity to the British guard lines, I tore the paper into fragments. Avoiding all roads, and seeking every bit of concealment possible, it was already morning before I plunged suddenly into a Hessian picket post, the distant smoke of the Philadelphia chimneys darkening the sky ahead. Unable to speak German, my uniform won sufficient courtesy, so that I was escorted back under guard to an outpost of the Queen's Rangers, where I explained my presence and rank to a red-faced captain in Tory green, so insolent in manner as to be insulting, until I exhibited the sealed dispatch, and demanded to be escorted at once to Sir William Howe. This brought results, and I entered the city under escort of a dozen mounted their green coats faced with dingy white, cocked hats flapping as they rode.

"No Doubt We Have Met Before."

It was thus we came to Callowhill, and the encampment of British grenadiers, an officer of the Fifty-fifth regiment volunteering to guide me to Howe's quarters in High street. He was a genial fellow, and pointed out various places of interest, as we rode more slowly through the streets close along the river side, questioning me often upon affairs in New York, to which I returned such vague answers as pleased me, paying small heed to the truth. All along the river were redoubts, well garrisoned, with black gun muzzles pointing out across the water. Many houses had been razed, and their debris, together with the fire ruin of the past winter, gave to everything a look of desolation. Much artillery was parked in the state house yard, and several vessels of war were lying at anchor in the stream, while the entire shore line was filled with barges, decorated as for a fete, a large force of men laboring about them. My companion, observing my interest attracted in that direction, reined up his horse to explain.

"Those are the galleys being made ready for the Mischianza, Fortesque," he said, waving his hand. "You came to us at a lucky hour."

"The Mischianza?" I asked, puzzled by the strange term. "Some festival, you mean?—some gala day?"

"'Tis an Italian word, they tell me, signifying medley. The officers give it in farewell to Sir William, who will sail tomorrow. A pretty penny it costs. See, there is Major O'Hara now, one of the managers; there are three others, Sir John Wrottlesly, Major Gardiner, and the chief engineer, Montresor. Do you know them? No? Oh, I had forgotten you have only just arrived. You will know them ere long, however, for they are the leaders in such affairs. That is Captain Andre there with O'Hara." He waved his hand, and the younger officer lifted his cocked hat in acknowledgment. "Let us spur over there, lieutenant, until I get you a ticket of invitation."

I followed, careless of the loss of time so I could both see and hear.

"Andre, this is Lieutenant Fortesque just in from New York with dispatches for Howe. I have promised him a ticket for tonight."

The young officer laughingly extended a hand.

"The more the merrier, Craig. With the Forty-second I see, sir; knew your colonel well. You'll find America isn't so bad, after you get used to it. We've had a gay time here, eh, O'Hara? The best of liquor, and the prettiest of girls, and now we'll show the town something it won't forget in a hurry." He held out a card to me. "Rather ornate, considering the printers in these colonies; designed it myself."

It was certainly a handsome souvenir, perhaps six inches by four in size, engraved as in a shield, yielding a view of the sea, with the setting sun, and on a wreath the words, "Lucco discendens, ancto splendore resurgam," while at the top was the general's crest, bearing the words, "Vive vale."

"A fine conceit, indeed," I confessed, "and if the pageant be equal to its promise 'twill be well worth the seeing. What is the purpose, gentlemen?"

"To give Sir William fit farewell," returned Andre, pleased at my unstinted praise. "And now that the Lord has sent us a fine day, I can promise a festival worthy the herald. But, Fortesque, if you would have audience with Howe, I advise you to get on, for he will have few spare moments between now and day-dawn tomorrow."

We parted with much bowing, Craig and I guiding our horses through the crowded streets, being kept too busy avoiding accidents to exchange conversation. Howe's headquarters on High street were not pretentious, and, except for a single sentinel posted at the door, were unguarded. I was admitted without delay. An aide took my name, and within a very few moments Sir William himself entered through a rear door, attired in field uniform. He greeted me with much affability, glancing hastily over the papers handed him, and then into my face.

"These do not greatly change my former plans," he said, "but I am glad to know I can retain my present staff. There was no special news in New York, lieutenant?"

"None of particular importance, I believe, sir. We landed only a short time ago."

"Yes. I understand. You were fortunate to get through here so easily—the Jerseys are a hotbed of rebellion. Do you return with me by water?"

"I believe that was left to my own discretion. I should be glad of a day or two in Philadelphia."

"Easily arranged. While I shall leave the city tomorrow no as to give Clinton a fair field, I shall remain as Lord Howe's [illegible] for some little time previous to [illegible] pline relaxed, being boisterous, and considerably under the influence of liquor. The uniform worn, together with my dragoon guard, saved me from trouble, and I found the fellow sufficiently intelligent to be of value. I dare not make notes, and yet recall clearly even now the stations of the troops, together with a clear mental outline of the main defences of the city. I made no attempt to pass beyond the limits, but, from statements of the dragoon, and various officers with whom I conversed, mapped in my mind the entire scheme of defense. I visited a number of these encampments, finding in each merely a small guard retained for the day, the majority of the troops being off on liberty. Soon after noon these began to throng the water front, eager to view the coming spectacle. I was, myself, in the Yager's camp, finishing a late lunch, with a few officers, when the announcement came that the water procession had started.

CHAPTER III.

The Fete and Mischianza.

I confess that up to this time I had experienced little interest in the affair. After Valley Forge it was hard for an American soldier to admire such boys' play, or to enter into the spirit of British fun making. Besides the danger of my position, the fear of some slip of tongue betraying me, the knowledge that I was in the very heart of the enemy's camp, with grim, stern duties to perform and a return journey to accomplish, kept me nerved to a point where I thought of little else than my task. But now I dared not remain indifferent, and, indeed, the enthusiasm of my companions became contagious, and I joined with them eagerly, as they hurried forth to the best point of view. Once there the sight revealed aroused me to an enthusiasm scarcely less than that of those crowding about. Few, indeed, have ever witnessed so gorgeous a spectacle as that river presented.

Well out in the stream lay the vessels of war—the Fanny, Roebuck and Vigilant—together with a long line of transports, stretching as far as the eye could see, flags flying, and decks crowded with spectators. The pageant came down with the tide, moving in three divisions to the inspiring music of several bands, the oars of galleys and barges keeping exact intervals. As they passed us the officers beside me named the various occupants. In the leading galley were Sir William, Lord Howe, Sir Henry Clinton, the officers of their suites and some ladies. In the last of the boats stood General Knyphausen, the Hessian commander. Between these were flat-boats, covered with green cloth, loaded with ladies and gentlemen, or else containing bands. Six barges, darting here and there, kept open space amid the [illegible]

TO BE PRESENTED

OLD SOLDIERS TO RECEIVE CROSSES. THE LAST DELIVERY

On Friday, September 27th, 1912, at three o'clock in the afternoon the Daughters of Confederacy will deliver to nine old soldiers of Chilton county bronze Crosses of Honor. The exercises will be public and all are cordially invited to be present. At the meeting of the Daughters year before last it was decided that the time limit for the delivery of Crosses would be placed at September, 1911, but at the meeting last year the time was extended to September, 1912, so that not a few old soldiers who have never heretofore received Crosses will be decorated this year. On the occasion of the delivery Senator Curry will make an address and other exercises of a suitable character will be had.

Those to receive Crosses are Messrs. Riley Burnett, of Billingsley; W. J. Bone, Lee Hayes, H. C. Young, G. W. Jones, and A. C. Mims of Clanton; W. H. Skaggs of Jemison; W. H. Claughton of Verbena, and S. A. Blassengame of Cooper.

All of these gentlemen are respectfully requested by the Daughters of the Confederacy to be present promptly at the time ance to lend charm to the occasion

This is the first public presentation ever made in Clanton and those having the exercises in hand are doing all within their power to make it a memorable event.

Soon the old soldiers will pass away; soon his place will be taken by those who know nothing of the horrors of war—who have never suffered the deprivation of a soldier in the ranks battling for his country's cause; let us, therefore, honor them while they live.

Roses look fairly well upon the last humble bed of a departed one but they are infinitely sweeter and more beautiful to the living eye.

FROM MR. GULLEDGE

Editor Press:

I call attention of the people of Chilton county to the assertion of Prof. Keller, who is the Alabama Highway engineer, on page 12 of the Montgomery Advertiser of this date. In this Mr. Keller says he will locate the two state roads east and west and one north and south through counties which show activity in the building of good roads of their accord. This puts it up good and strong to the people of our county.

Suppose Mr. Keller should, on account of special activity by Elmore, Coosa and the counties further north, give the highway to them, when the logical route is from Montgomery right along the line of the L. & N. railroad from Mountain Creek to Calera? Wake up, boys, or you may get left.

Just a few people in these parts are showing a disposition to carry out the pledge made at the mass meeting of Jan. 21st. Others who have teams and help galore are demanding pay or "I will not work," they say.

God helps those who first help themselves, and on this basis I trust the good Lord will soon have occasion to get busy in old Chilton.

F A. Gulledge.

NEW RURAL ROUTE

Postmaster Dudley informs us that he has positive information from one of the Post Office Inspectors that he will be here within the next few days to investigate the feasibility of establishing a new rural route from Clanton. This route, if established, will cross the railroad going northeast at Lomax and will run by the Poor House, thence on to Dorminy's mill by old Wardy post office and back to Clanton by Jas. Connell's and Walter Maddox's. It will accommodate a large number of people who are now receiving their mail from a rural route out of Jemison.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes, "Chamberlain's Cough Kemedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup, and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

Dr. and Mrs. Hosea F. Downs of Rockford are on a visit to their parents here.

TO ENLARGE INFIRMARY

Dr. P. I. Hopkins informs us that work will be started immediately upon the erection of a second story to his infirmary on Seventh Street.

This was found to be necessary by the constantly increasing patronage received by Dr. Hopkins. Seven or eight additional rooms will be added so that patients seeking rest and physician's attention can be cared for in the most up-to-date manner. These rooms will be furnish in the most modern sanitary manner and will reflect great credit not only upon Dr. Hopkins but upon the entire town.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health. Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regarding the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says:

"I was afflicted with constipation and billiousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation, and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, neglect too long to employ the curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your system clean," and it's good advice. Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

RED MEN CELEBRATED

The local tribe of Red men, known as Waxahatchie Tribe No. 9, had a gala day of it last Saturday, to which a number of their friends were invited.

Preparations were made for the accommodation of 500 or more and fully that number enjoyed the occasion with the red-skinned tribe. Besides a picnic dinner, barbecued meats were served in abundance. Besides the good things to eat there was a flow of wit and a feast of reason; besides this a brass band was in attendand place named.

Judge E B. Deason acted as Master of Ceremonies and presided with a dignity that would have become a more serious occasion.

The speakers were Mr. Frank S. Andress, of Birmingham, Great Sachem of Alabama, Mr. M. D. Freedman. of Birmingham, Past Great Sachem of the Great Council of Alabama, and Major Gorman of Birmingham; W. J. Armstrong, of the local tribe also made a short address which was greatly enjoyed Much credit for the success of the occasion is due Mr. Jos. P. Gore, who was Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

ABOUT MR. PERKINS

THINGS CONGRESSMAN STANLEY SAID OF COL. ROOSEVELT'S FINANCIAL AID.

WIDOW AND ORPHAN ROBBED

Plain Talk Concerning the Man Who Contributed $50,000 of Other Peo-People's Money to Aid in the Election of T. R.

People everywhere are asking why George Perkins, late of J. P. Morgan & Co., and now of the Harvester trust, is such an enthusiastic Progressive, and why Mr. Roosevelt has made him his campaign chairman. Both have explained, each is pleased with the other. Roosevelt tells us of Perkins' coming to him, but perhaps, when all is known, it will develop that he went after Perkins!

Mr. Morgan's ex-partner has been advocating this long time the creation of a court of big business at the capital city which, as we understand his proposition, will leave the government very little to do. This is similar to Roosevelt's plan to establish an autocratic stewardship of the public welfare untrammeled by courts or by congress. When great men think along the same lines they inevitably must come together.

In connection with Mr. Perkins' past it may be of interest to hear in part what Congressman Stanley had to say in the house respecting the $50,000 of other people's money contributed by Perkins to aid in Roosevelt's election:

"He gave his personal check to Mr. Bliss and was reimbursed by check of the New York Life Insurance company, payable to J. P. Morgan & Co. The proceeds of this check were traced to Mr. Perkins, and he was arrested under a warrant charging him with grand larceny. Perkins knew the consent of the policy holders was necessary to save this appropriation of their funds from larceny, and that consent was not obtained, and could not have been obtained.

"Who were these pilfered policy holders? The most pathetic and helpless figures in all this tale of tears—the young mother, wrapped in the black habiliments of woe; orphans walking the name of father above the silent dead. He robbed the widow of her slender patrimony and snatched the last crumb from the pinched fingers of helpless childhood. In all the loathsome annals of greed and graft there is nothing so sordid and pitiless as the creatures who did it. This man escaped a prison cell by the skin of his teeth for having picked the pockets of a shroud."

This is what Mr. Stanley said of the campaign manager of the third term party, whose motto is "let the people rule!" This is Mr. Perkins.

Did Roosevelt Tell the Truth?

Questions of veracity are so much in evidence nowadays that, happening to pick up an old newspaper, the above question immediately arose:

President Roosevelt, on being informed of Mr. Taft's nomination for the presidency, said:

"I feel that the country is indeed to be congratulated upon the nomination of Mr. Taft. I have known him intimately for many years, and I have a peculiar feeling for him because throughout that time we have worked for the same object with the same purposes and ideals.

"I do not believe there could be found in all the country a man so well fitted to be president. He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely disinterested and upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the nation's needs without and within and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens.

"He would be emphatically a president of the plain people as Lincoln, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagogy, the least tendency to arouse or appeal to class hatred of any kind.

"He has a peculiar and intimate knowledge of and sympathy with the needs of all of our people—of the farmer, of the wage-worker, of the business man, of the property owner. No matter what a man's occupation or social position, no matter what his creed, his color, or the section of the country from which he comes, if he is an honest, hard-working man, who tries to do his duty toward his neighbor and toward the country, he can rest assured that he will have in Mr. Taft the most upright of representatives and the most fearless of champions. Mr. Taft stands against privilege, and he stands pre-eminently for the broad principles of American citizenship which lie at the foundation of our national well-being."

If Mr. Roosevelt told the truth then, what shall be said of some of his recent utterances?

Rabidly Anti-Roosevelt.

Pushed into a corner, Roosevelt fights back. "Liar!" "Liar!" "Liar!" he shouts. That is his answer. That is his usual answer.

But of what avail is it to denounce Pearson as base? That doesn't meet the charge that he received [illegible] from the Standard Oil company. It doesn't prevent [illegible] from saying that the [illegible] Pearson testified that he not only [illegible] $100,000 to Treasurer Bliss, but that Bliss came back later and asked for $150,000 more; that Bliss informed him that both Roosevelt and Cortelyou appreciated the first contribution and that a second one would be likewise appreciated.

There is testimony given directly by the man who made the contribution in behalf of Standard Oil and refused to give another cent. It is no answer for Mr. Roosevelt to call [illegible] "liar" [illegible]

TAFT THREAT BAD MEDICINE

Assault on the Tariff No Longer Is an Attack on Citadel of Business.

"To them I appeal, as to all Republicans, to join us in an earnest effort to avert the political and economical revolution and business paralysis which Republican defeat will bring about."—From Mr. Taft's speech of acceptance.

This amazing utterance is either an honest forecast of conditions or a threat. Which is it?

In order to be frightened by a curse the "consumer" must believe in the divinity or fetich in whose name the curse is launched. Our ancestors believed in Wotan and Loki; but the man who would curse in the name of these divinities today would not frighten anybody, and would get locked up in the observation ward into the bargain. Now in the good old days of Mark Hanna such talk as Mr. Taft's was good medicine. It worked. The barons of protection stood ready to put the screws upon the general business of the country in the event of Democratic victory. An assault upon the tariff was "an attack on the citadel of business."

Some things have changed since those days. People have been reading and thinking. They know, for example, that the steel interests of the United States are just selling 20,000 tons of rails to one Canadian railroad and three-fourths that amount to another. They know that the manufacturers of the United States are selling in the foreign market one thousand millions of dollars of manufactured goods a year.

They know that there is a coalition of banking interests in the United States that might produce a panic through the contraction of credits, if it pleased. They mean, ultimately, to get to that situation and reform the currency. Meanwhile, they are watching the financial horizon with one eye, and keeping the other on the witches' buckets that brew the storms.

Mr. Taft's threat is bad medicine. It is a worn-out curse. The divinities behind it are discredited. The 100 per cent. taxes on gloves and blankets are going to be replaced by reasonable duties and the tariff is going to receive like treatment all along the line. Our steel mills are going to keep on exporting rails by the ten thousand tons. Our more than $3,000,000 worth of manufactured exports are going to continue to be sent out on every working day in the year, via the seven seas. The crops are going to be harvested. These United States will continue to do business at the same old stand. They will do more of it than ever under a Democratic president, and with a congress playing the open game. In a few years, good old Mr. Taft will wonder how he could have ever believed, without assistance, the nonsense wherewith he sprinkled his acceptance speech.—St. Louis Republic.

Governor Wilson Talks to Farmers.

The chief good points of Woodrow Wilson's talk to farmers of three states were three:

First, he was interested himself. He believes profoundly in government by public opinion, in the value of the thought on public questions of the average man. We have heard speeches by presidential candidates—some of them not more than four years ago—which had about as much of the spontaneity that comes from a sense that the thing said is worth saying as the greeting extended to the "three little maids" by Poo-Bah, in "The Mikado." But Governor Wilson has the zest that comes from enjoyment of real opportunity.

Second, Governor Wilson is clear in his understanding of national problems. He knows human weaknesses and selfishnesses; this helps him to discuss the tariff intelligently. He knows how to organize and govern men; this makes him worth listening to when he discusses remedies.

Third, the governor realizes the tremendous strength of the forces behind the rising tide of Democratic success. He realizes that victory at the polls is practically assured and that the great problem is to get ready to use that victory wisely. He is thinking not of election day only, but of the four years which will follow.

All United for Wilson.

The unanimity with which all Democrats and Democratic newspapers are supporting Woodrow Wilson is remarkable. There has not been a nomination so generally accepted and so warmly ratified by any party in many years. After every national convention there have been daily reports about papers which have repudiated the candidate nominated and about prominent people who have gone over to the other party. On this occasion there are practically no Democratic papers but what are heartily supporting the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson. All Democrats are for him, and thinking, progressive Republicans are for him.

Collective Housekeeping.

An English paper tells of an experiment in collective housekeeping in what is known as Brent Garden village. The dwelling houses contain all improvements except a kitchen. Meals for everybody are cooked at a central hall, and may either be eaten there or sent home. A four-course dinner costs only 1 shilling and 6 pence. Servants are supplied, when needed, from the central hall at a cost of about ten cents an hour.

Must No Place for Consumptives.

Physicians in all of the eastern states will be asked by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis to stop sending consumptives in the last stages of tuberculosis and without sufficient means to the southwestern part of the United States in search of health. Now it is impossible to tell accurately how many consumptives there are at present living in the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, southern California, and western Texas, it is probable that no less than ten per cent of the 6,000,000 people in this territory have tuberculosis themselves, have come to the west because some members of their family have it. Every year, the health authorities estimate, not less than 10,000 consumptives, hopelessly diseased, go west to die. For these cases, the climate of this section of the country do nothing, and they are compelled to die in strange surroundings and thousands of miles from home and friends. The National Association points out further that from 50 to 60 per cent. of these advanced cases are too poor to provide the proper necessaries of life, and they either starved to death, or compelled to accept the meager charity of this part of the country affords.

A FOOD CONVERT

Found Food the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble keeps up the patent medicine business and helps fill up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia — is caused by what is put into the stomach in the form of improper food, the kind that destroys the strength of the digestive organs so they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to pills is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash further bathes his power to move. the load.

Quit helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food." Says a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts and, after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.

"I am much stronger, not nervous and can do more work without getting so tired, and am better every way."

Try Grape-Nuts best with cream and three or four heaping teaspoonfuls as a final part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. RACER CRASHES INTO SPECTATORS

EDDIE HASHA, FAMOUS MOTOR CYCLE RIDER, IN A SMASH UP.

THIRTEEN BADLY INJURED

Daring Texan Was Doing 92 Miles When Rear Wheel Strikes Upper Rail of Track.

Newark, N. J.—Eddie Hasha of Waco, Tex., holder of several world's records for motorcycle racing, plunged over the rail of the course at the Newark motordrome into a crowd, causing the death of six persons, including himself, and 13 are badly injured.

The only two of the six dead positively identified up to a late hour, were Hasha and Johnny Albright, a Denver motorcycle who was riding third in the race. The other four dead were boys and young men among the spectators.

Five thousand spectators were witnessing the finish of a four mile free for all race when the daring Texan rider doing 92 miles an hour, took his fateful plunge. He was riding high on the bank of the track when the wheel of his heavy machine swerved and struck the upper rail. He was pitched head first 50 feet into the air. He must have been instantly killed in the collision.

His body was shapeless from broken bones when it was picked up almost at the feet of his wife, seated among men and boys in the bleachers.

Albright was thrown head first in the other direction into the enclosure of the track when the champion's wheel came sliding down the steep bank and struck him. He was picked up for dead but he lived in a unconscious state for more than two hours after removal to a hospital. He finally succumbed to hemorrhage of the lungs.

The spectators injured were mainly the men and boys who were leaning over the rail yelling encouragement to the riders when Hasha came tearing into their midst. Some of the spectators were hurled high into the air and landed in the laps of those seated behind. A scene of panic among the spectators generally followed the tragedy.

The stadium where the accident occurred is in Vailsburg, a suburb of this city, where bicycle and motorcycle racing have been a great fad this year. The season has been marked by a number of accidents, both here and at Brighton Beach, N. Y., but never in the history of local racing has such a casualty list been recorded.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS ALARMING.

Taft Urged to Intervene—Reluctant to Take Step.

Beverly, Mass.—Although President Taft will not intervne in Mexico without the fullest deliberation upon a step that would mean war, his friends declare that intervention is nearer than it has been since the first American troops were rushed to the border, 18 months ago.

It can be stated on the highest authority, however, that should the President decide that intervention is the only course open to him, he will call Congress in special session and demand of it the authority to send the American army across the border. Under no circumstances, he has told his friends, would he do an unfriendly act against Mexico without consulting Congress.

Friends of the President realize that he would give the order to invade Mexico only with the greatest reluctance. They are aware that it already has been charged by senators that the President might send the army across the line, make himself a "war President" and rely upon that to bring victory to himself and the republican party in November. Mr. Taft has said that such a statement is utterly without foundation and declared to his advisers that it would be hard to conceive of a President who would use his office to throw his country into a war which experts have predicted could end in not less than two years; that would cost millions; that would mean the sacrifice of thousands of lives and ruin for years to come the basis of this nation's friendship with the Central and South American republics.

The President authorized General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, U. S. A., to dispatch two more regiments of cavalry to the Texas border.

Robert Browning's Will.

Diligent search is being made at Florence, Italy, for the will of Robert Browning, son of the famous poet, but so far it has not been found. The fact that there apparently is no will is causing considerable gossip, as the property, of which there is a good deal, both in Asolo and Florence, will pass to his wife, who was Miss Coddington of New York and from whom he lived apart for years, owing to incompatibility of temper.

Browning's property in Florence included Cass Guidi, where he spent his childhood days. When his mother died the property passed out of the family, and was acquired by him a few years ago.

RED, ROUGH HANDS MADE SOFT AND WHITE

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, dry, fissured, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends, with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Directions: Soak the hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment, and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. These pure, sweet and gentle emollients preserve the hands, prevent redness, roughness and chapping, and impart in a single night that velvety softness and whiteness so much desired by women. For those whose occupations tend to injure the hands, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are wonderful.

Adulation Pleased Rousseau.

Rousseau, whose bicentenary celebration occasioned a riot in Paris the other day, created a sensation when he visited England in 1766. "Rousseau and his Armenian dress," wrote Lord Charlemont, "were followed by crowds when he first arrived in London and as long as this species of admiration lasted he was contented and happy. Garrick not only gave a supper in his honor, but played two characters specially to please him. Rousseau was highly gratified, but Mrs. Garrick declared that she had never spent a more unpleasant evening in her life, the philosopher being so anxious to display himself, and hanging over the front of the box so much, that she was obliged to hold him by the skirts of his coat to prevent him from falling over into the pit."

Child's Popularity Explained.

A winning lottery ticket of $100,000, in connection with the Nobles Bank was recently presented for payment at the State Bank in St. Petersburg, and it now transpires that the owner is an eight-year-old orphan, an inmate of the Orphanage at Pskoff. The lottery ticket was her sole possession. Her relatives have hitherto done nothing for the child, but when the news of her good fortune became known they were one and all eager to adopt her. The authorities have placed her in the charge of an arch-priest, a distant connection of her father.

Its Use.

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. 'Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. ABOUT MR. PERKINS

THINGS CONGRESSMAN STANLEY SAID OF COL. ROOSEVELT'S FINANCIAL AID.

WIDOW AND ORPHAN ROBBED

Plain Talk Concerning the Man Who Contributed $50,000 of Other People's Money to Aid in the Election of T. R.

People everywhere are asking why George Perkins, late of J. P. Morgan & Co., and now of the Harvester trust, is such an enthusiastic Progressive, and why Mr. Roosevelt has made him his campaign chairman. Both have explained, each is pleased with the other. Roosevelt tells us of Perkins' coming to him, but perhaps, when all is known, it will develop that he went after Perkins!

Mr. Morgan's ex-partner has been advocating this long time the creation of a court of big business at the capital city which, as we understand his proposition, will leave the government very little to do. This is similar to Roosevelt's plan to establish an autocratic stewardship of the public welfare untrammeled by courts or by congress. When great men think along the same lines they inevitably must come together.

In connection with Mr. Perkins' past it may be of interest to hear in part what Congressman Stanley had to say in the house respecting the $50,000 of other people's money contributed by Perkins to aid in Roosevelt's election:

"He gave his personal check to Mr. Bliss and was reimbursed by check of the New York Life Insurance company, payable to J. P. Morgan & Co. The proceeds of this check were traced to Mr. Perkins, and he was arrested under a warrant charging him with grand larceny. Perkins knew the consent of the policy holders was necessary to save this appropriation of their funds from larceny, and that consent was not obtained, and could not have been obtained.

"Who were these pilfered policy holders? The most pathetic and helpless figures in all this tale of tears—the young mother, wrapped in the black habiliments of woe; orphans wailing the name of father above the silent dead. He robbed the widow of her slender patrimony and snatched the last crumb from the pinched fingers of helpless childhood. In all the loathsome annals of greed and graft there is nothing so sordid and pitiless as the creatures who did it. This man escaped a prison cell by the skin of his teeth for having picked the pockets of a shroud."

This is what Mr. Stanley said of the campaign manager of the third term party, whose motto is "let the people rule!" This is Mr. Perkins.

Did Roosevelt Tell the Truth?

Questions of veracity are so much in evidence nowadays that, happening to pick up an old newspaper, the above question immediately arose:

President Roosevelt, on being informed of Mr. Taft's nomination for the presidency, said:

"I feel that the country is indeed to be congratulated upon the nomination of Mr. Taft. I have known him intimately for many years, and I have a peculiar feeling for him because throughout that time we have worked for the same object with the same purposes and ideals.

"I do not believe there could be found in all the country a man so well fitted to be president. He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely disinterested and upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the nation's needs without and within and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens.

"He would be emphatically a president of the plain people as Lincoln, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagogy, the least tendency to arouse or appeal to class hatred of any kind.

"He has a peculiar and intimate knowledge of and sympathy with the needs of all of our people—of the farmer, of the wage-worker, of the business man, of the property owner. No matter what a man's occupation or social position, no matter what his creed, his color, or the section of the country from which he comes, if he is an honest, hard-working man, who tries to do his duty toward his neighbor and toward the country, he can rest assured that he will have in Mr. Taft the most upright of representatives and the most fearless of champions. Mr. Taft stands against privilege, and he stands pre-eminently for the broad principles of American citizenship which lie at the foundation of our national well-being."

If Mr. Roosevelt told the truth then, what shall be said of some of his recent utterances?

Rabidly Anti-Roosevelt.

Pushed into a corner, Roosevelt fights back. "Liar!" "Liar!" "Liar!" he shouts. That is his answer. That is his usual answer.

But of what avail is it to denounce Penrose as base? That doesn't meet the charge that he received knowingly $100,000 from the Standard Oil company. It wasn't Penrose who made the contribution. It was Archbold. Aim straight on the witness stand testifies that he not only handed $100,000 to Treasurer Bliss but that Bliss came back later and asked for $150,000 more; that Bliss informed him that both Roosevelt and Cortelyou appreciated the first contribution and that a second one would be likewise appreciated.

There is testimony given directly by the man who made the contribution in behalf of Standard Oil and refused to give another great sum. It is no answer for Mr. Roosevelt to denounce Penrose as base and shout "liar" at Archbold.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

TAFT THREAT BAD MEDICINE

Assault on the Tariff No Longer Is an Attack on Citadel of Busines.

"To them I appeal, as to all Republicans, to join us in an earnest effort to avert the political and economical revolution and business paralysis which Republican defeat will bring about."—From Mr. Taft's speech of acceptance.

This amazing utterance is either an honest forecast of conditions or a threat. Which is it?

In order to be frightened by a curse the "consumer" must believe in the divinity or fetich in whose name the curse is launched. Our ancestors believed in Wotan and Loki; but the man who would curse in the name of these divinities today would not frighten anybody, and would get locked up in the observation ward into the bargain. Now in the good old days of Mark Hanna such talk as Mr. Taft's was good medicine. It worked. The barons of protection stood ready to put the screws upon the general business of the country in the event of Democratic victory. An assault upon the tariff was "an attack on the citadel of business."

Some things have changed since those days. People have been reading and thinking. They know, for example, that the steel interests of the United States are just selling 20,000 tons of rails to one Canadian railroad and three-fourths that amount to another. They know that the manufacturers of the United States are selling in the foreign market one thousand millions of dollars of manufactured goods a year.

They know that there is a coalition of banking interests in the United States that might produce a panic through the contraction of credits, if it pleased. They mean, ultimately, to get to that situation and reform the currency. Meanwhile, they are watching the financial horizon with one eye, and keeping the other on the witches' buckets that brew the storms.

Mr. Taft's threat is bad medicine. It is a worn-out curse. The divinities behind it are discredited. The 100 per cent. taxes on gloves and blankets are going to be replaced by reasonable duties and the tariff is going to receive like treatment all along the line. Our steel mills are going to keep on exporting rails by the ten thousand tons. Our more than $3,000,000 worth of manufactured exports are going to continue to be sent out on every working day in the year, via the seven seas. The crops are going to be harvested. These United States will continue to do business at the same old stand. They will do more of it than ever under a Democratic president, and with a congress playing the open game. In a few years, good old Mr. Taft will wonder how he could have ever believed, without assistance, the nonsense wherewith he sprinkled his acceptance speech.—St. Louis Republic.

Governor Wilson Talks to Farmers.

The chief good points of Woodrow Wilson's talk to farmers of three states were three:

First, he was interested himself. He believes profoundly in government by public opinion, in the value of the thought on public questions of the average man. We have heard speeches by presidential candidates—some of them not more than four years ago—which had about as much of the spontaneity that comes from a sense that the thing said is worth saying as the greeting extended to the "three little maids" by Poo-Bah, in "The Mikado." But Governor Wilson has the zest that comes from enjoyment of real opportunity.

Second, Governor Wilson is clear in his understanding of national problems. He knows human weaknesses and selfishnesses; this helps him to discuss the tariff intelligently. He knows how to organize and govern men; this makes him worth listening to when he discusses remedies.

Third, the governor realizes the tremendous strength of the forces behind the rising tide of Democratic success. He realizes that victory at the polls is practically assured and that the great problem is to get ready to use that victory wisely. He is thinking not of election day only, but of the four years which will follow.

All United for Wilson.

The unanimity with which all Democrats and Democratic newspapers are supporting Woodrow Wilson is remarkable. There has not been a nomination so generally accepted and so warmly ratified by any party in many years. After every national convention there have been daily reports about papers which have repudiated the candidate nominated and about prominent people who have gone over to the other party. On this occasion there are practically no Democratic papers but what are heartily supporting the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson. All Democrats are for him, and thinking, progressive Republicans are for him.

Collective Housekeeping.

An English paper tells of an experiment in collective housekeeping in what is known as Brent Garden village. The dwelling houses contain all improvements except a kitchen. Meals for everybody are cooked at a central hall, and may either be eaten there or sent home. A four-course dinner costs only 1 shilling and 6 pence. Servants are supplied, when needed, from the central hall at a cost of about ten cents an hour.

Must No Place for Consumptives.

Physicians in all of the eastern states will be asked by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis to stop sending consumptives in the last stages of tuberculosis and without sufficient funds to the southwestern part of the United States in search of health. While it is impossible to tell accurately how many consumptives there are at present living in the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, southern California, and western Texas, it is probable that no less than ten per cent of the 6,000,000 people in this country have tuberculosis themselves, have come to the west because some members of their family have died. Every year, the health authorities estimate, not less than 10,000 consumptives, hopelessly diseased, come west to die. For these cases, the climate of this section of the country can do nothing, and they are compelled to die in strange surroundings hundreds of thousands of miles from home and friends. The National Association points out further that from 50 to 60 per cent. of these advanced cases are too poor to provide the proper necessaries of life, and they either starved to death, or compelled to accept the meager charity of this part of the country af-

A FOOD CONVERT

Found the True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble keeps up the patent medicine business and helps to fill the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia — is caused by what is put into the stomach in the form of improper food, the kind that undermines the strength of the digestive organs till they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to drugs is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash diminishes his power to move the load.

Stop whipping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I was an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food." says a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts and, after a few weeks' steady use, felt greatly improved.

"I am much stronger, not nervous and can do more work without getting so tired, and am better every way.

"I eat Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls as a dessert part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Look for the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

RACER CRASHES INTO SPECTATORS

EDDIE HASHA, FAMOUS MOTOR CYCLE RIDER, IN A SMASH UP.

THIRTEEN BADLY INJURED

Daring Texan Was Doing 92 Miles When Rear Wheel Strikes Upper Rail of Track.

Newark, N. J.—Eddie Hasha of Waco, Tex., holder of several world's records for motorcycle racing, plunged over the rail of the course at the Newark motordrome into a crowd, causing the death of six persons, including himself, and 13 are badly injured.

The only two of the six dead positively identified up to a late hour, were Hasha and Johnny Albright, a Denver motorcycle who was riding third in the race. The other four dead were boys and young men among the spectators.

Five thousand spectators were witnessing the finish of a four mile free for all race when the daring Texan rider doing 92 miles an hour, took his fateful plunge. He was riding high on the bank of the track when the wheel of his heavy machine swerved and struck the upper rail. He was pitched head first 50 feet into the air. He must have been instantly killed in the collision.

His body was shapeless from broken bones when it was picked up almost at the feet of his wife, seated among men and boys in the bleachers.

Albright was thrown head first in the other direction into the enclosure of the track when the champion's wheel came sliding down the steep bank and struck him. He was picked up for dead but he lived in a unconscious state for more than two hours after removal to a hospital. He finally succumbed to hemorrhage of the lungs.

The spectators injured were mainly the men and boys who were leaning over the rail yelling encouragement to the riders when Hasha came tearing into their midst. Some of the spectators were hurled high into the air and landed in the laps of those seated behind. A scene of panic among the spectators generally followed the tragedy.

The stadium where the accident occurred is in Vailsburg, a suburb of this city, where bicycle and motorcycle racing have been a great fad this year. The season has been marked by a number of accidents, both here and at Brighton Beach, N. Y., but never in the history of local racing has such a casualty list been recorded.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS ALARMING.

Taft Urged to Intervene—Reluctant to Take Step.

Beverly, Mass.—Although President Taft will not intervne in Mexico without the fullest deliberation upon a step that would mean war, his friends declare that intervention is nearer than it has been since the first American troops were rushed to the border, 18 months ago.

It can be stated on the highest authority, however, that should the President decide that intervention is the only course open to him, he will call Congress in special session and demand of it the authority to send the American army across the border. Under no circumstances, he has told his friends, would he do an unfriendly act against Mexico without consulting Congress.

Friends of the President realize that he would give the order to invade Mexico only with the greatest reluctance. They are aware that it already has been charged by senators that the President might send the army across the line, make himself a "war President" and rely upon that to bring victory to himself and the republican party in November. Mr. Taft has said that such a statement is utterly without foundation and declared to his advisers that it would be hard to conceive of a President who would use his office to throw his country into a war which experts have predicted could end in not less than two years; that would cost millions; that would mean the sacrifice of thousands of lives and ruin for years to come the basis of this nation's friendship with the Central and South American republics.

The President authorized General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, U. S. A., to dispatch two more regiments of cavalry to the Texas border.

Robert Browning's Will.

Diligent search is being made at Florence, Italy, for the will of Robert Browning, son of the famous poet, but so far it has not been found. The fact that there apparently is no will is causing considerable gossip, as the property, of which there is a good deal, both in Asolo and Florence, will pass to his wife, who was Miss Coddington of New York and from whom he lived apart for years, owing to incompatibility of temper.

Browning's property in Florence included Cass Guidi, where he spent his childhood days. When his mother died the property passed out of the family, and was acquired by him a few years ago.

RED, ROUGH HANDS MADE SOFT AND WHITE

For red, rough, chapped and bleeding hands, dry, fissured, itching, burning palms, and painful finger-ends, with shapeless nails, a one-night Cuticura treatment works wonders. Directions: Soak the hands, on retiring, in hot water and Cuticura Soap. Dry, anoint with Cuticura Ointment, and wear soft bandages or old, loose gloves during the night. These pure, sweet and gentle emollients preserve the hands, prevent redness, roughness and chapping, and impart in a single night that velvety softness and whiteness so much desired by women. For those whose occupations tend to injure the hands, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are wonderful.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

The Likeness.

"This free pulling of teeth has some features in common with big social functions."

"What are they?"

"Charity bawls."

A great majority of summer ills are due to Malaria in suppressed form. Lassitude and headaches are but two symptoms. OXIDINE eradicates the Malaria germ and tones up the entire system.

The Probability.

"I am sure when I go to the city to see my rich cousin, she will put me under her own roof."

"You bet she will! Directly under."

Instead of liquid antiseptics, tablets and peroxide, for toilet and medicinal uses, many people prefer Paxtine, which is cheaper and better. At druggists, 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

If your appetite is not what it should be perhaps Malaria is developing. It affects the whole system. OXIDINE will clear away the germs, rid you of Malaria and generally improve your condition.

Some people boast in order to keep others from doing so.

Hicks' CAPUDINE is the best remedy—no matter what causes them—whether from the heat, sitting in draughts, feverish condition, etc. 10c., 25c. and 50c. per bottle at medicine stores.

Adulation Pleased Rousseau.

Rousseau, whose bicentenary celebration occasioned a riot in Paris the other day, created a sensation when he visited England in 1766. "Rousseau and his Armenian dress," wrote Lord Charlemont, "were followed by crowds when he first arrived in London and as long as this species of admiration lasted he was contented and happy. Garrick not only gave a supper in his honor, but played two characters specially to please him. Rousseau was highly gratified, but Mrs. Garrick declared that she had never spent a more unpleasant evening in her life, the philosopher being so anxious to display himself, and hanging over the front of the box so much, that she was obliged to hold him by the skirts of his coat to prevent him from falling over into the pit."

Child's Popularity Explained.

A winning lottery ticket of $100,000, in connection with the Nobles Bank was recently presented for payment at the State Bank in St. Petersburg, and it now transpires that the owner is an eight-year-old orphan, an inmate of the Orphanage at Pskoff. The lottery ticket was her sole possession. Her relatives have hitherto done nothing for the child, but when the news of her good fortune became known they were one and all eager to adopt her. The authorities have placed her in the charge of an arch-priest, a distant connection of her father.

Its Use.

"I put this breakwater wall there to make a show."

"I notice it cuts a dash."

Nothing keeps a man so busy as the attempt to idle away his time.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. 'Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

VERMONT ARITHMETICALLY CONSIDERED

Both the New York World and the New York Sun apply the yardstick to the Vermont vote. This vote stands, as follows:

1908.		1912.
Rep.	45,598	Rep.	26,259
Dem.	15,953	Dem.	20,350
		Prog.	15,800
Total	61,551	Total	62,409

The democrats gained votes while the combined republicans lost votes. "Assuming," says the World, "that, as in Vernont, one-tenth of the republicans will vote for Wilson, six-tenths for Taft and three-tenths for Roosevelt, we have this forecast of the result in November, making no allowance for democratic unity and enthusiasm or for a large increase in the number of votes:

Wilson	7,176,994
Taft	4,607,340
Roosevelt	2,303,670

"If we apply the test to various states, there are only three or four that Wilson will not be likely to carry. In most of them his plurarities would be phenomenal."

The New York Sun, which is supporting Mr. Taft, says that "if the voters in the country at large should divide in November as those in Vermont did this week, the result in several of the more interesting states would be as follows on the basis of the election results of 1908:

	Wilson.	Taft.	Roosevelt.
New York	742,000	500,000	295,000
New Jersey	205,000	152,000	90,000
Ohio	553,000	328,000	195,000
Indiana	370,000	200,000	120,000
Massachusetts	178,000	153,000	90,000
Pennsylvania	515,000	430,000	250,000
Illinois	507,000	362,000	215,000

There is small comfort for either wing of the republican party in the Vermont figures, and the administration organs are inclined to drop the subject altogether.

The Maine election is to be held tomorrow, and if that should confirm the Vermont result it will be all over but the shouting.

The above figures and comments, taken from the Age-Herald of last Sunday, which paper, in turn, secured them from the New York Sun, the most ardent supporter of the republican party would indicate that even the best of them—those who are in position to know, who by reason of environment can obtain the most reliable figures and which can at a moment's notice, feel the public pulse—are not so brash as to claim the remotest chance for the election of either Taft or Roosevelt.

The Vermont election of last week, always looked upon as the national barometer, was conclusive proof to the political editor of the Sun that Taft is a badly beaten man. But the strange thing about it all is the smallness of the vote accredited to Roosevelt. Let it not be forgotten that the Sun is body, soul and spirit republican; it hates anything that is even remotely related to democracy. It is one of the papers, which, while trying to be fair, is always antagonistic to democracy; it holds out hope for its republican constituents so long as hope exits, but it sees no hope for either Taft or Roosevelt, and it does not hesitate to say so. It even goes into detail and gives such figures as would convince the most skeptical.

We can scarcely agree with the Sun when it states that Pennsylvania will go for Wilson; we had almost as soon believe that Texas would go republican. Roosevelt will, perhaps, secure the electoral votes of Kansas and California, but none others—he will get these by the skin of his big teeth if he gets them at all. In the case of California it will be Johnson who will carry the state rather than Roosevelt, so after all Roosevelt has a look in but one State.

Taft will probably carry three or four western states, but he also will be almost as badly defeated as Roosevelt. On a popular vote Taft will get more than twice as many votes as will Roosevelt, but his popular votes do not place presidential candidates in office his majority over Roosevelt will avail him nothing except a personal pride in having defeated a man who was once his friend but who permitted personal greed for office to cause him to turn traitor, both to his former friends and the party which has so signally honored him.

Roosevelt will be the most humiliated man who has ever run for the presidential office. The rebuke which will be administered to him In November will be such that it will take much of the starch out of his corporosity.

Taft can retire with the knowledge that he was defeated by one of the cleverest statesmen this country has ever produced—for Wilson is a statesman as well as a great scholar. Taft's defeat will be largely attributed to Roosevelt of course, but this is a democratic year, and whether Roosevelt had run or not, Taft would have been defeated.

Let our republican friends bear in mind that the above figures are given out by a republican paper of note; that these figures are made by a man whose prejudices lean toward republicanism.

RIDERVILLE NEWS

Mrs. F. M. Reynolds, who sustained a broken leg in a runaway scrape three weeks ago, is rapidly improving and her many friends will be glad to know that she can be up again in a few days.

The dead body of Mr. Albert Burns was found Friday morning in the extreme end of the rough lumber yard of the E. E. Jackson plant, in a decomposed state. The young man had been missing since Tuesday morning. His relatives had been searching for him to no avail, when Friday morning he was found by the foreman of this department of the mill. He had been in the employ of the E. E. Jackson Lumber Co. for some time and was well connected. The funeral took place from the Methodist church, Friday evening, interment in Plantersville cemetery.

Mrs. Gregory and family of Meridian, Miss., are on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reed. She was taken seriously ill a few days after her arrival and is very sick at this time.

Mrs. J. S. Gardner of Centreville is the guest of Mrs. J. E. Mattison. Mrs. Gardner at one time lived here and it was pleasant indeed to renew old time friendships.

The High school at Plantersville opened Monday with encouraging prospects. Both teachers and pupils were much enthused over the prospects of the coming term.

The continued dry weather is damaging the corn and cotton crop considerably in this part of the country.

The music class of Mrs. J. E. Mattison enjoyed a picnic on the banks of Bogus creek at the railroad bridge Saturday. The beautiful scenery around, the warble of the sweet voiced singers as they flit from tree to tree, lent enchantment and new life to all. Various games were indulged in until the noon hour; a delicious spread was dispensed. Bathing and catching fish were heartily enjoyed by the younger set. Miss Willie Harris, with her kodak, added very much to the pleasure of the day by making different groups of the crowd. The call "Homeward bound" came only too soon and every one dispersed declaring a perfect day.

The School Improvement Association is a body of enthusiastic workers. Since the election of new officers for the ensuing vear, they have gone regularly to work and are considering the proposition of erecting a new school building.

Miss Sadie Alk of Baltimore arrived today and will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. E. Baer through September.

Mrs. J. W. Peeples left yesterday on an extended visit to her mother, Mrs. Godwin, at Cordova.

Mrs. Ila Mahone with her children, were called here by the illness of her sister, Mrs. Gregory. They will remain until she is better.

A CARD OF THANKS

Kindly permit me through your columns to extend my heart felt thanks to our many friends for their untiring attention and devotion to us during the illness and death of my wife. I wish also to thank the attending physician who gave unstintingly of his time and skill in caring for our beloved dead.

Respectfully,
Effie Traywick.

COX'S BODY DISINTERRED

MARTIN BOUND OVER; PRISONER REFUSED BAIL BY TRIAL JUDGE

Last week we gave as much as possible of the testimony in the Martin case charged with the killing of Deputy C. W. Cox.

As the case is of considerable interest to our readers, we continue the testimony this week,tho' it may not be as full as was given on the trial; nevertheless it contains all of the salient points in the case.

Mr. Hinkle's cross examination was first; he said:

On cross by state: I saw no pistol on the ground; there was nothing to prevent my seeing it. The cartridges came out of Cox's trousers pockets as we unbuttoned them to look for wounds; his trousers fit reasonably tight. Mr. Davis came up to where Dr. Hopkins and I were. Martin was there and started to say something and I told him to shut his mouth, I do not know what he intended to say.

Mr. Robert Popwell was the next witness called for the defense; he testified as follows:

I live in Clanton; knew Cox in his lifetime; last Sunday four weeks ago, in Headley's store, I heard Cox say that Martin was a fool and a coward and that he had not prepared for him all the time, and if Martin got him first it was all right. (Here a motion by the state was made to exclude the testimony on the ground that it was not a threat, and no overt act was ever shown on the part of the deceased to make it competent; arguments and citations followed, and the motion to exclude was finally over-ruled.)

The next witness was Mr. W. Candler who testified substantially: I knew C. W. Cox in his lifetime. I know Ed Martin; he owns a little farm next to mine. It belongs to Mrs. Cox; Martin rented it. I had several conversations with Cox about Martin. There was ill feeling between the two.

On one occasion I heard Cox say "G—D—him if I can't get him any other way I can shoot him and it will ways go fixed for such scoundrels as he is." (Here controversy arose as to the cartridges found.) Cox also said, according to witnesses, "Martin has a shot gun and I have a short gun, if he gets me first it's all right."

Ed Martin, the defendant, testified: I killed Mr. Cox; it was on August 30th about noon. I was plowing and said to my wife "get dinner early as I want to go over to my brother's. I ate dinner, turned back my plate and went into my bed room; I thought of the pig not having been fed about dinner time and went out in the garden, pulled two or three ears of corn for the pig; I had put my gun down at the garden gate; after feeding the pig I got my gun again and as I raised my eyes and saw Cox and his team. Cox said don't get out here with that gun; I replied I am doing you no harm, you mind your business and I'll go about mine. He (Cox) then said he was going to put my stuff in this crib and I replied "you ought not to do that as you put feed in there once and accused me of stealing it." Cox stood with his hands in his hip pockets and said "G—D—you, I'll kill you." As he moved his hands around to the front of his body I saw his pistol presented, and went back into the house. I was within ten or twelve feet of him; then is when he said for me not to come out with the gun. I stopped and put the barrel of the gun on my foot; the only way I could have gotten off my premises was the way I went. Cox and I had had controversies before; we had had trouble. He came to my field when I was working; he made threats against me at that time, he pulled a gun from his hip pocket then. My little boy came up about that time and saw the gun. This was about six weeks before the killing. My little boy when he saw the pistol ran to the house and told my wife; when Cox heard my wife calling, or crying, he said "let's walk around, I'll not bother you while your women folks are around, but damn you, I'll get you later." We had controversies for six or eight weeks previous to this. I lived on the farm; we had had a law suit. I had asked Cox not to come on my place—had, in fact, warned him not to come. After the shot was fired I went back into the house (here controversies arose as to what he next did; whether it was admissible or not and defendant's attorneys given time to look up law points.)

On cross examination Martin said: Mr. Cox and I were not on good terms at time of killing. We farmed on halves. He made no reservation of half of the barn when I rented the place. There was no arrangements of that kind between us. It was agreeable to me that he put feed there. He had a lot of fodder on the wagon at the time he was killed; he kept his wagon under the shed there. Cox kept his horse there tho' there was no special agreement that it should be done. No one was present when we made the rental contract. He had his horse in and out there up to the time he came to the field and raised the fuss. He had no feed in the barn at the time of the killing; there was no corn or feed in the barn except that which I had there. In the field he brought his pistol from his hip pocket and brought it around as if he was going to cock it. It was a dark pistol. My wife, my two children, Payton and I were at the table on the day of the killing. Wife got up first, I then pushed my plate back, went into my bed room, picked up my gun and hat, went on back side of the house, set my gun down at garden gate, pulled two or three ears of corn, gave them to the pig, then picked up my gun again. I have been to see my brother without taking my gun. I saw Cox get his wagon that morning. I knew he kept the wagon there but did not know he was going to bring it back. When I saw Cox he was getting off the wagon; I was then near my back steps. Cox said "Don't come out here with that gun." I said "I'm not bothering you, take your stuff and go about your business and I'll go about mine." Then he said I'm going to put my fodder in this crib—I said you ought not to want to do that as you put it in there once and accused me of stealing it." Then he said "G—D—you, I'll kill you," We were talking in a moderate tone; I was about six or seven steps from lot gate. he was right at the gate. He was standing with his hands on his hips when this conversation ensued. I still had my gun on my foot but put my hand on the hammer.

I then saw his pistol and as it came over I fired. I fired without aiming at any particular spot; when the gun fired I walked on to the house. Cox was laying on the ground; I never looked back till I got on the porch. He fell where he was standing when I shot. The first I saw of the pistol was when he pulled it. It was not 10 or 15 feet from Cox, it was in 2 or 3 feet of him. When I called attention of Davis to the pistol Dr. Hopkins and Hinkle were there. The pistol was 10 or 15 feet from where Cox was after he was moved. I don't know that any one saw it till I called attention to it. He never shot; he did tell me to stop, The pistol was coming over when I shot; I never told him to stop; I don't know whether or not I shot his finger; I did not shoot him while he had his hands up begging me not to shoot. Did not know whether I hit him or not; I shot and turned and walked to the house without looking back. The reason I walked away without looking back was because I had a single barreled gun and had fired and didn't know when he would fire. I did not know whether I had hit him or not. Soon after the shooting I did not tell Sheriff Jones that I had told Cox in the presence of Smitherman not to put fodder in the crib. I said nothing of the kind to Jones nor Smitherman. I don't know where the shell is that was in my gun. I had 4 or 5 more shells in my pocket. (Here dispute arose as to whether Martin should be asked whether or not he had other cartriges than that in the gun. Also an argument as to whether the pistol had ever been connected with Cox.) I had several cartriges for my gun, continued Martin. I did not have any pistol cartridges at home. I do not own any pistol. There's a pistol at my house; it belongs to Payton. I had no pistol or crartridges. I did not say to Smitherman on August 30 that when Cox came up and said he was going to put his fodder in the crib I told him not to do it. Three weeks before the shooting I bought six 32 cartridges from Mr. Middleton. Payton and I shot them up at a chicken. We wanted the chicken for dinner; we shot at it six times missinig it each shot then we run it down.

Redirect: I did not shoot Cox with a pistol; Cox, up to the time he had accused me of stealing his feed, had been storing his feed in the barn by my permission. I am

MRS. WHITE ENTERTAINS

One of the loveliest parties of the season was that at which Mrs. M. L. White entertained on Tuesday afternoon in compliment to her attractive guests Misses Wilkes, of Andalusia. The parlor, hall and dining room, which were thrown into one, was artistically decorated with ferns and cut flowers. Mrs. White wore white lingerie over blue messaline and the Misses Wilks were handsomely gowned in light blue silk. After an interesting contest," A Penny for your Thoughts" in which the prize fell to Mrs. J. E. Gowan, a delicious ice course was served.

Those who enjoyed Mrs. White's hospitality were Misses Winnie and Willie Reynolds, Myrtle and Maude Mullins, Estella and L. E. Morgan, Elna Sartor, Ruby Downs, Emmette Matthews, Bessie Thomas, Bessie VanDerveer and Mrs. J. E. Gowan.

RIDERVILLE RIPPLES

Miss Cora Allison, the efficient stenographer for the E. E. Jackson Lumber Co., left for her home in Piedmont Wednesday for a two weeks vacation. She will visit Atlanta and other points before returning to her duties again.

The friends of Miss Nelia Johnson were indeed glad to have her pay them a visit this week. Miss Johnson was principal of the school here several years and is very much loved. She has been elected as one of the teachers in the high school at Cuba and was en route there to take up her duties.

Mr. C. M. Norris has resigned his position here as store manager and will remove with his family to Dunlap, Tenn., where he has accepted a position. We regret exceedingly to have this excellent family leave, and congratulate the people of Dunlap and wish them success in their new home.

Miss Mae Linoore, a pleasing and attractive young lady from Mobile, is filling the place of stenographer in Miss Allison's place.

Mrs. J. H. Thompson and children of Centreville visited the family of Mr. J. F. Mattison this week.

Mr. Hugh Morrow and Miss Mason, the elected teachers for the school here, attended the Institute in Selma last week.

School opened Monday with the largest enrollment for some time. The chapel will be used for schoolroom until other arrangements can be made. It is to be hoped the citizens of School Improvement Association will bestir themselves and erect a first-class school building here.

MEETING OF REPUBLICANS

The Taft republicans of the county are scheduled to meet next Saturday at Maplesville, for the ostensible purpose of putting a ticket in the local field. Just how many will attend the convention, of course, cannot be told, but if all the disgruntled republicans who regret the action taken by two hundred "use to-be" republicans in setting aside the nominations made by one thousand men in a primary election, attend the convention, Maplesville will have to build a coliseum to accommodate the crowd.

We have no idea what the republicans are going to do in the matter of nominations, but we do know that if they enter the field with anything like a representative ticket they will make those Bull Moose fellows who repudiated the republican nominations feel like the hole in a doughnut when the November election comes. In other words, there's as many of one as there is of "tother" and it will be a battle royal between the two factions, neither having hope of electionn or reward.

WHO CAN BEAT THIS?

PERHAPS THE SMALLEST POSTAL ORDER EVER ISSUED.

Last Monday while others were busy attending the Town election Postmaster Dudley and his assistant, Mr. J. E. Robinson, were busy issuing post office orders and selling stamps, together with a multiplicity of other things. The Press man could not get the official to talk about Post Office business, but he happened to be standing in the office when a gentleman walked to the "Register Window" and requested a post office order for ONE CENT, payable to certain parties in New York—the name was not caught by the Press man. When asked if he had not made a mistake he replied that he had not, that he wanted a post office order for ONE CENT and that he was ready to pay three cents for the order. This he did and walked out of the post office in great glee.

Why he did not enclose a one cent stamp or copper in his letter, which would have answered all purposes we presume, is not known; it would, at least, have saved him the extra three cents and even if it had been lost he would not have been "out" a great fortune.

PLANTERSVILLE

Cotton picking is the order of the day and the farmers have been very busy trying to keep up with it.

Fred P. Batton, D. D. S., who has been very low with typhoid fever, we are glad to report, is up again and doing nicely.

Miss Lonnette King spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. Bessie Harris.

Public school opened at Plantersville Monday with 64 enrolled; others are yet to come. Have a member in the faculty, Miss Green, who took Miss Adair's place.

Mrs. Jack Harris, who fell from a buggy some time ago and broke her leg, is able to walk on crutches.

Prof. John A. Hunter and sister, Miss Calista, were pleasant visitors in our midst a few days before he left to take up his school work at Thorsby.

Rev. P. G. Maness filled his last appointment at Fellowship Sunday after serving the church six years.

The congregation hated to give him up, but he thought best to resign and take up work nearer home.

Mr. C. C. Gay visited his parents at Moro Sunday.

Messrs. Johnson and Gamble for the past month have been putting some fine poplar logs on the pond to be shipped.

For singles—trap or field—just toss in a shell, press the button and—"PULL." The side bolt makes it easy. You don't have to tug at the barrel or watch an on-and-off device. The action stays open after each single shot is fired.—It always stays open when the magazine is empty. Five shots—three to get the cripples—each under absolute control of the trigger finger. The recoil reloads for you—kicks another shell in; takes the strain off the gun—the discomfort out of the kick—all without diminishing the drive behind the shot.

Simple take-down—a few turns of the readily handled magazine screw-cap makes cleaning, carrying and interchange of barrels quick and easy.

Send for a motion picture booklet telling how the kick is used—how a friction device found only on the Remington-UMC Autoloading Shotgun takes the punishment out of heavy loads.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines.

CHAPTER III (Continued).

"Those are lucky dogs off duty today." His eye caught mine. "Why don't you go after them, Fortesque? There will be plenty of fun afoot yonder where they land."

"Where is that?"

"At the old fort; follow the crowd, and you'll not go astray. Have you a ticket?"

"Captain Andre honored me with one this morning."

"Then you are good for the first row. Don't miss it, man," with enthusiasm. "'Twill be such a sight as has not been witnessed since the Field of the Cloth of Gold."

"A passage at arms, you mean?"

"Ay! as gorgeous as those of the old-time knights; a fair conceit as I read the program. I'd be there now but for the damned orders that hold me here. If you ride hard you can make the spot before they come ashore."

There was no reason I should not go, and much in the glittering prospect appealed to me. Five minutes later I was trotting out of the Yager camp, pressing passage through the crowds, already headed southward, the dragoon riding silently at my heels. Mounted men that day were few, and, doubtless believing we were connected with the pageant, the jam sullenly parted, and gave us opening, so we reached the site of the old fort as the barges began discharging their occupants. A glance about, however, convinced me as to where the lists were to be run, and I headed my horse in that direction and gained a point of vantage before the throng poured in.

I was somewhat to the right of the big stand, the restive heels of my horse keeping the crowd away, and with a clear view as far as the river bank. It was, maybe, 400 yards down a gentle slope to the water's edge, where the line was forming. This passageway was lined with onlookers, held back by numerous guards, while to my left extended a square lawn, perhaps 150 yards each way, surrounded by a double rank of grenadiers, the bayonets gleaming on their guns. This open space was equipped with everything needed for the coming tourney, and on three sides were tiers of raised seats. I had barely observed all this when the guns of the Roebuck, echoed by those of the Vigilant, began to boom a salute, and the head of the column of marchers began slowly mounting the slope. The costumes worn were as varied as those of a masquerade, representing all the changes since the days of chivalry. The whole line glowed with color, and gleamed with steel.

Like some great serpent, glittering in the sun, this procession passed under the triumphal arches and disappeared as its members took prescribed positions on the stands, or in the pavilions bordering the field of contest. As thus arranged the grouping of colors was most brilliant. In the front of each pavilion were seven young ladies, attired picturesquely in Turkish costume, wearing in their turbans those favors with which they meant to reward the knights contending in their honor. Behind these, and occupying all the upper seats, were the maidens representing the two divisions of the day's sports—ladies of the Blended Rose and ladies of the Burning Mountain. From the crowd surging around I heard name after name mentioned, as famous Philadelphia belles were pointed out, not a few familiar to me. Even as I gazed upon that galaxy of beauty, half angry that Americans should take part in such a spectacle of British triumph, the field was cleared for the lists, and a sound of trumpets came to us from a distance.

Out into the opening rode the contending knights, attended by esquires on foot, dressed in ancient habits of white and red silk, and mounted on gray horses. From the other direction appeared their opponents, in black and orange, riding black steeds, while to the center advanced the herald loudly proclaiming the challenge. I knew not who they all were, but they made a gallant show, and I overheard many a name spoken of soldiers met in battle—Lord Cathcart, Captain Andre, Major Tarleton, Captain Scott, Ayt, and they fought well that day, those White and Black knights on the mimic field. At last the two chiefs—Lord Cathcart for the Whites, and Captain Watson of the Guards, for the Blacks—were alone contending furiously, when the marshal of the field rushed in between, and struck up their weapons, declaring the contest done, the honor of each side proven. As the company broke up, flowing forward to the great house beyond, the vast crowd of onlookers burst through the guard lines, and, like a mighty torrent, swept over the field. It was a wild, jubilant, yelling mass, so dense as to be irresistible, even those of us on horseback being pressed forward, helpless chips on the stream.

I endeavored to press back, but my restive animal, startled by the dig of the spur, the yells, the waving of arms, refused to face the tumult, and whirled madly about. For a moment I all but lost control, yet even as he plunged rearing into the air, I saw before me the appealing face of a woman. How she chanced to be there alone, in the path of that mob, I know not; where her escort had disappeared, and how she had become separated from her party, has never been made clear. But this I saw, even as I struggled with the hard-mouthed brute under me—a slender, girlish figure attired as a lady of the Blended Rose, a white, frightened face, arms outstretched, and dark blue eyes beseeching help. Already the front of the mob was upon her, unable to swerve aside because of the thousands pushing behind. In another moment she would be underfoot, or hurled into the air. Reckless of all else, I dug in my spurs, yelling to the Light Dragoon beside me, even as my horse leaped. I scarcely know what happened, or how it was accomplished—only I had the reins gripped in my teeth, both my hands free. That instant I caught her; the next she was on my arm, swung safely to the saddle, held to me with a grip of steel, the animal dashing forward beneath his double burden into the open field. Then the dragoon, riding madly, gripped the bit, and the affair was over, although we must have galloped a hundred yards before the trembling horse was brought to a stand. Leaving him to the control of the soldier, I sprang to the ground, bearing the lady with me. We were behind one of the pavilions, facing the house, and she reeled as her feet touched the earth, so that I held her from falling. Then her lashes lifted, and the dark blue eyes looked into my face.

"You must pardon my roughness," I apologized, "but there was no time for ceremony."

She smiled, a flood of color coming back into the clear cheeks, as she drew slightly away.

"I appreciate that, sir," frankly, shaking out her ruffled skirts, "and you have made knighthood real."

"Then," I ventured, "may I hope to receive the reward, fair lady?"

She laughed, a little tremor of nervousness in the sound, but her eyes full of challenge.

"And what is that?"

"Your name; the hope of better acquaintance."

Her eyes swept my uniform questioningly.

"You are not of the garrison?"

"No; a courier just arrived from New York."

"Yet an officer; surely then you will be present tonight?"

"The privilege is mine; if sufficiently tempted I may attend."

"Tempted! How, sir?"

"By your pledging me a dance."

She laughed again, one hand grasping the long silken skirt.

"You ask much—my name, a better acquaintance, a dance—all this for merely saving me from a mob. You are not a modest knight, I fear. Suppose I refuse?"

"Then am I soldier enough to come unasked, and win my welcome."

"I thought as much," the long lashes opening up to me the depths of the blue eyes. "I promise nothing then, nor forbid. But there is Captain Grant seeking me. If I do not speak of gratitude, it is nevertheless in my heart, sir," she swept me a curtsey, to which I bowed hat in hand, "and now au revoir."

I stood as she left me, staring while she crossed the lawn and joined a dark-faced officer of Rangers. Once she glanced back over her shoulder, and then disappeared in the crowd of revelers.

I had not intended to remain in Philadelphia through that night. Already I had secured the information sought, and duty urged me to the safest and quickest method of escape. It seemed to me this night, given up to revelry, afforded the best possible opportunity for my safely passing the British guard lines. Tomorrow discipline would be resumed, the soldiers would return to their posts and the citizens of the city would again appear on the streets. This would greatly intensify my danger, for, at any moment, I might encounter some one who knew me, who might denounce me to the authorities.

That this was the exact truth of the situation could not be denied, yet, now, every reckless impulse of my disposition urged me to remain; the invitation of those laughing blue eyes, the challenge I read in the lady's fair face, the unsolved mystery of her identity, all combined in a temptation I found it impossible to resist. For a dance with her, a possible understanding, I was willing to venture life itself.

It must have been nearly nine o'clock when, in company with a young cornet, I rode up to the house given up to festivities, and, turning over our horses to the care of cavalry grooms, climbed the wide steps to the door leading into the hall.

All was a riot of color, rich, bewildering, with smiling faces, and laughing lips everywhere. In such a spot, amid such surroundings, war seemed a dream, a far-off delirium.

My companion disappeared, and, to escape the pressure of those surging back and forth through the wide doorway, I found passage close to the wall, and half circled the room, finally discovering a halting place in the recesses of a window, where, partially concealed myself by flowing curtains, I could gaze out over the brilliant assemblage. Half ashamed of the plainness of my own attire, and feeling a stranger and an alien, I was yet consciously seeking the one face which had lured me there.

Enough conversation reached me to disclose a promised display of fireworks on the lawn, and almost immediately a magnificent bouquet of rockets shot up into the black sky, illuminating everything with a glare of fire. This was followed by the lighting up of the triumphal arch, and the bursting of balloons high overhead. Attracted by the spectacle, I was staring out at the dazzling scene, when a voice spoke at my shoulder.

"'Tis a relief to see even one soldier present ready for duty."

I turned to look into a pair of steady blue eyes, with a bit of mocking laughter in their depths, the face revealed clearly in the glare of the rockets.

"Necessity only," I managed to reply. "I can be as gorgeous as these others had I brought a bag with me."

"No doubt; every British regiment tries to outdo the others in ribbons and gold lace. Really they become tiresome with such foppery in war times. See how they play tonight, like children, the city practically unguarded from attack," she waved an ungloved hand toward the dark without. "I venture there are men out yonder, sir, who are not dancing and laughing away these hours."

My cheeks burned.

"You mean Washington's troops?"

"Aye! I saw them here in Philadelphia before Sir William came," her voice lowered, yet earnest, "and they are not playing at war; grim, silent, sober-faced men, dressed in odds and ends, not pretty to look at; some tattered and hungry, but they fight hard. Mr. Conway was telling us yesterday of how they suffered all winter long, while we danced and feasted here, Washington himself sleeping with the snow drifting over him. You do not know the Americans, for you are not long across the water, but they are not the kind to be conquered by such child's play as this."

"You are an American, then?"

"By birth, yes," unhesitatingly. "We are of those loyal to the king, but—I admire men."

It was with an effort I restrained my words, eager to proclaim my service, yet comprehending instantly that I dare not even trust this plain-spoken girl with the truth. She respected the men, sympathized with the sacrifices of Washington's little army, contrasted all they endured with the profligacy of the English and Hessian troops, and yet remained loyal to the king's cause. Even as I hesitated she spoke again.

"What is your regiment?"

"The Forty-second Foot."

"You have not yet been in action in America?"

"No, but I have just crossed the Jerseys with dispatches."

She shook her head, her cheeks glowing.

"My home was there when the war began," she explained simply. "Now it is hate, pillage and plunder everywhere. We fled to Philadelphia for our lives, and have almost forgotten we ever had a home. We loyalists are paying a price almost equal to those men with Washington. 'Tis this memory which makes me so bitter toward those who play amid the ruins."

"Yet you have seemed to enter into the gay spirit of the occasion," and my eyes swept over her costume.

"Oh, I am girl enough to enjoy the glitter, even while the woman in me condemns it all. You are a soldier—a fighting soldier, I hope—and still you are here also seeking pleasure."

"True; I yielded to temptation, but for which I should never have come."

"What?"

"The dare in your eyes this afternoon," I said boldly. "But for what I read there I should be out yonder riding through the night."

She laughed, yet not wholly at ease, the long lashes drooping over her eyes.

"Always the woman; what would you do without my sex to bear your mistakes?"

"But was this a mistake? Did I read altogether wrong?"

"Don't expect a confession from me, sir," demurely. "I have no memory of any promise."

"No, the barest suggestion was all your lips gave; it was the eyes that challenged."

"You must have dreamed; perhaps you recall the suggestion?"

"I took it to mean that you would not be altogether averse to meeting me again through the kindness of some mutual friend."

"No doubt you have found such a friend?"

"I have scarcely seen a face I know tonight," I pleaded. "I cannot even guess from what place of mystery you appeared so suddenly. So now I throw myself upon your mercy."

"I wonder is it quite safe!" hesitatingly. "But, perhaps, the risk is equally great on your part. Ah! the lights go on again."

"And the band plays a Hungarian waltz; how better could we cement friendship than to that measure?"

"You think so? I am not so sure, and there are many names already on my card—"

"Do not look," I interrupted swiftly, "for I claim first choice since this afternoon."

"You do?" and her eyes laughed into mine provokingly. "And I had forgotten it all; did I indeed promise you?"

"Only with your eyes."

"Oh, my eyes! always my eyes! Well, for once, at least, I will redeem even that visionary pledge," and her glance swept the room hastily. "But I advise that you accept my surrender quickly, sir—I am not sure but this was Captain Grant's dance, and he is coming now."

CHAPTER IV.

The Beginning of Trouble.

Her hand was in mine, my arm already around her waist, when the officer bowed before us. He had been but a dim figure in the afternoon, but now I saw him for a tall, slender man, somewhat swarthy of face, with black hair and moustache, and a keen eye, attired in the green and white of the Queen's Rangers. He smiled, but with a sarcastic curl to the upper lip not altogether pleasant.

"Your pardon, Mistress Claire," he said boldly, sweeping me with a supercilious glance, "but am I mistaken in believing this waltz was pledged to me?"

"By mistake, captain," her lips smiling, her eyes steady. "It seems I overlooked a promise made during the afternoon."

"Oh, indeed," he turned toward me, staring insolently. "The hero of the rescue, I presume."

I felt the restraining pressure of her hand upon my sleeve, and her voice replied calmly, before I succeeded in finding words.

"This is the gentleman who protected me from the mob, if that is what you mean. Permit me to present Captain Grant of the Queen's Rangers, Lieutenant—pardon my having already forgotten your name."

"Fortesque," I stammered, intensely hating the necessary deception.

"Ah, yes—Lieutenant Fortesque of the Forty-second British Foot."

We bowed coldly, neither extending a hand, the captain twisting his mustache as he continued staring at me.

"Fortesque," he repeated slowly. "Fortesque; not of this garrison, I believe."

"No, from New York," coolly. "I regret having interfered with your program."

"Don't mention it; there are other ladies present, and, no doubt, your gallant act was worthy the reward; a pleasant evening, sir," and he withdrew aside, stiffly military. Eager to lose as little as possible of the measure, I swung my partner forward, catching a glimpse again of the man's face as we circled.

"Pleasant disposition," I ventured, without meaning to be uncivil.

"Oh, very," and her eyes met mine frankly. "But you must not quarrel with him; that is his one specialty, you know."

"Is the warning on your account, or my own?"

"Both, perhaps. Captain Grant's family and mine are neighbors—or were before war intervened—and between our fathers exists a life-long friendship. I could never consent to be the cause of his quarreling with anyone, and I have reason to know how quick tempered he is."

"I have little use for any man who swaggers about seeking trouble," I returned, as she hesitated. "It has been my experience that there is usually cowardice back of such a disposition."

"Not in this case," earnestly. "Captain Grant's courage has been sufficiently tested already. I warn you not to presume on your theory so far as he is concerned. I advise the safer course."

"What is that?"

Her eyes met mine, smiling slightly, and yet grave enough in their depths.

"To let this one dance prove sufficient reward for your act of rescue."

"You request this?"

"Oh, you must not place the entire burden of decision on me, sir. I can only suggest."

"Has Captain Grant any authority to dictate who shall be your partner?"

Her lashes lifted, and then fell before my gaze.

"He at least assumes the power, and generally with fair success. I must ask to be excused from discussing this matter further now, but—but," her voice trembled to a whisper, "I—I am sure your safety depends upon your leaving me."

Astonished by these words, suddenly wondering if she suspected me, scarcely comprehending what she meant, I stared into her face, as we circled the room. Grant stood stiffly against the wall where we left him, his eyes fastened moodily on the crowd; I realized his presence, yet my whole thought was concentrated on the girl, the strands of her hair brushing my lips, her steps lightly following the music, her eye downcast. Into the cheeks there came a flush of pink, and she glanced up to read the surprise in my face.

"Do I need to say more?"

"Yes, you must," I insisted, "you can never believe I would leave you because of personal fear."

"I did not know—at first. Now I realize it will require a higher motive to influence you; not love of life, but love of country."

I felt the closer clasp of her fingers on my guiding hand, and knew I took a deep breath of surprise.

"Lean your head just a little closer," she whispered. "I—I know you, Major Lawrence, and—and I wish you well."

British Metropolis Leads in Mud.

According to L. Meerson Clancey of St. Louis, who is now in London, there is more mud in the British metropolis than in any other of the big cities he has been in, and his record includes Paris, Berlin, Vienna, New York, Washington, Baltimore, St. Louis and Milwaukee.

American Tools Preferred.

A favorite sport in New Zealand, as also in Australia and Tasmania, is competition in wood chopping and sawing; and in these contests, which attract a great deal of interest, the champion-ships are always won through the use of American tools. In fact, the expert woodsman working for a prize would never think of using any other kind of tools.

Compensation.

A fairly prominent local pugilist was injured several months ago in an automobile accident and had three ribs broken. Fully recovered, he was discussing the incident recently with friends.

"I got $100 out of the auto owner," he said. "Had to give the lawyer half and it cost $56 for doctor's bills, but I made them pay $100 for the thing, anyhow."

Sang for Sultan.

Mulai Hafid, the ex-Sultan of Morocco, while staying at Vichy, in France, made an excursion to Les Ardoisieres, says the "Matin," where Napoleon III. used often to go for rest. Three young girls, sisters, timidly approached the Sultan and asked him to sign postcards. Mulai Hafid consented on condition that they would each sing a song to him. Two of the girls at once complied, and the delighted Mulai Hafid wrote on their cards words which, translated, mean: "Like Napoleon III., I have visited Les Ardoisieres, where I have enjoyed, together with the calm and freshness of nature, the grace and charm of the voices of Mlles. Pauline and Clotilde." The third girl did not know how to sing, but one of her sisters having sung for her the Sultan added the name of Gabrielle.

Doctor Recommends Postum from Personal Test.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it, too, contains the drug caffeine.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients because he was benefited by it. He says:

"I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over 15 years, and a part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to." MINOR HAPPENINGS IN ALABAMA CITIES, TOWNS AND VILLAGES.

MORE ABOUT THE WEEVIL

Plant Early, Fertilize Early and Let Top Crop Go is Advice of Demonstration Agents.

Montgomery. — Fighting the boll weevil on a 42,000 acre plantation in Mississippi is what State Agent B. L. Moss and District Agent Jesse M. Jones, of the farm demonstration work force, have just been. Mr. Jones returned to Montgomery after a tour lasting two weeks in Mississippi. Mr. Moss returned to Montgomery September 19. They inspected farms in the vicinity of Greneda, Jackson, Brookhaven and Hattiesburg, Mississippi.

The 42,000 acre plantation lies between the towns of Raymond and Bolton in Hinds County. The fight is being waged successfully. The owners of the plantation told Mr. Jones they do not know how many mules they have. Sixty-seven mules in one field is on one of the 1,00 acre division of the plantation.

The plan being followed in the fight against the weevil is the regulation plan prescribed by the experts who developed it under the supervision of the late Dr. S. A. Knapp plant an early variety, plant is arly, fertilize it early and generously and fertilize it while it is growing. Select cotton that develops many bolls on the lower branches, pick off the punctured bolls and squares as soon as they are found, scrape the soil between the rows with a drag chain and burn the refuse; burn the stalks as soon as the main crops is harvested; forget the will-o-the-wisp top crop.

In this method the owners are getting about half a bale or better from each acre.

Mobile.—The damage from the equinoctial storm will reach approximately $10,000 in this city, although the water in the river and bay did not come over the city wharves except in the lower places. The principal damage is due to the unroofing of buildings and the damage by rain where windows were blown out. The steamboat National, engaged in river trade, was sunk and the United States government dredge, Barnard, that had been in service raising the Maine in Havana harbor, was dragged a quarter of a mile before her anchors held.

Gadsden.—After being out for more than eight hours here, the jury trying Claude Chaney, charged with the murder of Sam Snider, at Alabama City two years ago, brought in a verdict declaring Chaney guilty of murder in the second degree and fixing his punishment at 16 years in the penitentiary. This is Chaney's fifth trial. Another appeal will probably be taken.

Anniston.—That Anniston may be the terminus of a new railroad to be built from Columbus, Ga., in a northerly direction is considered more than probable. The road is the Columbus, Chattahochee Valley and Gulf railway. Three or four routes are being considered, but it is thought that Anniston will more than likely be chosen.

Huntsville.—Ex-Governor Glenn of of North Carolina will start a temperance campaign of Alabama on September 20, when he will deliver a lecture in the First Methodist church of Huntsville. The ex-governor will fill several appointments in Alabama during the succeeding weeks.

Florence.—Wiley Robinson of Atlas beat, this county, was placed in jail under indictment charging him with the murder of his father. The indictment was returned by the grand jury now in session and which returned 37 true bills. The case will be tried the week beginning September 23.

Gadsden.—Col. William Youngblood of the United States department of agriculture, while in Gadsden, stated that an effort is being made to have the federal cattle tick quarantine line moved south from the Tennessee state line to the Tennessee river.

Anniston.—Seventy-two indictments were returned by the Calhoun county grand jury in a report made to Judge Coleman of the city court. The report shows that 420 witnesses have been examined by that body since they went into session.

Eufaula.—The local city election to confirm the nominations of the Democratic primary held in the spring, passed off quietly. The officers elected are Mayor, President of the City Council and eight Aldermen. The present city administration has three more weeks of life which will include six many Council meetings. At the meeting to be held the first Monday in October, the new officers will be sworn in by Mayor C. S. McDowell, jr., and the present administration will close its books.

IRON MAY GO TO $14 TON

Probable That It Will Go Even Higher Than That By First of Next Month.

Birmingham.—"I look for pig iron to go to $14, probably $14.50 or higher, before October. The market is the strongest in years and has every 'ear-mark' of continued strength."

Such was the opinion of a high official of one of he largest iron producers in the Birmingham district.

Numbers of large orders have been placed among local producers during the past few weeks. In fact, ever since the jump from $11.50 to the present quotation, $13.50, began, there has been not only a place for every ton of iron produced, but furnaces have been taxed to meet demand for future deliveries.

Several large foreign sales have been made also, among these a number of shipments to Geona, Italy.

Huntsville.—The committee on education of the chamber of commerce has been instructed by that organization to make arrangements for the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of Green academy, which was established in this city in November, 1812. Green academy was the first educational institution to be established in north Alabama and it was the second institution in territory which seven years later became a state.

Montgomery.—A campaign of education in Alabama to bring farmers to a realization of what he thinks is the injustice of the 6 per cent tare charged on American cotton is the plan of Commissioner Reuben F. Kolb, of the department of agriculture. Captain Kolb desires Alabama to follow the lead of Georgia to send delegates to a meeting of agricultural commissioners of the United States, soon to be held in Raleigh, N. C., with a petition to bring about an elimination or standardization of the tare in international cotton traffic. Because of the charge, the commissioner says, $200,000 annually are lost to Alabama farmers.

Huntsville.—Petitions have been in circulation in several precincts of Madison county during the last few days requesting the county commissioners to call elections for the purpose of allowing the voters to vote on a stock law. The commissioners have called a special meeting for September 25 when all of these petitions will be inspected and if they contain the names of 25 per cent of the qualified voters in each precinct, the elections will be called.

Maplesville.—The Southern Railway company announced that contract had been let for the construction of a combination depot, cotton platform and track changes here, the work to start at once. On account of proper location being unavailable, the original plan of building a joint depot with the Mobile and Ohio railroad had to be abandoned. Plans for the new depot have been approved by the Alabama commission.

Marion.—Good roads building in Perry county almost reached the climax when all bids submitted were either withdrawn or thrown out at the commissioners' meeting and the county will proceed to build two miles of experimental roads under the direction of the county highway engineer.

Decatur.—"Boost the Decaturs! 25,000 in 1920." This is the slogan on a button which is being worn by almost every citizen of the two Decaturs. The button is a dark red with white letters. It is being given away by the Development company, the business men's organization of the two Decaturs.

Selma.—E. R. Glass, a well known and wealthy resident of Uniontown and owner of the Farmers' Cotton Seed Oil mill of that place, was caught in the machinery of the plant and torn to pieces. Death was instantaneous. Mr. Glass for years past has acted as his own engineer during the season the mill was in operation.

Fort Payne.—N. T. Hawkins, tax assessor for DeKalb county, completed the tax books for 1912, including the extensions and the raises of the court of county commissioners on the additional assessments made by S. Brown Lloyd, county tax commissioner. The total value of real estate is $2,772,630; of personal property, $2,303,675; total for both real and personal, $5,076,305. The total tax on this amount for DeKalb county is $71,068.27, making a gain of about $10,000 in taxes over last year.

Montgomery.—At a special called meeting in Montgomery, the central committee of the Alabama Sunday association executive committee accepted the resignation of the Rev. J. W. Long of Jacksonville, the adult department superintendent of the state, and elected as his successor Dr. B. M. Ohme, of Montgomery.

Marion.—Congressman G. W. Underwood has accepted an invitation of the Marion Wilcox-Marshall club to deliver an address at the court house September 25.

CRUST COVERED BABY'S HEAD

532 Brunswick St., Baltimore, Md.—"My baby's face broke out in pimples, which after bathing would weep and form scabs until his head and face were completely covered with a crust and his hair all fell out. Crime to Kiss.

In Russia it is a crime for lovers to kiss in public, and not very long ago two young men and two young women were arrested in Odessa for having been guilty of this offense. They had all been dining together in a restaurant, and kissed on parting. They were condemned to short terms of imprisonment, and the sentences were confirmed on appeal. The general fine in Russia for a kiss in the open street is 15 shillings, but in a tramcar it may cost anything up to 25 shillings.

Ten-Year-old Julia Gets Into Bad Graces of Mother by Giving Tramp a Half-Dollar.

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

The foregoing quotation is from chapter xiii, verse 2, Book of Hebrews, and it is introduced solely because it constitutes a vital part of this story. Julia is ten years old and she goes to Sunday school. It appears that on a recent occasion the Sunday school teacher had considerable to say about this matter of "entertaining angels unawares." Anyway, it made a deep impression with Julia.

A few days after the lesson Julia's mother left her in charge of the house for a few hours. When the mother returned she went to a particular cup in the cupboard to extract therefrom one-half dollar. In this cup is kept the family pin money, and Julia's mother knew that she had put 50 cents there before she had gone out. But the half dollar was gone. There was an expression of anxiety on Julia's face and mother scented mischief.

"Did you take that money?" asked the mother, somewhat severely.

Julia broke into tears: "I gave it to a man that came to the back door," sobbed the little girl.

"Gave it to a man!" exclaimed the mother. "What for?"

"I thought he might be God," tearfully replied Julia.—Kansas City Star.

Old Roman Wall Unearthed.

A part of the wall which once enclosed old St. Paul's, London, has been discovered in excavations at the corner of Paternoster Row and St. Paul's alley in London. The wall, which is about 60 feet long, is made of chalk and rubble, and was built in the twelfth century. On the same site pieces of a Roman amphora, Roman vases and some Samian ware have also been found. Other "finds" include a camel's skull unearthed in High Holborn and a large quantity of pipes of the eighteenth century. Under some old stables in Bartholomew Close—one of the oldest parts of London—three Norman arches have been found. They are close to one another, and are believed to have formed part of the cloisters of the priory which once stood on this site.

The Educational Step-Ladder.

We know what kindergarten is for; it is to educate children for the primary grades.

We know what the primary grades are for; they are to educate children for the grammar grades.

We know what the grammar grades are for; they are to educate children for high school.

We know what the high school is for; it is to educate children for college.

But what does college fit you for?—Life.

Matrimony in Australia.

Bridegrooms in Australia last year ranged from sixteen to ninety-nine years of age, and the records show the youngest bride was fifteen, and the oldest eighty-two. One man of seventy-seven married a girl of eighteen. It is not surprising to learn that more marriages were reported from the country than ever before.

Disturbing.

"Nora, is my husband home?"

"Yes, mum; he's in the library, workin'."

"Then wake him and tell him I want to see him."—Satire.

Obliging.

A young man who had never testified before was called before the court as a witness in a certain case. He was somewhat flustered over the attention that was being paid him, and mumbled his words so that the young woman stenographer could not hear them distinctly. He was told to speak plainly and to turn toward the stenographer.

"Speak to the stenographer," said the prosecutor.

At that the young man arose and with a deep bow to the lady said, "How do you do?"—Satire.

English Honors Cost Money.

The letter patent granted for the dignity of a baron cost £150, and for that of a baronet £100, payable to the board of inland revenue. Other expenses to be incurred by the newly-honored include crests or new coats-of-arms, while some wish to have their "genealogical trees" properly made out. Consequently the Heralds' college is busy after the issue of a list of honors, and the total expenses of a baron are not far short of £400, and those of a baronet exceed £200.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientist for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and test it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng., and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. Yongers Co., 29 Beekman St., New York.

The Press has several interesting communications which should have appeared this week; any one of them would have been interesting reading, but all were crowded out. We shall make arrangements not to have this occur again. These communications, however, are so good that they will keep till next week.

Wouldn't it be nice if the new administration should start out by selling the Willopus Wallopus and and purchase one that can be used in dusty weather? Then, too, wouldn't it reflect credit upon them if they should repair the unsightly gulleys on Main street near the post office?

Have you noticed that both Taft and Roosevelt are devoting their time to the democrats rather than to each other? There's a reason—perhaps two. 1st. each wants it to appear that the other isn't to be considered, and then each is aware of the fact that this being a democratic year Wilson is bound to be elected, hence, each of them is jumping on the winner. That's natural, why hit a man when he's down and out like the nominees of the republican and the bull moose parties are?

Again we call the attention of the democrats to the fact that Mr. Wilson is a poor man; that he will not accept large contributions from individuals and none at all from corporations or the trusts; that he is the candidate of the people rather than of the interests or the trusts, and for that reason will not put himself under obligation to either the one or the other by acceptance of campaign money from them. He much prefers to be under obligations to the farmers, mechanics, clerks, merchants and toilers. He can serve them best and will serve them best; therefore, it is encumbent upon them to help defray the expenses of his campaign. Small contributions from many people goes as far as large contributions from the Standard Oil which financed Roosevelt's 1904 campaign, or the "Big Interests" which financed Taft's campaign, therefore it behooves every good democrat to contribute something (however small the amount) to this fund. The Press is authorized by the National Committee and the National Treasurer to receive and receipt for such contributions; they will be remitted free of all cost; two have already been remitted. Who will follow the lead of these democrats?

The following, clipped from the Detroit Free Press (Rep.) is aptly illustrative of certain movements which have taken place in Chilton county recently:

"Mama, what is meant by the progressive party?"

"The progressive party my dear? Why the progressive party is where all the partners change after every game."

Now we leave it to our readers, isn't that illustrative of Chilton politics in certain quarters? First they were democrats, then populists, then republicans now PROGRESSIVES!

Wonder what game they'll play next and what the change of partners will be?

Thorsby, Ala., Route 1

Miss Olive Foshee, fitted with a fine pair of glasses, and few months later thought she was probably not fitted correctly, went to Birmingham to a doctor and the Birmingham doctor told her that she had the right prescription over her eyes, and her father, Mr. Fate Foshee, was nice enough to call in my office and give in the above statement as testimonial and I sure want to extend my sincere thanks to Mr. Foshee and Mr. Crowson for recommending my work on eyes, for you know there are so many patients that I never hear from unless something happens to the frames or a lens gets a little out of true, etc., and gives them a little trouble, then of course, they come to me with both feet ready to jump right in me, see?

The above Mr. Crowson is 52 years old and has never been suited with a pair of glasses before and has several of "these here," "cheap specks" for 50c to $2.50. He paid me $10.00 for his glasses.

The Miss Foshee has a $12.50 pair of fine ground glasses. She came to me suffering with severe headaches. Now ask her or her people if she regrets her money she paid me for the glasses.

Now please don't let the above prices run you away from buying glasses from me, I keep plenty of glasses at 50c a pair and up "TO SELL" where people LOVE MONEY better than they do their health.

I will appreciate your patronage whether you want to buy some cheap glasses, or if you desire to have your eyes examined and treated with FINE GROUND EYE GLASSES.

Yours truly,
DR. J. V. HIGGINS.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS
FOR BACKACHE KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

EX-GOV. COMER'S STATEMENTS DENOUNCED BY SIDNEY J. BOWIE AS "UTTERLY FALSE"

Former Congressman, Who Retired Voluntarily, Makes Telling Rejoinder to Speech Delivered at Greenville by Former Governor—Scores Comer for Continual Unfair Attacks on Judge Jones, and Disposition to Try Judicial Questions On the Stump Instead of Taking Them Into Court, Where They Belong.

Hon. Sydney J. Bowie has issued a statement in reply to some of the personal allusions made by former Governor B. B. Comer in his Greenville speech last Friday. Mr. Bowie denounces as "utterly false" the insinuation that if he were now in congress he would do the bidding of Archbold, Ryan, Belmont, Morgan and Rockefeller.

He states that he retired from congress voluntarily and could have been re-elected, and he charges that Governor Comer at the time of his retirement could have been re-elected to any position in the state. He writes as follows:

"Former Governor Comer, in his speech [illegible] on last Friday, said 'Mr. P. Sid Bowie [illegible] guished citizen who Mr. Smith took [illegible] ery with him in his private car [illegible] of the legislature in 1907, and he [illegible] part of the Louisville and Nashville [illegible] ing that the legislature adjourn sine die; [illegible] it was a dangerous body. Mr. Bowie [illegible] man, elected by the democrats of [illegible] he was a member of congress now, and [illegible] and Mr. Ryan and Mr. Belmont, Mr. Morgan [illegible] feller and others would go down to Washington and demand that congress adjourn sine die, that it was dangerous.'

Denounced as Utterly False.

"I do not know just what Mr. Comer intended by the last sentence above quoted, but taken in connection with the two preceding sentences it is insinuation that if I were still a member of congress I would do the bidding of Archbold, Belmont, Morgan and Rockefeller. If Mr. Comer intended to say anything of that kind I here and now denounce it as utterly false. I represented the Fourth congressional district of Alabama in congress for six years. My record was an open book; my constituents knew how I represented them with fidelity and single-minded devotion to their interests. I retired from congress voluntarily. I could have been returned by my constituents if I had been a candidate. I could have been governor of Alabama for four years, I could have been re-elected to any office within the gift of the people when his term had expired.

Other Statements Equally Untrue.

"His other statements are equally untrue. His speech at Montgomery during the extra session upon the invitation of the business men of that city, I have a copy of that speech before me. I did not demand that the legislature adjourn sine die, I did not declare that it was a dangerous body, nor did I say anything that justified any such conclusion. My opposition to the proposed legislation was as I considered it was more than [illegible] and I stand by [illegible] to the bills to which I objected as being unconstitutional. The constitution of the state [illegible] declared so by the supreme court [illegible] in the case of ex parte Young, the same [illegible] which enacted the [illegible] ployed by Governor Comer, [illegible] constitutional enactments. The [illegible] the bill and marched it down [illegible] the acts to which objection was made [illegible] fair trial, declared unconstitutional.

"As for Mr. Comer's insinuation [illegible] a decoy for Mr. M. H. Smith, I [illegible] contempt which it deserves.

Attack on Judge Jones Unjust.

"While the rate cases were pending [illegible] I felt it a matter of doubtful propriety to [illegible] charges that were made against [illegible] the state to the other by Governor Comer. Those charges have now been decided in favor [illegible] The state authorities have announced [illegible] their intention of appealing the [illegible] court of the United States. I [illegible] therefore in saying that the assault made [illegible] by Governor Comer is utterly without justification. There has never been in the history of the state [illegible] where a man doing his duty has been pursued [illegible] and slandered as Judge Jones has been in this controversy.

Issued Without Objection.

"The attack upon Judge Jones began before a single contested ruling had been made by him in favor of the complainants. In order that the purpose of this statement may see and know how utterly without foundation this assault has been upon him I will state, as it is as they are disclosed by the record, and I now challenge Governor Comer to deny and disprove [illegible] the record in statement that I make. When the original bill was filed Judge Jones declined to grant even a temporary restraining order until the state authorities, who were the defendants, had received due notice and had appeared in court. Governor Comer selected as counsel for the state Frank S. White, Samuel D. Weakley, Richard W. Walker, H. C. Selheimer and Horace Stringfellow, and Alexander M. Garber also represented the state as its attorney general.

"No abler, cleaner or higher-minded lawyers ever practiced at the bar of any state. When they came into court they made no objection to the granting of the temporary restraining order. They, of course, did not consent to its being granted, but they did not state their places and say that it ought not to be granted upon the allegations of the bill. They made neither argument nor suggestion as to why the temporary restraining order should not be granted. Afterwards the cause was set down to be heard on an application for a temporary writ of injunction. When that application came on to be heard it was perfectly competent for the attorneys representing the defendants, to have put in an answer under oath denying the allegations of the bill if the facts had warranted such a proceeding. They did not file an answer under oath, as the bill had been; they filed no affidavits in opposition to the granting of the writ of temporary injunction; they made no announcement against it, and they publicly announced that they would not appeal from the granting of the temporary writ of injunction. If just cause had existed why this injunction should not issue it would certainly have been incumbent upon them to have made it known to the court, and if the court held adversely to them it would have been their duty under those circumstances to have taken an appeal. But neither course was taken. Under the circumstances there was no course open to Judge Jones except to grant the temporary writ of injunction.

Only Mode Afforded.

"And when finally the state's counsel filed an answer in these causes when they came to that part of the bills in which it was charged that that proceeding in equity was the only way by which the complainant could test its rights in this matter, they said: 'Defendants in answer to paragraph 23 of said bill say: They admit that the provisions of the several acts of the legislature of Alabama set forth in said paragraph are correctly stated therein, and they admit that the suspension of said rates by the institution of proceedings for such purpose as provided by the legislature of said state is the only adequate mode afforded by the complainants for asserting a defense to the same.'

"Let it be remembered that the act of the legislature of Alabama adopted by and with the consent and approval of Governor Comer himself expressly provided that upon a test of these rates in a court of justice they might be suspended during the pendency of the proceedings. And it was admitted in the answer that the suspension of the rates in the manner therein provided for was the only adequate method afforded to the complainants for making a test of the validity of those statutes.

Begins Campaign Villification.

"Yet, notwithstanding the fact that the equity of the bill on its face was expressly admitted, notwithstanding the fact that the propriety of the original writ of injunction was not controverted or denied by counsel representing the state, and notwithstanding the fact that the original injunction was issued without an objection and without even an appeal, Governor Comer, observing how successfully a campaign for intimidation had worked in the state of North Carolina, in which the Southern railway was the defendant, began a campaign of villification and abuse not only of the Louisville and Nashville railroad company, but of the court itself without a precedent and without a counterpart in the history of this country. He denounced the complainant for instituting a proceeding sanctioned by the very statutes which he had approved, and he denounced the judge for issuing an injunction to which no objection whatever had been made.

Attacks Just as Baseless.

"Governor Comer attacked Judge Jones and denounced him just as he is attacking him and denouncing him today, before he had rendered a single adverse decision. He attacked and denounced him for rendering an injunction that he ought to have rendered. His subsequent attacks have been just as baseless, just as devoid of justification and just as unoriginal as his original ones.

Judge Jones Bound To Try Cases.

"The injustice to Judge Jones is further shown by the fact that he had no option in the matter of hearing these cases. Judge Jones was not disqualified from hearing the cause and he could not refuse to hear it. The suit was brought in Montgomery, because the law of the state requires that the railroad commission of Alabama should be sued in Montgomery. It was brought in the federal court because it asserted a defense under the federal constitution. This defense depended upon the facts. The supreme court of the United States could not [illegible] facts on appeal from the ruling of the federal court. It was the only [illegible] only examine the facts on appeal [illegible] federal court. It was the only method, therefore, in [illegible] to obtain an adjudication of its [illegible] consideration from the supreme [illegible] Governor Comer says that [illegible] decided nearly all of its cases [illegible] Why and to what end [illegible] supreme court of the United States had [illegible] reference court in practically every one of [illegible] decided them against the railroads? [illegible] before the record is even printed, de- [illegible] of that court? Why does he seek [illegible] on that they are the dishonest and [illegible] corporations, when he knows, or could [illegible] by the trouble to inquire, that the supreme court of the United States, even this very court, [illegible] more cases against the railroads [illegible] decided in their favor.

Comer Denounces Supreme Court.

"Governor Comer has not only denounced Judge Jones [illegible] unfavorable ruling; he denounces [illegible] of the United States before it has [illegible] the cause. He has denounced Judge W. S. [illegible] and Col. W. A. Gunter, two of the cleanest, [illegible] high-minded lawyers of this state, and has charged that they were fixed jurors. Every man, according to Governor Comer, is dishonest who differs from [illegible] Every man who has worked for a corporation at any time in his life forfeits thereafter [illegible] confidence. I suppose I should modify [illegible] I suppose that Governor Comer really [illegible] that the only business which makes men utterly corrupt and dishonest is the railroad business. I suppose, of course, there are no dishonest men in the cotton mill business, or in the mercantile business, or in the banking business, or among the farmers. Only the railroad men are corrupt and unfit for public trust.

"Mr. Comer's attacks upon Mr. M. H. Smith are equally unjust. The state of Alabama has never had a better friend than Mr. Smith. No single citizen of this state has contributed as much to the upbuilding and development of the state as Milton H. Smith. He has done more real intelligent, effective work for the development and upbuilding of this state with his little finger in a single year than Mr. Comer has in his whole lifetime. He has not given Alabama high rates; he has not made unreasonable returns from the business in Alabama for his railroad. His rates are lower in Alabama than the average of all other rates in Tennessee, Mississippi, Florica, Georgia or upon the other roads in Alabama.

Willing To Abide By Decision.

"Col. Gunter and Judge Thorington have been partisan and unfair, and they have been neither; if Judge Jones has been partisan and unfair, and he has been neither, the railroad commission of Alabama has the right to take this case to the supreme court of the United States. That court is the equal of any in intelligence and the superior of any in dignity and importance on the face of the earth. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad company is willing to abide by and obey the decision of the supreme court of the United States. It was willing to abide by, and it did obey, the order of the court of appeals to put in these rates temporarily, and to make a test of them. It did so, and the result of that test vindicated its position. If it is mistaken, if an improper judgment has been rendered in its favor, the supreme court of the United States can correct it. Not a member of that court was ever employed for a day by the Louisville and Nashville railroad. It is willing to abide by the decision of that court, but Governor Comer does not seem to be willing to do so.

"When Col. Mallory and Governor O'Neal were candidates for governor, Mr. Nesbitt showed a great deal of solicitude to ascertain the position of both candidates for governor in regard to this case. He wrote each of them an open letter, in which he specifically asked if they would agree that the case should be appealed to the supreme court of the United States if a decision adverse to the state authorities was rendered. Both candidates for governor answered in a manner satisfactory to Mr. Nesbitt.

"The time has now arrived for the taking of that appeal. Notice has been given through the public press that it would be taken. Personally I have thought that it would be the part of wisdom to delay the expense of printing the transcript, at least until the supreme court of the United States passed on the Minnesota and other cases; but, however that may be, the Louisville and Nashville railroad has always been willing, and is willing now that this case should be taken immediately to the supreme court of the United States for its final determination, and it has been and it is willing to abide by and perform whatever judgment that court renders, whether it is in favor or against it, but Mr. Comer, unlike Mr. Nesbitt, seems wholly unwilling that the case shall go there. He wants to appeal to the legislature, and not to the courts; he wants a political trial of the issue, in a political body, and not a judicial trial, in a judicial body.

Can Not Be Tried On Stump.

"The Louisville and Nashville railroad does not believe that a law suit can be tried on the stump; it does not believe that a law suit can be tried in the legislature, but it feels that an injustice has been done it by the attacks which have been made upon it, and it intends from time to time to state its position in this matter through the public prints. It has heretofore pursued the policy of silence, because its case was pending in the courts, where it felt it ought to be tried, but now that a decision has been rendered in its favor, and a new political attack has been made upon it, it feels that it is its duty to its customers, to its patrons, and to itself, to state its own side and its own position directly to the people. It does not believe that is the way law suits should be heard or settled, but it does believe, and it does insist that it has a right, and it proposes to exercise that right of presenting from time to time its attitude on this question. It has done so without abuse or villification; it has been abused and villified, but it has not replied, and it does not intend to reply in kind. It has implicit faith in the justice of its cause, and it will pursue its course unabated, uninterrupted and undeterred by the attacks of its enemies.

Whereas, the Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1911, has ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1912;

And, Whereas, notice of such election, together with the proposed amend ment, is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

Now, therefore, I, Emmett O'Neal, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1912, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

H. B 194] "AN ACT

To submit to the qualified voters of the State, at the general election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November, 1912, for their consideration, an amendment to the Constitution of the State, so as to authorize and empower the Legislature from time to time by general or local laws to fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances or salaries to be charged or received by any county officer of Jefferson county, includidg the method or basis of their compensation.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of Alabama:

Section 1- That the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama is hereby proposed to be submitted to the qualified voters of Alabama for their consideration, as hereinafter set forth, viz: The Legislature of Alabama may hereafter, from time to time, by general or local laws, fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances or salaries to be charged or received by any county officer of Jefferson county, including the method and basis of their compensation.

Sec. 2. It shall be the duty of the Governor to give notice by proclamation to be published in one newspaper in each county in the State at least eight successive weeks next preceding the general election in November, 1912, of the election on the amendment proposed by this act to be submitted to the qualified voters of the State for their consideration together with the proposed amendment.

Sec. 3. That at the general election in November, 1912, an election shall be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State upon the proposed amendment. Upon the ballots used at such election shall be printed the following, viz: Amendment to Constitution, authorizing the Legislature, by general or local laws, from time to time, to fix, regulate and alter the costs, charges of courts, fees, commissions, allowances and salaries to be charged or received by any county officer of Jefferson county, including the method and basis of their compensation. Following the proposed amendment on the ballot shall be printed the word, "Yes," and immediately under that shall be printed the word, "No." The choice of the electors shall be indicated by a cross mark by him opposite the word expressing his desire.

Sec. 4. The officers of such general election shall open a poll for the vote of the qualified electors upon the proposed amendment. The election shall be held in all things in accordance with the law governing general elections. In the election upon such proposed amendment the votes cast thereat shall be canvassed, tabulated and the returns thereof be made to the Secretary of State and counted in the same manner as in elections for representatives in the Legislature, and if it shall thereupon appear that a majority of the qualified electors who voted upon the proposed amendment voted in favor of the same, such amendment shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution of Alabama. The result of such election shall be made known by the proclamation of the Governor.

Approved Fabruary 28, 1911."

COX'S BODY DISENTERRED

a man of family, with wife and two children. I was farming on shares with Cox; he went there repeatedly over my protest.

Re-cross examination: I first called attention of Davis to the pistol. No one picked it up till Smitherman did; I do not think any one touched it till he did. Cox was holding pistol as if he would have shot. I made no statement to Jones or Smitherman to the effect that I told Cox not to go into the lot or barn, and when he asked me why? had replied because he had accused me of stealing his feed.

Payton was again brought back and testified: I have lived at Martin's since 27th of March. I do not own a pistol. One was at Mrrtin's but it was not mine; it staid in the dresser in my room; I thought it belonged to Martin; don't remember how often I saw it. I have not been to Martin's but once since August 30th. I don't remember shooting any chicken, or at one with any pistol: don't remember Martin ever having done so. Don't know who picked up the pistol by Cox.

On cross he said: I do not know to whom the 32 belonged; it was a revolver. I never saw the pistol picked up by Cox till found near Cox.

On Re-direct, he said: No other man staid at Martin's except he and I.

Dr. Hopkins was again called: His testimony was substantially what was printed last week, except that he stated he was not an expert on gun shot wounds and was merely testifying from what he had seen and knew.

Sheriff Jones testified: Cox was a deputy sheriff in my office. I never saw him with any sueh pistol as is displayed here. Martin stated to me in jail, after his arrest, that Cox came up with a load of fodder and he (Martin) told him not to put in the barn. Cox then reached for his pistol and when I saw it I fired.

Deputy Smitherman testified: I saw a pistol at Martin's. After we put Cox in the auto I went out and picked it up; it was 12 or 15 feet from a puddle of blood in front of the house. There was no blood on the pistol. Martin insisted on my getting the pistol; the two cartridges here shown were in the pistol when I picked it up. I asked Martin why he killed Cox, he said, I told Cox not to go into the lot and Cox said he was going in and reached for his pocket. I got a glimpse of the pistol and shot. When I got there Cox had been moved. I had been there a few minutes before the pistol was mentioned. I had arrested Martin and he insisted on my looking for the pistol. When I picked pistol up Cox's body had been brought to Clanton.

Prof. Davis testified: Dr. Hopkins, Mr. Hinkle and Martin were there when I got there. The body was laying under the shade of a tree when I got there; if there had been a pistol near I would have seen it. Martin did say to me "if you'll come down here I'll show you what caused the trouble."

On cross examination he stated. I did not look for any pistol. It could have been there and I not have seen it. Martin never mentioned pistol to me. In going to Cox I passed by the gate; I saw blood but no pistol.

Mrs. Cox, the widow of C. W. Cox testified: I am the widow of C. W. Cox. The last I saw of him alive was at 9:30 Friday morning. I fixed his clothes for him to go to the field. I took the things out of his trousers that he had on before preparing for the field. In the trousers he pulled off he had keys, a $10.00 bill and some papers. In the clothes he wore off he had tobacco, cigarrette papers and matches. He owned no such pistol as has been shown here. He never owned any such pistol. He did own a large revolver. He left his large pistol and hand-cuffs with other things at home.

On cross examination, she said: I know he went to the farm direct from home. He went there to move his fodder.

Mr. Tillery, for defense. I knew Cox. Never had a conversation with him about threats against Martin. I was not at Martin's the day Cox was killed. I was there the next day. I saw a cartridge laying near a bloody pillow that day. Wiley Gray, Lige Weldon and others were there at the time. I took the cartridge and gave it to you. The one shown by you, (Smith of council for the defense) is the one I picked up; I made a nitche in it so I would know it.

The Court here adjourned until 8: a.m. Wednesday but on account of the illness of Mr. Curry, of council for the defense, the Court agreed to a further continuance till Saturday morning at which time Mr. Smith agreed to continue the case whether Mr. Curry was well or not.

Friday arrangements were made by the state to disinter the body of Cox to ascertain definitely about the condition of the gun shot wound in the finger, but for some reason after assembling at the grave yard, the work of disinterment was suspended.

On Saturday morning the Court reconvened, but no witnesses were put upon the stand. The state asked for an order permitting the body to be disenterred in presence of counsel for both sides and such others as the Court might designate. This order was granted and at two o'clock the body, in the presence of half a score of witnesses, counsel for both sides, and physicians, was disinterred and the right hand examined This member was severed from the body and is being preserved for the regular trial in the Circuit Court when it convenes. The Press does not pretend to say which side was right in the controversy as to the condition of the hand, but from the fact that neither side put witnesses upon the stand to prove their contention, it looks very much like both sides were partly right and partly wrong; however, the final trial will develop this phaze of the case. Till then the Press does not wish to take any stand in the controversy.

The case was submitted to Judge Deason without argument by either side. After considering for a few moments he remanded the prisoner to jail without bail. Thus ends for the time being, one of the most sensational trials held in this county in recent years.

Morning Sickness

Many women suffer this misery. It makes its appearance so regularly that they learn to expect it and arrange their household work accordingly. Few women think of seeking medical help to get rid of it for good. If women only knew of the power and effectiveness of Dr. Simmons Squaw Vine Wine they would not be without it a moment longer than it would take to get it from the drug store. It is a splendid remedy for all nausea or sickness of the stomach. The first dose settles the stomach and makes the patient feel better. Additional doses act on the female generative system, strengthening weakened organs, regulating the habits, restering tone and strength in every part of the body. It is essentially a woman's remedy prepared expressly to meet the need of women who suffer from the ailments common to their sex.

ELEVEN VACANCIES IN LEGISLATURE

ELECTIONS WILL DOUBTLESS BE HELD IF SPECIAL SESSION IS CALLED.

TEMPER MAY BE CHANGED

Latest Death in Rank of Solons Is That of Dr. L. M. McLendon of Brewton.

Montgomery.—With the death of Dr. L. M. McLendon, of Brewton, member of the legislature from Escambia County, notification of which reached Governor O'Neal eleven vacancies in the legislature are recorded, and will be filled if the contemplated special session is called. The political learning of the eleven men who must be elected to the vacancies may change the temper of the entire legislature.

Dr. McLendon was chairman of the House committee on public health. He was out of line with most of the administration policies. Most of the eleven, however, were favorable to the policies endorsed by Governor O'Neal. Those members who will not be seen when the legislature convenes for the probable special session, their places made vacant by resignation or death, are:

Dr. L. M. McLendon of Escambia, J. J. Arnold, administration whip on the floor of the House, who resigned to accept the position of Probate Judge of Calhoun County. Arnold's colleague, C. D. Martin, of Jacksonville, Calhoun County, has resigned also, to become Tax Commissioner of Calhoun County. Martin, too, was behind the administration in its policies.

Although not officially announced, news of the death of I. M. Doswell, member of the legislature from Henry County, reached the Governor's office.

W. E. McGowen, of Cuba, Sumter County, has resigned to become a member of the Court of County Commissioners. McGowen was a conspicuous figure in the legislature during the first session, because of the part which he played in the election of E. B. Almon, speaker, over J. Lee Long, switching his vote from Long to Almon and breaking the tie which resulted from the first ballot.

Sim T. Wright, representative from Fayette, withdrew as a member of the legislature, upon his appointment by President Taft as Collector of Internal Revenue. Wright was one of the five Republican members of the legislature. Another of the five is gone with the resignation of State Senator J. B. Sloan, of Oneonta, third senatorial district. Senator Sloan was appointed only a few days ago United States District Attorney. The members of the legislature of Republican affiliation who remain are all in the House. They are Popwell of Chilton, Edmonds of Winston and Sturdivant of Shelby.

Montgomery's delegation loses two members by resignation. Senator M. H. Screws becoming Judge of the Inferior Court, necessarily resigned as a member of the legislature, as did John V. Smith, author of the Smith regulation bill, upon his appointment as city attorney of Montgomery.

W. J. Martin, member of the House from Jackson County, resigned upon his appointment as State Land Agent. Martin, as was Smith, Screws, Sloan and Wright, was a supporter of the Governor throughout the session. The position of B. D. Turner, of Washington County, member of the State Senate from the Nineteenth District, must be filled, because of his death. His seat was vacant during the initial session, as his death occurred too soon before the session to allow for a special election in the district.

It is likely that there will be one or more other vacancies before an extra session but the eleven are all that have reached the attention of the Governor. Elections will be called in the counties whose representatives are missing, in event of the call.

O'Neal Names Committee.

Montgomery. — Governor O'Neal gave definite shape to the movement for an Alabama centenary celebration and international exposition in 1919, by appointing a committee of about 175 members, representatives of every county of the State, to take over the work of planning the event. An exposition of a scope equal to that of the St. Louis, Buffalo and Jamestown fairs is the idea of Governor O'Neal, and of Dr. Thomas M. Owen, chairman of the committee.

A conference of the Montgomery members of the committee was held and the support of each was pledged for work toward successful consummation of the plans. Dr. Owen called a meeting of the entire committee to be held in Montgomery on Alabama Day of the State Exposition, October 23.

Dr. Owen announced that he has received notification of the fact that both Huntsville and Birmingham have named committees from these numerous civic bodies to work toward securing the exposition.

CHILDREN OF SCHOOL AGE.

Department of Education Compiles Reports From Counties.

Montgomery. — Alabama's population has waxed with the passing of two years, if an increase of 14,000 in number of children of school age is an indication of a general increase. Final returns from the 1912 school census compiled by the office force of the State Department of Education, reveal a school population of 726,766 for 1912 as against 712,769 for 1910.

The figures for this year's census are not entirely correct, owing to the failure of the Superintendents of Macon and Russell counties to make returns as required by law as soon after August 15 as possible. To cover the discrepancy, the 1910 figures for he two counties were taken as their 1912 census figures, and a total obtained in that manner. It is believed that the total is not far wrong because of the substitution.

A feature of the figures is the proportionately greater increase among the white children of the State than among the negroes. In 1910 there were 390,062 white children, and 322,707 negroes; in 1912, 399,127 whites and 327,584 negroes.

In Montgomery County the increase was slight, being 28,651 for 1910 and 29,246 for this year. Negro children outnumber the white children by almost four to one, according to figures for the county. In Jefferson County the increase was proportionately greater, with figures of 65,904 for 1910 as against 71,728 for 1912.

The census of children of school age, 7 to 21, is taken each year of even number, by local enumerators. The pro rata amount of school funds is determined by the census.

SIDNA ALLEN AND EDWARDS CAUGHT

SWEETHEART OF LATTER UNCONSCIOUSLY LED THREE DETECTIVES.

FOLLOWED HER ON TRAIN

Young Couple Were on Eve of Being Married—A Lost Letter Gave the Clew.

Des Moines, Iowa.—Sidna Allen, leader of the Allen clan, which shot up the Carroll county court house at Hillsville, Va., March 14, killing Judge Massie and others, and his nephew, Wesley Edwards, are manacled in cells at the city jail as a result of a love affair which led detectives to them. Neither of the men objected to returning to Virginia without requisition.

Edwards, for the love of whom Miss Maude Iroler, of Mount Airy, N. C., had innocently led detectives to Des Moines, was captured as he was returning to his boarding house, after having worked all day with a paving gang. Just as he boarded a street car detectives and city officials surrounded it. Edwards was trying to escape by crawling through the front end of the car when the officers caught him. The arrest of Sidna Allen was effected earlier in the day.

A visit by Edwards to Miss Iroler in her North Carolina home about a month ago and the accidental loss of a letter put the detectives on the trail. The fugitives have been in Des Moines since April 28. Allen, under the name of Tom Sayre, worked as a carpenter, and Edwards, under the name of Joe Jackson, was employed with a city paving gang.

Allen was arrested at the home of John Cameron at Eleventh and Locust streets, where he and his nephew had been rooming, by Detectives Baldwin, Lucas and Mundy, of Roanoke, Va. The arrest was made a few minutes after Miss Iroler stepped into the Cameron home to meet Edwards, whom she was to wed, according to an arrangement when he last visited her. Detective Lucas was at her heels. Allen was in an upper room. When informed that visitors wanted to see him, he came down stairs. As he did so, Detective Lucas covered him with a revolver and asked him to surrender. Allen hesitated, then threw up his hands, saying, as he did so: "I guess I am your man." Allen was handcuffed and placed under a guard of city detectives, while Colonel Baldwin and Chief Jenney, of the local department, went in search of Edwards, who was said to be at work in the western part of the city. Apparently Edwards heard that his uncle had been captured, because he was not found until night.

Miss Iroler arrived in Des Moines unaware that on the same train were detectives who wanted her sweetheart.

She went straight to the Cameron home, having previously been provided with the address, and the officers followed.

Although surprised, she took the arrest of Allen and the capture of Edwards with little show of concern.

"Wesley was down home a month ago," she said. "We were to be married. He gave me the money to come to this city and this address. I had no idea that any one was following me."

Sidna Allen, talked freely of the events of the last few months, but declinde to say much concerning his movements immediately after the court house tragedy. He and Edwards remained in the mountain country of Virginia and North Carolina for about a month and then got over into Kentucky, going to Louisville, where they spent several days. Their next stop was in St. Louis, where they remained a week. They had sufficient money for their needs and traveled as first class passengers.

HAYWOOD ARRESTED.

Charged With Conspiracy in Connection With the Lawrence Strike.

Boston.—William D. Haywood of Denver, general organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, was arrested here on a capias warrant issued as the result of an indictment by the Essex county grand jury charging him with conspiracy in connection with the strike of the textile workers in Lawrence last winter. He was released on $1000 bond.

The exact nature of the conspiracy with which Haywood is charged was not mentioned in the indictment.

WIRE FLASHES.

Seagirt, N. J.—Complaints indicating a "scandalous disregard of law in the city of Newark" have been brought to the notice of the mayor and chief of police of that city and to the prosecutor and sheriff of Essex county by Gov. Woodrow Wilson.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Three persons were killed and 50 injured by a cyclone which worked a 16-mile trail of destruction across the northern part of Onondaga county. The property loss is estimated at $250,000.

"I HAVE NO ONE WITH ME BUT THE PEOPLE!"

LESSON ON TARIFF

HOSIERY SCHEDULE SUPPLIES CLEAR ILLUSTRATION OF ITS PRACTICAL EFFECTS.

PROTECTION RATE TOO HIGH

Labor Cost of Production in This Country Little More Than in Europe Notwithstanding Difference in Wages.

We have received the following appeal for light on the tariff:

"Is this the Democratic idea of the tariff: That if the tariff is taken off hosiery the American product will be undersold by the German because it can be produced cheaper in that country than it can in the United States? Would this be true of all things now carrying tariff?"

So far as we are aware, the Democratic party has never made any declaration on hosiery, but we are glad that item was specified, because it affords a peculiarly clear and intelligible illustration of the practical effect of the tariff. Hosiery worth a dollar a dozen pairs in Germany is taxed under our tariff 60 cents and 15 per cent., or 75 cents. Omitting freight and commissions and incidental charges, this hosiery, then, could be sold here for $1.75 a dozen. The census bulletins show that in hosiery the wages constitute about one-fourth of the value of the product. On domestic stockings worth $1.75 a dozen, therefore, the total labor cost would be about 44 cents.

The position of the manufacturer, then, is that where he pays 44 cents to his working people he gets 75 cents of protection. The Democratic party does not believe that he needs any such rate of protection. The labor cost of production in this country is little more than it is in Europe in any line, and in many lines it is much less. In the last fiscal year we exported more than a billion dollars' worth of manufactured goods. In July more than half of the exports were manufactured goods. Of course, if it cost more to produce manufactured goods here than in Europe we could not export on any such scale as this. The employes in our machine shops get better wages than the men in foreign machine shops, and yet we exported machinery to the value of $115,000,000 in the last fiscal year.

Of course, the Democratic party does not believe that lowering duties would close our mills and throw all our people out of employment. If it did it would not advocate reducing duties. The reports of the tariff board show, what students of economics knew before, that the labor cost of production is often lowest where wages are highest. There is a book on the efficiency of labor, or the relative costs of labor where wages are high and where they are low, by Jacob Schoenhoff. There is a volume of lectures on "Work and Wages" by Lord Brassey, and another book by him on a similar subject, which, of course, have no specific reference to our tariff, but are all the more valuable for that reason. They are discussions of the greater economy of high-priced labor. Lord Brassey's father built railroads in every part of the world, and he found that it made little difference in the cost of construction whether he paid a shilling in India, four shillings in France or six shillings in England; if there were any difference the cost was lowest where the wages were highest.

PRESIDENT AND THE VETO

Taft's Wholly Unnecessary Defense of the Function Which He Has So Misused.

Mr. Taft at Columbus, O., undertook to convince an audience that the veto is a good thing. As if it had ever been questioned! The president at times seems afflicted with literal myopia.

Mr. Taft has vetoed every measure calculated to bring relief to the people from excessive living costs. The wool bill, the cotton and steel bills, the meat bill, the farmers' free list bill, all were killed by Taft's veto. He has perpetuated the plundering of the people. And his defense is an academic discussion of a presidential function constitutionally bestowed.

To be sure, those bills came from a Democratic house. But it was to that same Democratic house Mr. Taft's reciprocity measure was committed. The Democratic house might, in effect, have vetoed the president's bill. But it didn't. It thought that the bill would serve the people's welfare. The Democratic house forgot politics and undertook the public service. The president didn't.

President Taft might have vetoed well. Had he vetoed the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill he would have been a maker of history. Great opportunity has been his. The qualities of head and heart that make for greatness are not his.

He has vetoed his own succession.

McHarg Now Among the "Bosses."

Ormsby McHarg, one of the managers of the late Roosevelt campaign, has announced that he will support Mr. Taft. He says:

"I supported Colonel Roosevelt as a Republican, having no notion at that time that he was anything else. I was bitterly disappointed to find later what his real intentions were. I am under no obligations to him or anybody else, however, to get out of the Republican party, and do not intend to do so. . . . I believe there is absolutely no future for the new third party beyond Colonel Roosevelt. If the new party expects to live it will have to take out a life insurance policy on the colonel's life. Their cry of "fighting the bosses" is already being dissipated, by the winds of public opinion. I do not think that Penrose is a bit more dangerous than Flinn, and some of the other so-called Republican bosses have quite as good a standing with the voters as has Mr. Perkins."

Of course, McHarg has, by his action, ranked himself with the bosses. For we know that a boss is a man who opposes Roosevelt. Woodruff was a boss till he came into the camp of the third termer, and so was Flinn. But they have gone through a process of sanctification. It is precisely so with McHarg. He was not a boss when he was doing for Roosevelt the work of a boss. But having broken relations with "the only perfect man" he necessarily sinks to the boss level. We, therefore, fully expect to hear him denounced as an exponent of "crooked politics." Even Penrose was "all right" when he was running Roosevelt's campaign in Pennsylvania.

McHarg's View of Roosevelt.

McHarg may have deserted Roosevelt because he would not follow him out of the Republican party, and he may have substantial reasons for deserting him. It is to be remembered that McHarg went into Roosevelt's service after denouncing him as the most dangerous man in our political life, and declaring that he would not vote for his candidate for governor of New York two years ago.

The Tender Point.

In view of the character of the Democratic nominee, the Democratic platform and the present temper of Democratic leadership, why do not the men in the Progressive movement who really desire progress cast in their lot with us?

Thing is, we believe, just one chief reason: the Progressive adoration of the protective principle in tariff making.

The thing the Progressive so warmly champions—for the platform goes on through the familiar formula as to "equalizing conditions of competition," and all the rest of it—is the thing which the Democracy is especially anxious to smite between the eyes. The difficulty of merging the honest and sincere portion of the Roosevelt following into the Wilson following is precisely the difficulty of uniting two companies when the evil angel of the one is the good angel of the other.

The French ministry of public works is endeavoring to have the government adopt the system of reckoning time on railways by the use of the hours from 1 to 24, instead of 12 noon to 12 midnight. This system has already been adopted by many continental railways and has been in operation for years on the Canadian Pacific railway.

The new cotton gin is now ready for work.

Mr. Charlie Reynolds came in Monday night and spent a few hours.

The city election took place here Monday; much interest was shown during the day. Mayor Bice was re-elected by a majority of seven votes. This is Mr. Bice's third term as mayor and he makes a good one. TOWN ELECTION

MAYOR MATTHEWS RE-ELECTED.

Monday was election day in the various municipalities of Alabama and Clanton was no exception to the general rule.

Though a larger vote was polled Monday than is usual in Town elections here, it was one of the quietest and most orderly elections ever held.

From early morning till the close of the polls, friends of the various candidates bestirred themselves getting out voters.

Messrs. N. A. Kicker, G. O. Foshee and P. W. Mahan acted as inspectors, while Messrs. Hugh Simpson and Ed Driver were the efficient clerks.

The following is the result as announced by the Inspectors:

For Mayor.

E. A. Matthews, 84.
J. E. Gowan, 67.
J. B. Hicks, 1.

(Mr. Hicks was not an avowed candidate.)

For Councilmen.

E. M. Pinckard, 120; Dr. V. J. Gragg, 99; W. H. Sartor, 84; M. L. White, 80; F. R. Woodyard, 80; W. I. Mullins, 75; J. E. Robinson, 67; Dr. P. I. Hopkins, 60; W. F. Teel, 57; A. R. Cooper, 20; H. M. Mahan, 16; Jos. Thompson, 10; J. W. Stanfield, 8; L. H. Reynolds, 2; J. Wiley Littlejohn, 2; Mc Broadhead, 1.

From the above it will be seen that Mayor Matthews was re-elected Mayor and that Messrs. E. M. Pinckard, V. J. Gragg, W. H. Sartor, M. L. White and F. R. Woodyard were elected to the Council.

While the Press does not pretend to stand sponsor for the rumor, it is stated that the above is a "School" Council; that is, they are in favor of collecting the property tax and turning it over to the school board. It is also stated that it is a triumph for Chief Hayes.

Whether these reports be true or not the Press does not pretend to say.

Isn't he the same Roosevelt who invited Booker Washington to his private dining table and who appointed a negro Collector in South Carolina over the protest of the good white people of that state? Isn't this the same Roosevelt who appointed a negro postmaster at Bookhaven, Miss., and almost precipitated a race riot by standing to him rather than to the white people of the South? But let Roosevelt pass for the time being. Then, we come to Jos. O. Thompson, the "I must be leader" of Alabama Rooseveltism; isn't he the same J. O. Thompson who carried up the contest against the Lily Whites and seated negroes in the convention? Isn't he the same J. O. Thompson who called upon W. H. Mixon, a coal black negro preacher, to open the state convention with prayer? And didn't he carry Mixon to the Chicago convention where Roosevelt bolted like a traitor and didn't Thompson and Mixson fellow him to the new convention at which time the Roosevelt-Thompson party was born, while Mixon led the prayer of birth?

Now, they say Roosevelt is for a white man's party in the South. My; my. my, and what does Roosevelt say about the West Verginia and Pennsylvania negro? He stated publicly that a negro from these states was the equal of any white man. Now, gentleman, read carefully and consider well who are the leaders of the so called progressive party. Do you endorse having negroes in the highest councils of your party or in sending them to your national conventions to select the candidates for president for whom the white men of this country are to vote?

Ah; but they say; "we have cut the negro out in the South." Isn't the same parties now in the lead that were in the lead before? Certainly. Well, I submit this question: Suppose your suit of clothes is worn thread bare, and you rip it up, cut it in a different style and make it over again, does that make the cloth any better? Certainly not.

Neither is the great deserter, Roosevelt, any better as progressive than he was when he was knocking out the Lilly White republicans of Alabama, or when he was seeking the republican nomination at Chicago in which convention sat hundreds of southern negroes whom he now says are unfit associates for white people: A very sudden change it seems to me. Can you not see the purfidy and deception of the man? He wanted to run for president; he tried to get the republican nomination by purchase of negro votes, or in what ever way he could secure it; having been defeated by the negro vote of the south, which section sent up a majority of the negro delegates, he repudiates the very thing which several years ago he endorsed and helped to build up. Now, like a whipped child, he comes to you whining and playing the baby act and saying "we're going to build up a white party in the south."

Yes, Why did he not help us build a white party when we were enthusiastic and when there was hope of success? He is merely playing the demagogue in order to try to catch a few white votes in the south, for he knows that the negro has been disfranchised and the few that can vote are going to cast their lot with Taft. He wants to coddle the whites in order to get them in his toils and then he will desert them as he has done all his other friends whom he could not drive—Taft, Bellamy Storer, Harriman, Penrose and many others.

Now to my progressive friends: You need not try to make your suit over; if will never stand the change; the cloth is too badly worn; its threadbare, shoddy and weak.

I wish to say in conclusion that I started out to make a clean campaign, but regret to say that I have not been treated right. If you will go back to the last issue of the Union prior to the republican primary you will see some six or eight letters written against me that were unbecoming to any gentleman; that scheme was fallen upon to raise as much prejudice as possible so as to get a big turn out at the primary.

Please, Mr. Editor, excuse so long a letter.

With due respect to all, I am,
Yours for the right,
Moses Killgore.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

PUTS OUT FULL COUNTY TICKET

According to an official call made by Pope M. Long, Chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, the true blue republicans of Chilton County met in convention last Saturday at Maplesville and nominated a full county ticket to be voted for at the coming November election. This makes the fourth ticket nominated in this county for county officers, all of which forcasts a vigorous campaign within the next thirty days.

The call, so we are informed, was made in regular order and was for the principal purpose of naming an executive committee to take the place of the old committee which was dissolved by reason of having gone into the Progressive, or Bull Moose, party. However, the convention decided that since the nominees of the republican primary in May had practically repudiated their nominations and accepted nominations from a Mass Convention of two hundred or more Progressives, the convention would nominate a full ticket of real, sure enough republicans to be placed under the emblem of the Vulcan (the emblem of the Taft republicans) on the ticket to be furnished for the election in November.

Mr. Ralph Calloway of Maplesville was selected both as temporary and permanent chairman of the convention, and Mr. J. W. G. Kicker of Mountain Creek was made Secretary. There were, we understand, forty or more delegates in attendance upon the convention, every beat but two being represented. Of course the convention took a rap or two at the democrats; they would not feel as if they had been in convention if this was not done. In fact that's the principal stock in trade of a republican county convention—to villify the democratic party. They passed a number of resolutions and other curious things and selected a ticket as follows:

For Tax Assessor, A. J. Glasscock of Jemison.

For Tax Collector, Ralph Calloway of Maplesville.

For Treasurer, J. W. G. Kicker of Mountain Creek.

For Superintendent of Education, Thos Bosworth of Thorsby.

For Commissioner from 3rd District, C. A. Keen.

For Commissioner from 4th District, J. J. McDowell.

For Coroner, J. Matt Mahan. of Clanton.

For Constable, Clanton precinct, John Baker.

The new executive committee is composed of nineteen gentlemen, whose names we did not secure; however, Mr. Sam W. Collins of Thorsby is Chairman and Joseph Calloway of Clanton is Secretary.

It comes to the Press that Mr. Collins, the newly elected Chairman, put Mr. Calloway in nomination for Tax Collector, and Mr. Calloway declined in favor of Mr. Kicker, who is now running on the Republican ticket.

The new Vulcan party has two tickets in the field, one headed by Mr. Kicker and the other by Mr. Calloway. Which one will get the support of the Republican party remains to be seen.

ly representative, coming as it does from every section of the county, and composed of men who have all their lives resided in Chilton county, and, are therefore, well known throughout the county; but that they have a hard hill to climb everyone knows—even as hard and as steep a hill as the progressives will have, and their's is an altogether forlorn hope.

Well, the more the merrier; it serves one useful purpose at least; it will make all classes and conditions of men take an interest in the political life of the county, and when that is accomplished the democracy of the county has nothing to fear. Let the republicans run if they want to run—it may do them good in that they'll inflate their lungs somewhat by running, but, as to the matter of getting votes—well, that's another question.

GOOD ROADS DELEGATES

APPOINTMENTS BY PROBATE JUDGE AND MR. GULLEDGE

The Alabama Good Roads Association, which is to meet in Birmingham on October 8th. 9th and 10th, will, perhaps, be the largest and most enthusiastic gathering of good roads advocates ever assembled in the South. Aside from the many subjects to be discussed at the meeting, Senator Bankhead will deliver an address upon "Government Aid for Roads;" Senator Johnston will also make an address appropriate to the occasion; Hon. Oscar W. Underwood and others prominent in the political and financial world will be present and address the convention. Every delegate appointed should, if possible, make it a point to be present. It would be extremely appropriate for Chilton county delegates to attend, since at this meeting they will hear the gospel of "Road building, and how to do it," meaning, of course, the manner of securing the funds to finance such a movement. Chilton is woefully behind in this matter and our delegates would do well to listen to a little of the pure, unadulterated gospel of road building by bond issue.

The following delegates were appointed by Judge Deason:

Messrs. J. M. Robinson, C. D. Retherford, W. J. Lambert, J. M. Parrish, J. L. Lansford, W. L. Popwell, E. J. Hayes, W. A. Reynolds, John B. Moore, Thos. Bosworth, W. Hamp Foshee, Jr., T. G. Milling, Lee Ousley, H. B. Oliver, Judson Strock, E. H. Mims, E. M. Pinckard, Geo. W. Foshee, J. P. Bearden, Jno. Edwards, J. C. Vensey, W. T. Mahan, W. H. Shaw.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge, President of Chilton County Good Roads Association has appointed the following delegates:

Messrs. E. L. Thornton, W. C. Harris, W. G. Davis, Dr. B. J. Baldwin, Moses Robinson, J. P. Lewis, W. C. Robinson, J. O. Barrett, E. B. Deason, L. H. Reynolus, Frank Crichton, F. M. Wood, Jas. Roberts, J. B. Downs, J. D. Sims, W. H. Mahan, Jno Parnell, J. Bice, C. F. Peterson, G. C. Michjeson, W. H. Shaw, W. A. Reynolds, W. E. Thomas, S. A. Curry, D. W. Killingsworth, Wm Walker Enoch Hayes, J. N. Parnell, W. C. Dyer, W. O. Perry, T. G. Milling, Jno. Rider.

Surely out of the above named delegation Chilton should have a goodly representation. The State Fair will "be on" during the meeting of the Good Roads Association, so that delegates may enjoy both at once and the same time.

MISSING PACKAGE OF MONEY FOUND

CURRENCY TAKEN FROM EXPRESS SHIPMENT PICKED UP IN REAR OF BANK.

ARREST OF THIEF EXPECTED

Telephone Message Received Last Week Notified Officials Who Thought It Practical Joke.

Pensacola, Fla.—As a result of the mysterious return to the First National Bank of the $55,000 stolen while being delivered to the Louisville and Nashville pay car at Flomaton, several days ago, a conference was held between officials of the bank and private detectives and special agents investigating the robbery.

At a late hour it was stated that an arrest was momentarily expected.

The package containing the money was in the original wrapping as made up by the bank employes, it is said, and was enclosed in a newspaper.

The package was found at an early hour at the rear of the bank by the negro janitor of the place.

A telephone message received at the bank last week, but which it was unheeded under the belief that it was from a practical joker, indicates that the valuable package was placed in the rear of the bank building that night by the thief. The bank officials reassert their confidence that the package containing the $55,000 was delivered intact to the Southern Express agency here Wednesday forenoon of last week. When delivery was made to the Louisville and Nashville pay car that day at Flomaton the currency, which represented the railroad's monthly pay roll for that district, was missing and in its stead were found slips of paper cut from magazines.

Nat Thomas, the old negro janitor at the bank, when he came to clean up discovered the package of currency. It was wrapped in a Pensacola paper of September 19. It was leaning against the iron grating of the rear door. There is a four foot wall in the rear of the building and the package easily might have been observed by any person who passed there.

One night last week, W. N. Roberts, an employe of the bank answered the telephone. He was told if he would look at the rear door "you will find what you have lost." Roberts said he paid little attention to the message as he thought it was another of the hundreds of jokes which friends had been playing on the bank employes since the disappearance of the money. Manager Peel of the telephone company and agents of the Burns detective agency which represents the bank are trying to ascertain from whom the mysterious telephone message came. That the robber was pursued so closely that his nerve failed him at the eleventh minute, and that he crept to the bank and deposited the money against the iron grating, is the belief generally expressed. Another theory is that thief was cornered by the detectives and on promise that he would return the money was assured against prosecution. This latter theory is not generally accepted. The bank claims to have taken unusual care in preparing the package of currency for shipment, having had five employes assist in counting and wrapping it. It is said then several of the employes in an automobile took the fortune to the Southern Express company's office here, where a receipt for the package was taken. A son of the president of the bank accompanied the package when it was delivered to the express officials.

TO INCREASE CIVIL SERVICE.

President Taft Will Add All Fourth Class Postmasters—Affects 36,038 People.

Washington.—It was practically decided that President Taft soon will issue an executive order placing all fourth class postmasters in the classified service. This order, relieving 36,038 postmasters from the uncertainty of political appointment will be one of the most comprehensive and far reaching, as affecting the civil service, ever issued.

That the President would take this step, his first act towards putting into practice his ofen expressed belief that all government officials below the grade of cabinet members should be relieved from the influence of politics and placed under the civil service, became practically certain, after a delegation of postmasters, returning from the annual convention of the association at Richmond, Va.

The visitors submitted a monster petition, signed by about 30,000 postmasters, asking that they be placed in the classified service.

After discussing the matter briefly with the delegation, President Taft referred the executive committee to the attorney general. Later the committee [illegible]

COULDN'T HAVE DONE BETTER

Marriage Arrangement Seemed Something of a Bargain, but It Turned Out Happily.

George A. Birmingham, the widely known writer, says there is no country in the world where marriage, at least in the peasant class, is more a matter of bargaining, and yet shows a higher average of stability and content than Ireland. Sometimes the man has never seen the woman before they are brought together, the precise number of pounds, sows, or pigs to be handed over having been by that time settled.

This is illustrated in personal recollections just published by an Irish woman. She was visiting with an aunt a cottage in the neighborhood, and admired a fine mahogany chest of drawers.

"'Twas for that I was married," said the mistress of the cottage. A young farmer had also seen and admired. A bargain was struck. There was no money, but the bride was to have a couple of sheep, a yearling bullock and the chest. The prudent young man measured it, and then turned and asked:

"An' which o' thim little girls is it?"

She was the oldest unmarried—"nixt the doore," as the phrase was. "An' so I wint," she said, "and was happy ever afterwards."—Tit-Bits.

SKIN TROUBLE ON LEG

616 W. Grace St., Richmond, Va.—"I had a running sore on my leg for from three to five years. It burst and blood came from it, then it got red around, and was as large as a dollar. It turned white in the middle of the sore, and then began to itch and bleed. After washing it would bleed for hours at a time. Some nights I did not sleep through the whole night. I spent eighty dollars on the sore and it didn't get well. I got worse and fell off to eighty-nine pounds. This went on for four years. I was told it could not get well. One of my friends said I ought to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, so I did. After I had used them one month the sore was gone and the itching stopped, and I have never had any trouble since. That was five years ago.

"I had a fever and all my hair came out. I shampooed with a lather of Cuticura Soap and then rubbed the Cuticura Ointment over the scalp and my hair came back and now it is long and glossy." (Signed) Mrs. John Thomas, Mar. 12, 1912.

Tea's Conquest of Rome.

Of all the conquerors that have come to Rome no one has gained such a complete victory as tea has won in the Italian capital. Twenty years ago the British and American tourists who came to Rome were catered to in the matter of tea in a rather shamefaced manner in the strangers' quarter near the Piazza di Spagna, and "English Tea Rooms" was the legend to be seen in a few windows hard by Cook & Sons' offices.

Nowadays the palm lounges of the Grand and the Excelsio hotels at tea time are two of the sights of Rome, for all Roman society drinks tea abroad in the afternoons, and there are as many uniforms at 5 o'clock in the big hotels as there are at sundown on band days on the Pincan hill. All the big pastry cooks' shops in the Corso and the other principal streets now have "Afternoon Tea" in gold letters on their plate glass windows.

Grasped His Opportunity.

A Baltimore clubman tells of two convicts who met for a moment alone in a corridor and took advantage of the fact for a hurried interview. Said one, "How long are you in for?"

"For life," responded the other. "And how long are you in for?"

"Twelve years," responded the other.

"Then," said the "lifer," cautiously extracting a letter from its hiding place, as he glanced fearfully around, "take this and mail it for me when you get out."

MENTALLY.

Peggy—You have been abroad, haven't you, Reggy?

Reggy—No; what made you think I had been abroad?

Peggy—Why, I heard father say you were 'way off.

Different.

Albert J. Beveridge said in Chicago of a corrupt boss:

"He's very virtuous—oh, very virtuous.

"A millionaire once went to him and said:

"'I want to get in the senate. Will you sell me your support?'

"'No, sir!' the boss answered, striking himself upon the chest. 'No sir! I'm a free-born American citizen and I'll sell my support to no man.'

"'But,' said the millionaire, blandly, as he drew out his checkbook and fountain pen, 'but, if you won't sell me your support, perhaps you'll rent it to me for the term of this campaign?'

"'Now you're talking,' said the boss in a mollified tone."

Poser for the Doctor.

Dr. Lewis White Allen, the Denver physiologist, was giving an informal talk on physiology upon the windy, sea-fronting porch of an Atlantic City hotel.

"Also," he said, "it has lately been found that the human body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed a girl in a blue and white blazer. "How much sulphur is there, then, in a girl's body?"

"Oh," said Dr. Allen, smiling, "the amount varies."

"And is that," asked the girl, "why some of us make so much better matches than others?"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Passengers Had to Work Their Way.

A drummer and a friend climbed aboard a ramshackle train in an isolated Missouri town. The train was a feeble, asthmatic piece of mechanism, and the Humane society should have prosecuted its owners for allowing it to run at all.

It finally came to a dead stop just in the edge of town, and after a long interval of trying to make it go the engineer stuck his head in the door and bawled:

"Say, you two gents'll have to get out, till I git it started!"

MADE THE WRONG QUOTATION

Nervous Swain Meant Well, but It Was Not Likely He Won Love of Fair Maiden.

He was diffident and universal in society's ways, but he was badly smitten with a reigning belle, and had nerved himself to woo and win. So he secured an introduction, and in due course went to pay his first call.

He thought it would help him out a bit if he took her some flowers, so he bought a superb bouquet for her. As he reached the house, however, he remembered that she had a splendid conservatory, and he tried to think of a way out of the difficulty. Suddenly he recollected the saying anent "taking coals to Newcastle," and determined to make use of it. But he was dreadfully nervous. He broke into a cold sweat as he rang the bell, and when the divinity appeared in the reception room he didn't know whether he stood on his head or on his heels.

"I—I—thought," he stammered, "that I would b—bring you a bouquet, b—but it's like casting p—p—pearls before swine!"

Inspiring Experience.

A lady who must certainly have been related to the late Mrs. Partington recently returned from a seventy-day tour of Europe.

DEMOCRATIC CLUBS

Montgomery, Ala., (Special.)—At a meeting of the Central Executive Committee of the Association of Wilson and Marshall Democratic Clubs of Alabama, held in Montgomery yesterday, C. B. Smith, Chairman, presiding, definite plans were formulated and the program announced for the State Convention of Democratic Clubs that will be held in the Auditorium of the Commercial Club, at Birmingham, Friday, October 4, 1912.

The objects in holding the Convention are that the various Democratic Clubs of the State may officially affiliate with the National Organization, that a better acquaintanceship and understanding may be reached by the Democrats of the various sections, that plans may be agreed upon by which a full Democratic vote may be polled at the November election, and the Republican vote reduced in the State, to sell at public outcry the handsome lot subscribed by the Birmingham Heights Land Company.

Chairman Tyler Goodwyn of the State Democratic Executive Committee has requested the various county chairmen to appoint a list of delegates to the Convention, equal to the representation to which the county is entitled in State Conventions.

Each Wilson and Marshall Club will elect as delegates to the Convention one delegate for every twenty-five members, and fraction over twelve. The following program is announced:

Convention called to order in auditorium of Birmingham Commercial Club at ten a.m.
Election of Permanent Officers.
Appointment of Committees.
Introduction of Resolution.
Introduction of Resolution.
Mescellaneous Business.
Address by Gov. Emmet O'Neal.
Adjournment.
Convention to reassemble at 7:30 p.m.
Report of Committees
Address and sale of lots subscribed to the Wilson and Marshall Campaign Fund by Birmingham Heights Land Co., by Judge W. W. Brandon.
Address by Hon. Oscar Underwood.
Address by Hon. J. Thomas Heflin.

The Convention promises to be largely and enthusiastically attended, and it is hoped that every delegate selected will be present to answer to his name.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to our many kind friends who ministered to us so tenderly during our recent bereavement. Though grief has bowed our hearts in deepest sorrow it is pleasant to recall that through it all we were sustained and fortified by the ties of friendship and love which, in such hours, are our strongest supports.

EDITOR CRICHTON STRICKEN

Clanton suffered a distinct shock on Saturday night when it was reported on the streets that Mr. Frank Crichton of the Union-Banner had been stricken with paralysis. For years Mr. Crichton had been editor and proprietor of the Banner, but when that paper was merged with the Union under the name "Union and Banner," he retired from active life and for some weeks enjoyed the rest which he had so well earned; but when Mr. Crutcher resigned as manager of the Union and Banner, Mr. Crichton being the largest stockholder, again assumed active charge. Since then he has doubtless overtaxed his strength with the result that today he is confined to his room and may, perhaps, suffer long confinement. Mr. Crichton's misfortune will be a distinct loss to the newspaper fraternity of Alabama with which he has been so long and prominently identified.

Bids Wanted—State Aid Road.

Bids will be received by the Court of County Commissioners at the Court House at Clanton until 12 o'clock noon, September 23rd, 1912, for grading, draining and surfacing with gravel approximately 6 miles of State aid road.

Certified check for $400.00 required with each bid.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

W. S. KELLER,
State Highway Engineer.

On account of the inability of Mr. Keller to reach Clanton, and because of the delay in the survey of the proposed road, bids will be received up to and inclusive of October 11th, 1912, at noon.

Mr. Joe Gray happened to a rather serious accident last Saturday night while riding his favorite horse. For some reason the horse became frightened and plunged madly down the street. Mr. Gray seeing that it was practically impossible to check him, decided to let him run till exhausted. In crossing the pavement near the court house the horse slipped and fell throwing Mr. Gray violently to the ground and rolling over him. Mr. Gray takes his bruises like a veteran and says he is satisfied with the trip if the horse is.

POSTPONEMENT

On account of the court room being occupied on tomorrow (Friday) with the habeas corpus trial of Ed Martin, which will probably require several days, the delivery of medals to old soldiers is hereby postponed until Thursday, the third day of October. Senator Curry, the orator of the day, is engaged in the Martin trial, so we would be deprived of the pleasure of his company should the meeting be held at the time heretofore specified.

The old soldiers will hold their annual meeting on Thursday, Oct. 3, so we think this the most appropriate day for the delivery of the medals. All those interested, and the general public are respectfully requested to be governed accordingly.

The ailments of women include symptoms of heart trouble known as palpitation of the heart. The palpitation is so violent at times as to be really painful and leads the patient to fear she has heart disease. Ninety per cent of such cases are not heart disease at all but only a symptom of a liver disorder which has affected the normal action of the heart, and on applying the proper remedies the unusual throbbing ceases. The stomach and digestion need strengthening and the depressing effect of these disorders on the female organism must be corrected. For the latter purpose there is no more effective remedy to be found anywhere than

TAXING COAT OFF POOR MAN'S BACK

Concrete Illustrations of What Protective Tariff Really Means.

CAUSE WORKERS TO THINK.

Iniquities of the Payne-Aldrich Act, Taft's "Best Law Ever," Strikingly Told In Figures.

Concrete examples of how a protective tariff operates are causing the workingman, the "poor man," to do a lot of thinking nowadays. He is beginning to understand whether it is not about time to call a halt on the Republican practice of taxing the coat off his back and threatening him with the loss of his shirt and his socks if he does not submit.

All through the present tariff law, passed by a Republican congress and indorsed by a Republican president as THE BEST TARIFF BILL EVER PASSED, are to be found discriminations, the higher duty on the cheaper article, the lower duty on the dearer article, thus placing on the shoulders of those least able to bear it the greater burden of the protective system. Here are some illustrations:

The cheapest wool blankets bear a duty of 165.42 per cent; the dearest, 104.55 per cent.

Flannels, not more than 40 cents a pound, are taxed at 143.67 per cent; over 70 cents a pound, 76.37 per cent.

Wool plushes, cheapest, 141.75 per cent; dearest, 95.33 per cent.

Knit fabrics, cheapest, 141 per cent; dearest, 95.53 per cent.

Stockings, worth from $1 to $1.50 a dozen, 76.37 per cent; from $2 to $3, 59 per cent.

Hats and bonnets, worth not over $5 a dozen, 62 per cent; over $20 a dozen, 35 per cent.

Carpets, highest priced, 50 per cent; that used for mats and rugs, 126.88 per cent.

Women's gloves, unlined, 49 per cent; lined, 34 per cent; longest gloves, unlined, 42 per cent; lined, 29 per cent.

Men's gloves, worth less than $3 a dozen, 66.28 per cent; costliest gloves, 14.45 per cent; leather, unlined, 44.58 per cent; lined, 29.50 per cent.

Buckles, cheapest, 77.48 per cent; dearest, 26.33 per cent.

Uncut diamonds bear a 10 per cent duty; imitation diamonds, 20 per cent.

The humble firecracker bears a 97.02 per cent duty, while elaborate fireworks bear but 70 per cent.

Matting, smaller and cheaper grades, 43 per cent; costlier, 24 per cent.

Watch movements, seven jewels, 66.02 per cent; 11 jewels, 40.41 per cent; 17 jewels, 34.45 per cent.

Underwear, cheapest, 56.90 per cent; dearest, 50 per cent.

Dress goods of wool, cheapest, 105.42 per cent; dearest, 94.13 per cent.

Velvets, cheapest, 105.22 per cent; dearest, 49.55 per cent.

Silk handkerchiefs, cheapest, 77.44 per cent; dearest, 59 per cent.

Scissors, worth 50 cents a dozen, 52.21 per cent; worth $1.75 a dozen, 46 per cent.

Table knives, fancy grades, 57.40 per cent; bone handled, 69.43 per cent.

Butcher knives, best grades, 52.10 per cent; cheapest grades, 93.55 per cent.

Files, smallest, 81.29 per cent, longest, 36.81 per cent.

Shotguns, worth from $5 to $10, 47.67 per cent; worth over $10, 45.46 per cent.

These are only a part of the discriminations, gleaned from a swift conning of some of the schedules. Reduced to simplest terms, they mean that the poor man is taxed higher than the rich man.

The Railroad: The Civilizer

With one exception, the railroad is the greatest known civilizer.

As fast as the pioneer's rifle cleared a path through savagery for the march of civilization, railroad builders risked their all that rails might be laid to bring trains loaded with implements for development.

Fertility of the soil is of negligible value until the panting engine has breathed upon the soil the steam of modern commerce. Then waste places are converted into wealth producers; safe and rapid transportation is afforded; the time required to transact business is reduced to the minimum, and the cause of educational and social betterment is advanced.

This is essential for both the country and the railroad. Without fertile soil the people cannot accomplish much, and unless the people take advantage of the opportunity offered to them by the railroad and make the soil produce, the railroad cannot operate.

The interests of the people and the interests of the railroad are therefore identical. The successful agricultural and commercial development of every community must be marked by co-operation between the people and the railroad.

The Louisville and Nashville is fully aware of these self-evident truths; it is looking to serve the people, to the end that both the people and the L. & N. may prosper.

SYNOPSIS.

Major Lawrence, son of Judge Lawrence of Virginia, whose wife was a Lee, is sent on a perilous mission by Gen. Washington, just after the winter at Valley Forge. Disguised in a British uniform Lawrence arrives within the enemy's lines. The Major attends a great fete and saves the "Lady of the Blended Rose" from mob. He later meets the girl at a brilliant ball. Trouble is started over a waltz, and Lawrence is urged by his partner, Mistress Mortimer (The Lady of the Blended Rose), to make his escape.

CHAPTER IV. (Continued).

How I kept to the measure I cannot imagine, for, in an instant, all my house of cards crumbled into nothingness. She knew me, this blue-eyed girl; knew me, and sought to aid my mission, this daughter of a loyalist, this lady of the Blended Rose. It was inconceivable, and yet a fact—my name had been whispered by her lips.

Suddenly she looked up laughing, as though to make others feel that we conversed lightly. We passed Grant, even as I held my breath, almost afraid to venture with words. Yet they would not be restrained.

"You certainly startled me; how do you know this? Surely we have never met before?"

"I refuse to be questioned, sir; it means nothing how I know—the fact that I do should be sufficient."

"Must Mistress Claire—"

"Rather Mistress Mortimer."

"Yet the captain called you Claire."

"And we were children together—you can scarcely claim such familiarity."

"I warrant you can name me."

"Allen, is it not, sir?"

What was it the witch did not know! This was no guess work, surely, and yet how could her strange knowledge be accounted for? Sweet as the face was, greatly as it had attracted me, there was nothing to awaken a throb of memory. Surely I could never have seen her before, and forgotten; that would have been impossible. The music ceased, leaving us at the farther extremity of the hall.

"And now you will go?" she questioned eagerly.

"You mean, leave here?"

"Yes; you said once tonight, that but for me you would be riding yonder. I realized all you meant, and you must not remain. The guard lines are slack tonight, and you can get through, but if you wait until tomorrow it may be too late. Believe me, I am your friend, a friend of your cause."

"I do believe you; I could not connect you with deceit, but I am bewildered at this sudden exposure. Does Captain Grant also suspect my identity?"

"I think not—not yet, at least, for if he did you would be under arrest. But there are others here who would recognize you just as I have. There is no mystery about it. I was in Philadelphia when the Continental troops were here, and you were pointed out to me then. No, we have never met, yet I was sure I recognized you this afternoon."

"I was pointed out to you by whom?"

"My brother—my twin brother on the staff of General Lee."

"Did you not inform me your family were loyalists?"

"Yes; it is true," earnestly, her foot tapping the floor, as though annoyed at such persistent questioning. "I have a father and brother in the king's service—but one is a renegade, and I—I—"

"You are what?"

"I am merely a woman, sir, unable to determine whether to finally become loyalist or rebel."

I looked gravely into her eyes until

"If I Leave You Now as You Request I Must First Have Promise of Welcome Again."

they fell, veiling their revelation of pride behind long lashes.

"Mistress Mortimer," I murmured, bending so close to her pink ear, I felt the soft touch of her hair on my lips, "you disarmie me" endeavoring to lighten my puzzled air. "But if I leave you now as you request, I must first have promise of welcome again."

"No; we are coming back to Philadelphia victors, and soon. I am not afraid to tell you. I have learned much today, and go back to report to Washington that the exchange of British commanders means the early evacuation of the city. When we meet again you will not be a lady of the Blended Rose, nor will I be wearing this uniform."

Her eyes sparkled brightly into mine, then dropped demurely.

"I—I rather like the colors you are wearing now, and am sure this dress is most becoming. I—I have a passion for masquerade."

"I recognize that, but have already discovered where I can read the truth beyond the masque—what is occurring now?"

She turned to look, attracted as I had been by the change and bustle about us. A few feet from where we stood conversing, large folding doors, previously concealed by draperies, were suddenly flung wide open, revealing a magnificent dining hall. Dazzled by the magnificent spectacle, I turned to my companion, unable to resist temptation. She must have instantly read the purpose in my face, for she grasped my sleeve.

"No; you must not think of remaining a moment longer. There will be a seat reserved for me, and Captain Grant is coming this way now. Something is wrong, I am sure; I have no time to explain, but promise me you will leave here at once—at once."

Her eyes, her words, were so insistent I could not refuse, although as I glanced about I felt convinced there was no danger in this assemblage, not a familiar face meeting mine. At the instant Grant came up, elbowing his way through the press, and staring insolently into my eyes, even as he bowed politely to the lady beside me.

"At least this is my privilege," he insisted, "unless there be another previous engagement of which I am ignorant."

"Oh, no," and she rested her hands on the green sleeve, smiling from his face into mine. "We were waiting for you to come. Goodnight, Lieutenant Fortesque."

They had taken a step or two, when Grant halted, holding her arm tightly as he glanced back to where I stood.

"Would Lieutenant Fortesque spare me a moment after I have found the lady a seat?" he questioned politely.

"Gladly, if you do not keep me waiting too long."

"Then there will be no delay. Shall we say the parlor below?"

I bowed, conscious of the mute appeal in the lady's face, yet with no excuse for refusal.

"As well there as anywhere, sir."

Once again we bowed with all the punctilious ceremony of mutual dislike, and he whispered something into her ear as they disappeared in the stream of people. My cheeks burned with indignation at his cool insolence. What could it mean? Was he merely seeking a quarrel? or was there something else concealed behind this request? In either case I knew not how to act, and yet felt no inclination to avoid the meeting. Studying over the situation I pushed my way through the crowd across the floor of the ballroom. There were a few people still lingering on the stairs, but, except for the servants, the parlors below were deserted. I walked the length of one of the great rooms, and halted in front of a fireplace to await Grant's coming. I was eager to have this affair settled, and be off. I comprehended now the risk I had assumed by remaining so long, and began to feel the cords of entanglement drawing about me. There was a door opposite where I stood, and, staring toward it, I saw it open slightly, and, back in the darkness, the beckoning of a hand. Startled, yet realising that it must mean me, I stepped closer, gripping the hilt of my sword, half suspecting treachery.

"Quick," and I recognized the deep contralto of the voice. "Don't stop to question; there is not a moment to lose."

CHAPTER V.

The Threat of Swords.

Stepping from the glare of those gleaming parlor lights into the gloom of that narrow passage, blinded me for the instant, yet a moment later, I became aware of the distant glimmer of a candle, the faint reflection revealing the girl's face.

"Please do not talk; do not ask anything—yet," she urged hurriedly, noiselessly closing the door at my back, and as instantly gripping my sleeve. Her breath came quickly; her voice trembled from suppressed excitement. "Come with me beyond the light yonder."

I followed her guidance, bewildered, yet having fully confidence the reason for this mysterious appointment must be fully justified. The passage curved slightly, terminating at a closed door. Scores of the candle reached the hall, yet it was now comparatively dark. [illegible] the door [illegible] I could trace the [illegible]

"You are causing me to run away from Grant," I protested blindly. "You are making me appear afraid to meet him."

"No, it is not that," swiftly. "He was not coming to you personally at all—you were to be arrested?"

"What! He knew me then?"

"I am not sure—some one did, and mentioned his suspicions. Captain Grant was glad enough of an excuse, no doubt, but he," the soft voice faltering, "he made a mistake in twitting me for being friendly toward you."

"And you came to warn, to save me!" I exclaimed, pressing her hand.

"That was nothing; I could do no less. I am only glad I knew the way."

"You mean how you might reach me first?"

"Yes; it came to me in a flash when he first left me alone, only I was not certain in which parlor you would be waiting. I ran through the kitchen and down the back stairs; I helped the officers plan their decorations, and in that way learned of this private passage beneath the stairs. It was easy, but—oh, listen! they are in there now!"

We could hear voices through the intervening wall clearly enough to even distinguish words, as the speakers exercised little restraint. I felt the girl's slender figure press against me in the narrow space where we stood, and I clung to her hand, both remaining motionless and silent.

"That fellow has run, Grant," boomed some one hoarsely, "either afraid, or else what you say he is. See here, boy, did you see anyone in here lately in scarlet jacket?"

"I don' just 'member, sah," answered a negro, hesitatingly. "I was busy over dar' cleanin' de sideboa'd."

"Well, he's not here now, that's certain," broke in Grant impatiently, "and we've been in all the parlors? What next, MacHugh?"

"Try to head him off before he can get out of the city, of course. That's his game, probably. Osborne, have Carter come here at once. Why didn't you nab the fellow upstairs, Captain? Fool play that, sending him down here."

"I didn't wish to create a row in the ball-room; he was with Claire Mortimer—"

"Oh, I see," laughing coarsely. "Something besides military duty involved, eh?"

"I'll trouble you to be a trifle more careful, MacHugh," Grant said stiffly. "The fellow did her a small service in the afternoon, and she couldn't refuse dancing with him, as he was in uniform, and apparently all right. I advise you to drop that part of the affair. Here's Carter now."

I could hear the click of the newcomer's spurs as he crossed the room. MacHugh chuckled.

"Tender heart it just the same, I see; however we'll pass the [illegible] Carter, have [illegible] Fortesque [illegible] collar. Almost [illegible] Fortesque at the [illegible] down [illegible]

"Yes, I'll go, at once. But I take away with me a memory which will never permit me to be satisfied until we meet again. We have been together so short a time—"

"Had it been longer," she interrupted, "you would know me better, and care less, perhaps. I am a sham; a cheat," a trifle of bitterness in the tone. "You will learn all that some day, and laugh at yourself. Oh, I know you will; so not another word, sir. I am going; then, perhaps, you will."

There was a slight pressure of her fingers, and she had vanished so quickly I could only stare blindly along the deserted passage. Yet, an instant later, the peril of my predicament flashed back upon my mind, and I knew the immediate necessity for action. What her strange words might mean could not be interpreted; I made no attempt to comprehend. Now I must [illegible] escape, and learn the truth later. I opened the door [illegible] and stepped [illegible] every [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

I heard him telling about it an hour ago."

"Is that so? Where'd they go?"

"Covered everything, I judge, from Callowhill to the Lower Battery. Watts said he asked questions of everybody they met, but he didn't take any notes. He liked the fellow, but thought he was mighty inquisitive. Where is he now, sir?"

"The devil knows, I don't, and you'll have to find out. He'll head northwest likely; he'll never try to cross the river here. How many men have you?"

"Twenty."

"Scatter them to every north post. The fellow had no horse, and your troopers can easily get ahead of him. Hurry up now." Carter departed with click of steel, and MacHugh evidently turned to his companion.

"We'll catch the lad all right, Grant. Some of those outposts will nab him before daylight. No use our waiting around here; let's go back upstairs."

The girl's nervous grasp on my arm tightened, her lips pressed close to my ear.

"I—I must get back to my place at the table," she whispered. "Surely you know what to do; this is a rear door; there are stables a hundred feet away; you must get a horse, and ride fast—you—you will do this!"

"Yes, of course—but how can I thank you?"

"Don't try; don't ever even think of it again. I hardly know what mad impulse sent me here. Now I have but one thought—to hurry you away, and get safely back myself—you will go?"

"Yes—but—"

"Not now! there is no time for explanation, promises, anything. You heard what they said; every avenue of escape will be blocked within an hour. If you go at once you can outride them—please, please go!"

She held out her hand, and I grasped it warmly, unable longer to war against the pitiful appeal in her voice.

"If You Go at Once You Can Outride Them. Please, Please Go!"

"Yes, I'll go, at once. But I take away with me a memory which will never permit me to be satisfied until we meet again. We have been together so short a time—"

"Had it been longer," she interrupted, "you would know me better, and care less, perhaps. I am a sham; a cheat," a trifle of bitterness in the tone. "You will learn all that some day, and laugh at yourself. Oh, I know you will; so not another word, sir. I am going; then, perhaps, you will."

There was a guard [illegible] before the stable door—a Gre[illegible] from the outline of his hat—[illegible] ers, a little group, were sitting [illegible] grass a dozen feet away. If they [illegible] not been already warned I might [illegible] a horse by boldness, but the po[illegible] ity was that here was where [illegible] had mounted his squad, and [illegible] merely walk forward into a t[illegible] had better chance the possibility [illegible] some visitor had left a horse [illegible] front, or to one of the stands. As I straigh[illegible] up, determined upon discovering [illegible] empty saddle if possible, the fig[illegible] a man advanced toward me.

"Hold on there! hold on!" he [illegible] manded shortly. "Who are you? [illegible] the devil are you skulking about [illegible] here for?"

It was Grant beyond a doub[illegible] would recognize the peculiar [illegible] that voice in a thousand. He h[illegible] gone upstairs then; had not re[illegible] the lady in the dining-room. "So I have discovered you, h[illegible] Why did you fail to keep our a[illegible] ment within?"

He drew up sharply with an [illegible] peering at me through the dar[illegible] wildered by my speech.

"Mistake you? No; I'd know [illegible] hell," he burst forth, anger make[illegible] voice tremble. "I called you a s[illegible] you are one, you sneaking [illegible] You never waited for me in t[illegible] lor; if you had you'd now be u[illegible] rest."

"Oh, so that was the plan?"

"Yes, that was it, Mister Lieut[illegible] Fortesque."

"Well, Grant," I said sternly, [illegible] got just one answer to make you [illegible] can call your guard, or you can [illegible] it out with me here. Whichever [illegible] choose will depend upon whether [illegible] are a man, or a cur." I took a [illegible] nearer, watching him as best I [illegible] in the dark. A LITTLE SMASH-UP

CARS COLLIDE ON SIDE TRACK.

Clanton's phenomenal building boom in the past few weeks was responsible for a vexatious little wreck on the L. & N. siding near the depot Monday. Five cars of brick were being placed on a siding to be unloaded; the cars were cut loose with a brakeman on top to stop the cars at the proper place, but for some reason the brake failed to work and the heavily loaded cars crashed into a freight train standing on the same track. The "cow-catcher" of the engine was badly splintered and the entire train knocked back some twenty or thirty feet by the impact; one of the cars was badly damaged and one truck thrown from the track. Aside from the delay however, there was no great damage done.

AN APPRECIATED COMPLIMENT

The Press man has had several gentlemen to stop him on the sreets recently and pay the paper a compliment on its report of the Martin trial.

One gentleman said "We are all more or less interested in the trial and as we could not attend court and hear the testimony in person we had to depend on the papers to give it to us. Yours is the only paper I have seen which published the proceedings in full, and from what I have heard it was distinctly impartial and complete. I have had to lend my paper to several parties who wanted to read the proceedings, they are not subscribers to the paper, but, when they want the news they know where to look for it." Such remarks make the world look lots brighter to us; we appreciate them because we are trying to give the news and because we want to give it in an impartial way. When the general public recognize this fact and tell us about it there's reason to be proud. And, by the way, the gentleman who said most of these things, while a good friend to the Press, is not a democrat, but one who has consistently voted against democracy for a number of years; yet he is too broad to think that no good can come out of Nazareth or that a democratic sheet cannot occasionally tell the truth.

ormer Congressman Bowie Continues to Dissect Erroneous and Misleading Statements by Ex-Gov. Comer in Greenville Speech owie Demonstrates Conclusively That Many Freight Rates Voluntarily Charged by L. & N. are Lower Than Statutory Rates On Southern Railway Dictated and Approved by Mr. Comer---Long List of Articles, with Comparative Rates, Shown.

mer Governor Comer, in his speech at Greenadmits that the average rate of freight charg- the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in Ala- is lower than the average rate of freight d by all railroads in the State of Georgia. claims, however, that the statement is misleadand is due solely to the fact that the Louisville shville gave an extraordinarily low rate in the ingham District on such articles as sand, lime iron ore, coal, iron and steel. In order that I do him no injustice, I quote that paragraph of speech in full:

r. Milton Smith states that his average rate eight as charged in Alabama is lower than it is Georgia. This has a trace of truth, but is misding. In the Birmingham District the L. & N. 75 per cent of its business and hauls more tonge in the Birmingham District than in several ns combined. This tonnage is largely sand, lime iron ore, iron and steel, and all the rates are its making, and they are profitable to it or it ld not make them. There has never been any tion. But what has the price at which the L. & road hauls sand, lime rock, ore and coal to the ingham furnaces got to do with the charges it es to the farmers, manufacturers, the consumand producers of Alabama? What bearing has freight service as rendered the big furnace panies of North Alabama, got to do with the on cotton and cotton seed meal, fertilizer, lumagricultural implements, etc., to the Butler farmers at Greenville? And why should ama be a party to an overcharge to its two and arter million farmers, producers and consumby any public corporation, because some satisry service has been rendered some other line dustry in the state?"

COMER SERIOUSLY IN ERROR.

show that Mr. Comer is seriously in error in contention which he makes, and that the policy the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has not been ical, either to the farmer or to the manufacturer, to the legitimate business interests, I will now out the rates on a number of articles, particuly affecting the interest and welfare of the far, the producer and the consumer and I will com- the rates of the Louisville & Nashville with statutory rates of the Southern Railway, and I state that the rates of the Louisville & Nash- on the articles to which I refer were volunly established many years ago without the comon of any statute. They were established in ance of what was believed to be a sound pol- and what that company still believes to be d. I will further state that by the operation of Maximum Rate Act, the Louisville & Nashville prohibited from increasing these rates; whereas, the operation of the Maximum Rate Act and of Eight Group Acts, the Southern Railway is per- d by Legislation, sanctioned and approved by ernor Comer, to charge the higher rates stated. The rates quoted will be for distances of forty , this being about the average haul in Alabama; distances greater and less than forty miles show portionately the same difference. The letters L." mean "Carload"—"L. C. L." means Less carload." Unless otherwise specified the rates y in cents per one-hundred pounds. The letters D." mean "Knocked Down"—"S. U." means Up"—"N. O. Numerous other items could be added to the foregoing list on which the Louisville & Nashville rates are lower than the Southern. I repeat, the L. & N. rates are, considering all articles, not only lower than the Southern, but materially lower than any of its principal competitors in this state, and materially lower than the average of all rates in the states through which it operates.

It has always been the policy of the Louisville & Nashville to grant low rates wherever it was possible by so doing to generate a sufficiently large movement of traffic to justify it. The Louisville & Nashville has been keen to build up its business, not only by close attention and superior service, but by low rates.

—Quotes His Speech and Proves Comer Wrong.

As Governor Comer has referred to the speech which I made in Montgomery during the extra session of 1907, I deem it not out of place to make the following quotation from that speech, which completely states the case as it stands with reference to the Georgia rates:

"But I come to another plank in that platform, which I say they are not obeying, either in its letter or in its spirit; that provision of the platform that we shall have the Georgia rates. Now, I want to discuss that proposition with you, because I consider this whole proposition has centered around the question of the Georgia rates. The Georgia rates are lower than in Alabama on some things, and higher than the Alabama rates on other things, and if you gave the Georgia rates you would lower the Alabama rates on the things on which they are higher, and you would raise the Alabama rates on the things on which they are lower. That would be the Georgia rates, that would put us on an equality with them, but what do they propose? They propose out of five thousand or six thousand rates in both states to select 50 of them in which the Georgia rates are lower and reduce ours to that level, but they absolutely impose a bar against raising those rates in Alabama on articles where the Georgia rates are higher. That is what is proposed by this Legislature.

"The conclusive proof of this assertion is that simultaneously with the demand of Comer, of Alabama, for the Georgia rates, we heard the cry of Governor Smith, of Georgia, for the Alabama rates. Now, neither Comer, of Alabama, nor Smith, of Georgia, wanted what they asked for. Exactly what they did want was this: Comer wanted those Georgia rates which were lower than Alabama, and Smith wanted those Alabama rates which were lower than Georgia. And so the great railroad interests of the two states which had contributed more than any single factor to their growth and prosperity, were to be crushed between the upper and nether millstones of this monstrous proposition."

The whole point of Mr. Comer's insistence is that the rates which the Louisville and Nashville has made which are lower than those of its competitors, it shall never raise, but as to the rates which are higher than those of its competitors, it must reduce them, and not satisfied to reduce them to the level of its competitors, it must reduce them from 15 to 45 per cent below the level of its competitors on more than three-fourths of the articles affected by the legislation. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad does not believe, and did not believe, that the action of the Legislature in this respect was just, (1) because it did not afford it a reasonable return upon its investment, and (2) because it operated to an unjust and unlawful discrimination against it and in favor of its competitors.

Not Engaged in Politics.

The L. & N. is not engaged in any political question; it is not supporting or opposing any man for office; it is merely endeavoring to protect its property rights and the rights of its patrons, the people of Alabama, in the [illegible] of articles in the people of Alabama in the [illegible] state from its competitors. WHAT CLANTON NEEDS

NOW BOTTLED UP FROM OUTSIDE WORLD.

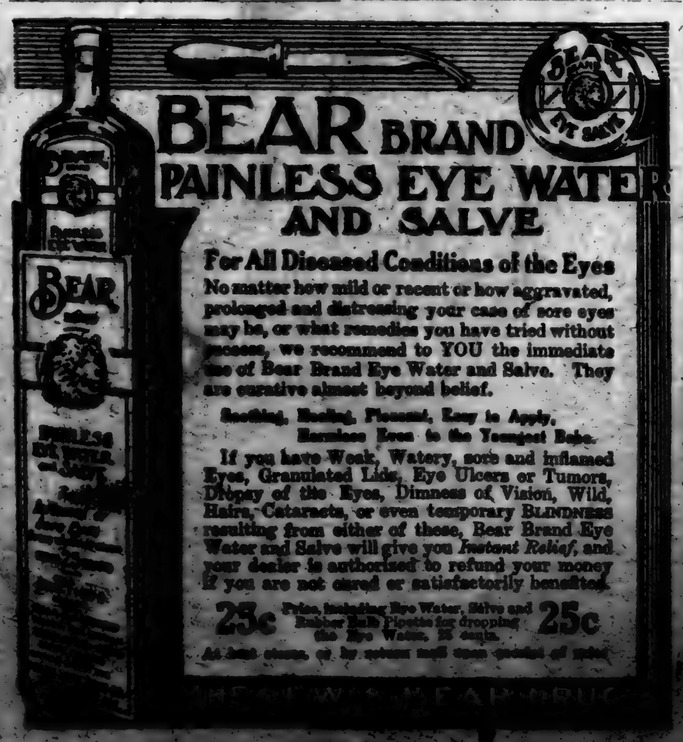
It would be a long, tedious, almost impossible, task to enumerate the many things which Clanton needs, but the recent action of the railroad makes it evident that we need one thing and need it badly. It is also almost certain that Clanton can get that one thing needful if she will go out after it. For some reasons Clantonites do not pull together; they do not seem to realize the truth of that old Roman maxim that in union there is strength. Never was a better opportunity presented to demonstrate its truth and at the same time accomplish something good for the town.

No one would be foolish enough to say that the railroad in a spirit of spite moved the night office from this place to Cooper, but the fact remains that we now have no night telegraphic communication with the outside world—we are, so to speak, "bottled up good and proper."

Last Friday orders came instructing two of the three operators here to report to Cooper on the following Sunday for duty; this order gave Mr. M. L. White, who works "trick" No. 1, preference as to whether he should go to Cooper and work eight hours a day or remain in Clanton and work twelve hours. Should he decide to go to Cooper, that would leave either Mr. Luckie or Mr. Denson here to work twelve hours, but in any event the night office will be closed so that after sunset Clanton will be cut off from the world in so far as telegraphic communication is concerned.

This makes a great difference in the commercial as well as the social life of a town. Clanton is too large and too important a place not to have a telegraph office divorced entirely from the railroad service.

Many times messages of vast importance are delayed because of the fact that the operator on duty is busy with railroad matter.



If Clanton would get together one time and pull together one time, there is little reason to doubt that the Western Union would open an up-town office of its own.

The telephone system is not the best in the world either; it is just as good as it can be considering the salary paid its employees, but the two being under the same control could easily be combined under one management to the betterment of the service and to the great advantage of Clanton as a whole.

As it now stands, we have no telegraph service at night and an extremely poor telephone service; with the two combined at a convenient point the advantages would be greatly multiplied and the inconveniences decreased.
